TO THE READER.

In preparing this History, I have availed myself of all the information I could gather—from whatever source—during a residence and ministry in Concord of more than thirty years. My attention was first directed to the subject of a history of the town, while collecting materials for a centennial discourse preached in November, 1830. Many of the facts embodied in this History were treasured up at the time of their occurrence; others have been carefully collected from the recitals of aged citizens and others, well acquainted with the affairs of the town, and from newspapers of the current period; but the greater part was derived from original records and documents in the office of the Town Clerk, the Secretary of State, or in the archives of the New-Hampshire Historical Society, and from choice family papers which have been generously placed in my hands. For the aid and encouragement I have had in prosecuting the work, I acknowledge my obligations to my fellow-citizens, for the liberal appropriation of three hundred dollars, in March, 1853, towards the publication of portions of “the original Proprietors’ and Town Records.” I am under especial obligations to the Committee, at that time appointed, viz.: Hon. Nathaniel B. Baker, Jonathan Eastman and Joseph B. Walker, Esqrs., for their counsel and cooperation; also, to his Honor the first Mayor, General Joseph Low, and the City Council, for appropriating the sum of one hundred and fifty dollars, to procure maps and engravings for the illustration of the work. I hereby express my particular obligations to all those who have communicated to me, verbally or in writing, information on various topics. Especially I am indebted to Richard Bradley and Nathan Stickney,* Esqrs., and General Robert Davis, for valuable information relative to the civil affairs of the town, with which they have long been intimately acquainted; to Capt. Benjamin Parker and Stephen C. Badger, Esq., two experienced surveyors, for the exact description they have given of localities and distances—to the latter of whom belongs the honor of the beautiful and accurate Map of the City, which accompanies this History. I am greatly obliged to Moody Kent, Esq., for an account of the ancient trees which are the ornament of

* Mr. Stickney deceased Oct. 29, 1855—an eminently useful, respected and honored citizen. See “List of Officers.”
our main village, and for many important facts respecting professional men who are deceased; to William Prescott, M. D., for his contributions to the chapter upon Physical History; to Jacob Hoyt and George Abbot, Esqrs., Mr. Simeon Abbot and Mr. Benjamin Rolfe, for the entertaining incidents and anecdotes they have furnished relative to ancient times; and to the gentlemen who have aided me in the difficult work of preparing the genealogy of families, whose names I have the honor to mention in that connection. The genealogy of the Eastman family was chiefly prepared by Rev. Daniel Lancaster, who also aided in preparing the account of lawyers, physicians and graduates. My acknowledgments are due to Hon. Chandler E. Potter, of Manchester, for friendly aid in furnishing me copies of original documents, and even more to a young lady of our own city, for results of her careful researches into our Indian history, and for her cheerful services in examining and copying ancient papers and records. I owe many thanks to George Kent, Esq., of Bangor, Me., for some entertaining reminiscences of ancient men, who have passed off the stage, but whose "words" and "works" live after them. As I am, personally, so are all the readers of this History, indebted to the individuals who have gratuitously furnished views of residences or portraits of the distinguished citizens that adorn the pages of the volume. The cost of all the engravings executed expressly for this History and presented for insertion in it, amounts to more than seven hundred dollars. I have the honor to acknowledge the liberal donation of James F. Baldwin, Esq., of Boston, of twelve hundred lithographic prints of the "Rumford House," in Woburn, Mass., and also an equal number of copper-plate portraits of "the Countess," lately deceased. Whatever value may be attached to the engraving in front of the title, must be accredited to ladies of the parish, at whose request and by whose generous subscription it was procured. This volume is said to be the largest and most costly original work ever issued from a New-Hampshire press. A discerning public need not be told to whom they are indebted for the superior style of typography in which the volume is presented to them. Last, but not least, the author is grateful to the compositors, for their patience and skill in deciphering much "bad copy."

In the arrangement and execution of the work, I have aimed at perspicuity, precision, impartiality and accuracy. That no errors will be found in it, would be almost presumptuous to expect. Some have already been detected, and marked as errata, which the reader is desired at once to correct. The work is arranged so as to correspond with the changes in the name and civil relations of the town, while the chronological order is observed. Each portion of the History is designed to be complete in itself. For example, the Indian History, the Proprietary History, the Bow Controversy and the Revolutionary Period, form each a distinct chapter—and so of the rest. It will also be perceived that in the several decennial periods I have given in each chapter, 1. The Civil History of the Town, authenticated by records; 2. Miscellaneous matters, and, 3. A list of town officers within the same period.
In preparing the index of names at the end of the volume, I have intended to put down every name mentioned in the body of the work, from the Indian History to the beginning of the Genealogical Section, p. 619, except those in the List of Officers. If a reader wishes to ascertain what office a particular person held in the town, he must examine the list pertaining to the period in which the person was engaged in the duties of civil life; or, if one wishes to find a particular family name, he must turn to the Genealogy, and examine it in its alphabetical order. So of Lawyers, Physicians and Graduates. The Table of Contents in the first part of the volume will exhibit the leading subjects of each chapter and section.

I have only to add, that as the preparation of the work has cost much labor, in addition to the duties of my profession, so it will afford me great pleasure, should it meet the reasonable expectations of my fellow-citizens; especially, should it enhance our estimate of the privileges and blessings derived from the original proprietors and settlers of the town, and attach us more strongly to the moral and religious principles and habits which distinguished them. Verily, "Our lines are fallen unto us in pleasant places; yea, we have a goodly heritage." Be it our aim, with the Divine blessing, to transmit it to future generations!

NATHANIEL BOUTON.

Concord, N. H., 1855.

Note. Upon a careful revision of the printed pages of this History, the author has discovered a number of errors—some of which it is very important to correct. They are all noted as "Errata," on the last page of the volume, before the Index, to which readers are respectfully requested to turn and make the necessary corrections. Should readers discover other errors, they are requested to make them known to the author. His chief fear is, that he may be censured for the omission of facts of which he had no means of knowledge.

In transcribing the Proprietors' Records, a few, mostly unimportant, mistakes occurred, which will also be found corrected on the last page. The certificate from Jonathan Eastman, Esq., Proprietors' Clerk, entitles the printed Records to authority, as legal evidence.
INTRODUCTION.

The author begs leave to introduce the History of Concord to his readers, by requesting their attention to the beautiful and accurate Map which accompanies it, and to observe the boundaries, prominent localities and objects there laid down, a brief explanation and description of which here follows.

Penacook was the ancient name of a tract of country extending along the Merrimack river about ten or twelve miles on both sides, from the Soucook, or perhaps Suncook, to the Contoocook river, but of undefined width from east to west. The name in ancient records and documents is variously spelled for example—Penni Cook, Pennicook, Pennecook, Pennacook, Peniscook, Penacook. The late John Farmer, Esq., uniformly wrote it Penacook, and as the name, thus spelled, is now incorporated into various public works of standard value, I have adopted the same orthography.

Concord, the modern name for the ancient Penacook, is at this time a city; the shire town of Merrimack County, and Capital of the State of New-Hampshire. It is situated near the centre of the State from east to west; about fifty miles from the Atlantic coast, and the same distance to the Connecticut river. Its latitude is 43° 12' north; longitude 71° 25' west from Washington city, and sixty-two miles north, 23° west of Boston. Its boundaries and extent, as laid down on the map, are as follows: Commencing at the north-west corner, thence north 75° east, on Boscawen, 4 miles and 91 rods to the south-east bound of Boscawen; thence, commencing at the south-west bound of Canterbury, on the east bank of the Merrimack river, north 72° east, 3 miles and 324 rods; thence, on Canterbury line south 18° east, 192 rods, to London line; thence, the same course on London line, 2 miles and 3 rods, to the ancient Bow pore; thence, south 45° east, 2 miles and 224 rods, to the Soucook river; thence, the middle of said river to its junction with the Merrimack; thence, following up the Merrimack river to the old Rumford line, about two miles and a half; thence on Bow, south 72° west, 4 miles and 134 rods; thence, on Bow north, 18° west, 328 rods; thence north, 17° west, on Hopkinson line, 9 miles and 251 rods, to Beach Hill road; thence north 161° west, 2 miles and 291 rods, to Contoocook river; thence north 15° west, 234 rods, to the first bound. More concisely, Concord is bounded north-west-erly by Boscawen and Canterbury; north-east by Loudon; south-east by Pembroke; south by Bow; south-west-erly by Hopkinson, and contains about 40,000 acres.

LOCALITIES, which are frequently referred to in the course of the History.

Names and description of Localities on the west side of Merrimack river.

1. Horse-hill, is the name of the territory included in School District No. 1, lying north-erly of Contoocook river; so called from the practice, in early times of the settlement, of turning young horses and cattle there to pas-ture, in spring and summer. Oliver Holt was the first settler there, in 1772.

2. Mast-yard, on the Contoocook river, about a mile and a half from Horse-hill bridge; so called from the heavy timber that used to be hauled thither from adjacent forests and rolled into the river, to be floated thence into the Merrimack and down to the Atlantic ocean. Opposite Mast-yard, about a mile south-erly, is Broad Cove, in School District No. 4.

3. Dagody, or Dagodon Hill and Brook, on or near the northerly boundary line be-tween Concord and Boscawen; so called from a man named Dagodon, who formerly resided there. The brook is famous for trout fishing. Lieut. Marshall Baker, when a young man, on a fishing excursion to this brook, in his haste to catch a large mess, took off his pants, tied a string around the bottom of the legs, buttowing the waist-band and opening them with sticks, set them for a fish-pot at the mouth of a little dam which he threw up; then driving the fish down the stream, he caught in a short time about ninety fine trout, one weighing over three pounds.

‡ Some surveys make this line a few rods more, and some a few rods less.
INTRODUCTION.

4. Within the Horse-hill territory, partly in Boscawen, is a Little Pond, sometimes called Catamount, abounding more with snakes and turtles than with fishes. 5. The Boscawen District No. 2, settled originally by the Ellists: now the residence of old Mrs. Lydia Elliot, at the age of 102 years. Among the ancient men distinguished in this locality in former times, and known by their honorary titles, were "Gov- ernor Elliot," "Lawyer Elliot," and "Judge Baker," grandfather of His Excellency Nathaniel B. Baker.

6. HOYT'S BROOK, which crosses the road to Boscawen, about one mile south of Fisher-ville.

7. BEAVER-MEADOW BROOK, about a mile south of Hoyt's Brook. Near this is Beaver- meadow bog road to Horse-hill.

8. SAND-BANKS, about a half mile easterly from Hoyt's brook, where logs and timber were rolled into Merrimack river. Capt. Joseph Pratt, of Oxford, with a two-horse sleigh, drove off this bank one night, by accident, and, though precipitated to the bottom, escaped without material injury.

9. SOUTH-WEST POND, the name given to a long, narrow neck of land, lying at the foot of sand-banks, on the east side, as the river formerly run, but since cut off by turning the river to the Northern rail-road; better known now as Goodwin's Point.

10. DUSTIN'S ISLAND, at the mouth of Contoocook river—the scene of the famous exploit of Mrs. Hannah Dustin, who killed and scalped her Indian captors.

11. SWALL'S ISLAND and FALLS, so called from Judge Samuel Sewall, of Massachusetts, who formerly owned the premises.

12. RATTLESnake BROOK, running from Long Pond through West village.

13. RATTLESnake Hill, so called on account of the snakes of this species that formerly had their dens here—well known now as Granite Hill, about two miles north-westerly from the main village.

14. PARSONAGE HILL, so called from the eighty acre lot laid off to the parsonage right, west of Isaac Farnum's.

15. LOTS, extending, according to the first survey, from the residence of the late Countess of Rumford to the near the old Bow line.

16. The ENDS, (that is, Merrimack riv-ers,) near the southern boundary line, and taking in a small section of Bow. On the bank at this bend is a beautiful view, north, of the Main village.

17. IRON WORKS, south-west part of the town, including Sch. District No. 15. In the Revolutionary War the "Iron Works" were owned by Daniel Carter, Daniel Gale and Dr. Philip Carrigan. A forge was built in the lot easterly of the bridge which now crosses Turkey River, where iron was wrought from native ore.

18. "Little Pond," or District No. 6, is so called from a small pond, situated north-east of Nathan Ballard's, Esq. This neighborhood was settled about 1729, by Nathan Ball-ard, Nathan and Henry Chandler, and Eben Fisk, on farms bought of the estate of Col. Paul Rolfe.

19. RIVER HILL, on the westerly line between Concord and Hopkinton—so called from the abundant beach wood there found.

20. Dimond's Hill, about four miles westerly of the main village on Hopkinton road, so called from Ezekiel Dimond, a large landowner, who formerly resided on or near the place where Joseph S. Abbot now lives. In 1822 Mr. Nathan Call moved a two-story dwelling-house, thirty by forty feet, with forty yoke of oxen, from Hopkinton to Concord. In descending this hill, this much sooner than at the present time, he put three yoke of oxen before, and the remainder behind, to hold it back. It took four days to move the house—the distance was about five miles.

21. Arm Brooks, running at the foot of Dimond's hill, through the farm of Atkinson Webster, Esq., into little Turkey pond.

22. FARM MARKET, on the Hopkinton road, three miles from Main street; origin of name not known. Long distinguished for excellent brick and earthenware there manufactured.

23. Powell's Hook—at the ravine near the upper mills, in Millville; so called from one Powell, a drummer, who lived near there.

24. MILLVILLE, a name recently given to the settlement where Moses Shuttle, Esq., resides, including the house and land of Dr. Dimond, Esq., which house was the first brick in Concord, and was built by Jacob Carter, father of Jacob Carter, now Post-master. This house and premises were recently given by Dr. Shattuck for the purpose of a School, to be called "St. Paul's School."

25. Runnells Mills, were situated on the stream from Great Turkey to Little Turkey pond, on the road to Stickney's Hill. Formerly well known, these mills have fallen into entire decay. Stickney's Hill, about a mile south-west of Runnells' mills, so called from settlers of that name.

26. Boc Road, running from Concord through the bog of Turkey Pond to James Hall's; thence to Dunbarton. Before reaching Mr. Hall's this road crossed Great Pe-ter's or Belt's brook,—the latter so called from former owners of land.

27. RUM HILL, including the high land N. westerly of road to Hopkinton, owned by Benjamin Gale and others, about a mile and a half from the State House; so called from a drunken carousal and fight which took place there in early times, at a coal-pit.

28. ELVAN LOT, extending, according to the first survey, from the residence of the late Countess of Rumford near to the old Bow line.

29. The END, (that is, Merrimack riv-ers,) near the southern boundary line, and taking in a small section of Bow. On the bank at this bend is a beautiful view, north, of the Main village.

30. Iron Works, south-west part of the town, including Sch. District No. 15. In the Revolutionary War the "Iron Works" were owned by Daniel Carter, Daniel Gale and Dr. Philip Carrigan. A forge was built in the lot easterly of the bridge which now crosses Turkey River, where iron was wrought from native ore.

31. Frog Ponds, on the interval east of the residence of the late Gov. Hill, who owned the premises and made various experiments to improve them. Name derived from the "se- renades" of their principal inhabitants.

32. Hale's Point, the extreme point of land on "Ferry Road," by Richard Herbert's—named from Joseph Hale, who in early times owned the land. From the "Point" across the river was formerly a ferry, extensively known as Kimball's Ferry. Hale's point was cut off by a great freshet about 1831, and the ferry is discontinued since the opening of the Free Bridge road.

33. Fort Eddy, about half a mile north of Hale's Point, on land owned by Richard Brad- ley—opposite Sugar Mill. According to tradi- tion this was the location of an old Indian fort.

34. The Fran, a tract of land bordering the river, north of Fort Eddy; valuable for natu- ral mowing, and deriving its name from a fanci- led resemblance in shape to a lady's fan. Chafei's Island, opposite, about twenty acres. 35. Wattanummon's Brook, the princi- pal feeder and outlet of Horse Shoe Pond on the east—crossed by a bridge, and so called from the name of an Indian chief* who owned and cultivated the land adjacent. There is an outlet from both ends of the Pond.

36. Horse Shoe Pond, at the head of Main street. [See Ponds.]

37. Wood's Brook, the little stream from "little pond," crossing the wagon road north of Richard Bradley's, and formerly turning the 8 dry saw mill, which was built there; deriving its name from David Wood, original proprietor.

38. Paradise, about forty rods northerly from Wood's brook—so named from a beauti- ful groove and the scenery around it, including a charming view of the interval and meandering of the river on the east. It was owned by Capt. S. Towle. The name being rec- ently cleared away, it may be called "Para- dasie lost."

39. Blossom Hill, a pleasant eminence, covered with a fine growth, opposite "Parado- disie."

40. The Gulf, or deep hill bridge, on the main road to Beavercroft, about twenty rods south of the railroad crossing, near Benjamin Farnum's. East of this Gulf is Farnum's Eddy, so called from a current or whirl in the river.

41. West's Brook, formerly "Meeting-house Brook," rising in swamp land west of the State Prison, crossing Main street near the house of the late John West, senior— whence the name. The space between this brook and "Tamarack Brook" was neutral ground between the north and south end boys.

42. Clay-puts, and yard brook, which runs (under the road,) in the valley by Mr. Ivory Hall's house. The late Capt. Richard Ayer carried on an extensive tannery on the west side of the road; and clay of good qual- ity was formerly dug here. Opposite the tan- yard stood the old hay-scales,† and here was the "great elm tree," marked on the Plan of Main street.

43. Bow Brook, partly flows from Little pond, runs along by the new Jail and the In- sane Asylum, and empties into Turkey river.

44. Free Bridge and Free Bridge Road, across the Merrimack and interval, nearly opposite Central street.† This road was first opened and bridge built in 1839.

Localities on the east side of the River, begin- ning on the northern line at Canterbury.

1. Burnham's Brook, running from Canterbury by Chandler Chaffee's to Merrimack river, opposite the eastern point of Roffe's in- terval.

2. Hackett's Brook, so called from a man of that name who once leaped across it, and then turning around, said to himself—"I'll bet a mug of flip you can't do that again, Hackett." Then attempting to leap it again, as his feet struck the opposite bank, he fell backwards into the brook. The brook has its punch-marked in it as "Hot Hole pond," easily on the London line; empties into the Merri- mak just north of Sewall's Falls bridge. On this stream is situated Lovejoy's Mills, so called, and also a saw-mill near its mouth.

3. Snow's Pond,[See Ponds.] Oak Hill is a high eminence west of Snow's pond, or north- ernerly of Turtle pond. [See page 543, 544.]

4. Hot Hole Pond, [See Ponds.]

5. Snappetown, the section comprising School District No. 14, the north part of the town, near London line. The origin of the name is uncertain. One tradition is, that it is derived from a name of Blanch- ard, who had a habit of snapping his eyes, or winking quick: on which a woman re- marked, that she should think all the chil- dren in the neighborhood would "snap." Another tradition is, that an early settler in the locality, thinking himself crowded by oth- ers who moved within half a mile of a him, was cross, or snappish.

6. The Mountain, comprising School Dis- trict No. 21, and extending from the dwelling- house of Jacob Holt to the residences of Abra- ham Bean and John L. Tallant.

7. Bowen's Brook, crossing the road to the Mountain in the valley near Meshech Lang's; origin of name not ascertained.

8. Tumble-town, comprising School Dis- trict No. 15, derived its name from the large pond in that vicinity, which abounds with turties. See "Ponds," page 543.

9. Apple-town, southerly of Turtle pond, supposed to derive its name from the abund- ance and excellence of apples there raised.

10. Leather-lane, the section from the fork of the road to Apple-town, to the old bury-ground in the East village.

11. The Fort—including the East village— deriving its name from the "Irish Fort," or the garrison from the Eastward, which stood directly west of the residence of Israel W. Kelly, Esq.

12. Squaw Lot, westerly of Federal bridge. [See Indian History.]

13. Mill-brook, the outlet of Turtle pond, affording a fine water power in the East vil- lage, on which the first saw and grist-mill were built, in Concord, 1739.

14. Death's Hill, on the Portsmouth turn- pike, near the school-house on "Dark Plain," a short, steep ascent, which the road now runs around on the south and east side, de- riv'd its name from the circumstance of a traveller, with a loaded team from Port-smouth, was killed in going over it by a hogs- head of molasses rolling from his wagon.

15. Sugar ball, the first prominent and bluff northerly of Kimball's Ferry, or Sam-uel Clifford's residence, and opposite Fort Eddy. On this, among the most invariable tradi- tion, stood the old Pancoot fort.

16. Mount Pleasant, a high and steep

INTRODUCTION.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

Respecting the public buildings, some of which are also distinctly marked upon the map, the following description may here suffice, beginning at the north end of main street.

The Methodist General Biblical Institute, established and incorporated in 1847, occupies the "Old North Church," which was fitted up by the liberality of Citizens of Concord, at a cost of about $3000, in 1846, and conveyed to the Institute by the gift of the old Rev. Edmund Worth, pastor of the Baptist church, was settled there in 1845, and still remains. At this time there is no other settled pastor.

The old Town Hall and Court House was first built in 1792, and enlarged in 1833. This, together with the County building of brick, built in 1844, is soon to give place to the new and splendid City Hall, on the same location. The State Prison, near the north end of Main street—first built in 1811-13, but greatly enlarged and improved—is mainly sustained by the labor of the convicts. The number in prison in 1854 was one hundred and five. Its present warden is William W. Eastman. [See annual reports of wardens.]

The Stair House, which was commenced in 1816, and completed in 1818, is about the middle of Main street. The grounds, extending from Main to State street, contain about two acres, beautifully ornamented with a variety of shade trees. The center of the building is fifty feet in front by fifty-seven in depth; the wings are each thirty-eight feet in front by forty-nine in depth; the whole making a parallelogram of one hundred and twenty-six feet in length, by forty-nine in width, with the addition of a projection in the center of each front of four feet. The outside walls are of hammered granite. The lot on which it stands is enclosed on two sides with a solid wall of hammered stone, about five feet high; the front fences and gates are of iron castings, with stone posts and sills. The expense of building, including the land, the fence, and the furniture of the house, amounted to $32,000.

In this building are a chamber for the Representatives, with an arched ceiling rising thirty feet from the floor; the Senate chamber, eighteen feet in height; the Council chamber, and offices for the secretary and treasurer, the adjutant and attorney-generals, with a spacious room occupied as the State library.

The County Jail, located near the junction of Pleasant and Washington streets, about one mile west of the State House, was erected in 1852, at a cost of $11,000. [See page 492.]

In this building is the City Prison, with a capacity of one hundred and twenty-five prisoners, and a staff of three supervisors, twenty guards, and a force of assistants.

Pleasant Street, running from State near the north end of Main street, has been an important thoroughfare since before the Revolution, and is one of the principal streets of the town. The north side is the main road of the town, and was formerly owned chiefly by the Locke family.
INTRODUCTION.

THE NEW-HAMPSHIRE ASYLUM FOR THE INSANE is situated on Pleasant street, upon an eminence half a mile south of the State House. As enlarged and improved since its first erection in 1818, it is a noble edifice—an ornament to the city and an honor to the State. The whole number of patients admitted since the opening of the institution in June 1, 1855, is 1,824. The present Superintendent is John E. Tyler, M. D.

THE RAILROAD PASSENGER DEPOT, located east and near the centre of Main Street, is a large and commodious building, erected in 1849. In the second story is a spacious hall, together with convenient and even elegant rooms for offices. Near this building on the south is an extensive Freight Depot, and in the immediate vicinity are all the necessary buildings for engines and cars, and for machine and repair shops. At this general depot the following Railroads centre, viz.:

The Concord Railroad, extending from Nashua to Concord, 34½ miles; opened in Sept., 1842; whole cost, $1,435,900.

The Northern Railroad, from Concord through Franklin, to Connecticut river, 69 miles. The first section of it opened in 1846, and the residue in 1847 and 1848. The capital stock amounts to $2,770,000.

Boston, Concord and Montreal Railroad, chartered in December, 1844, extends from Concord to the Connecticut river, through Haverhill, to Woodville, opposite Wells River, in Vermont. INDIAN HISTORY.

CHAPTER I.

The history of the Penacooks, a powerful Indian tribe that formerly occupied this soil, is full of interest. Our sources of information concerning them are much more reliable than is commonly supposed. Some things are merely traditionary: others are authenticated by ancient historians, and by official documents on record or on file, both in the Secretary's office of Massachusetts and of New-Hampshire.

At the first settlement of New-England, there were five principal nations of Indians. 1. The Pequotts, of Connecticut; 2. The Narragansettts, of Rhode-Island; 3. The Pawkunnawkuts, in the south-eastern parts of Massachusetts, including Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard; 4. The Massachusetts, situated about the Bay; and, 5. The Pawtucketts, which, says the historian Daniel Gookin, 1674, "was the last great sachemship of Indians. Their country lieth north and north-east from the Massachusetts, whose dominion reacheth so far as the English jurisdiction or colony of the Massachusetts doth now extend; and had under them several other smaller sagamores; as the Pennakocks, Agowames, Naamkeeks, Piscataways, Accomintas, and others. They were a considerable people heretofore, about three thousand men, and held amity with the people of Massachusetts. But these were almost totally destroyed by the great sickness that prevailed among the Indians, (about 1612 and 1613,) so that at this day they are not above two hundred and fifty men, beside women and children. This country is now inhabited by the English, under the government of Massachusetts.

That the Penacooks occupied the soil which is now Concord, all historians and public documents agree. The name itself is thought to indicate the locality; for Penacook means, "the crooked place;" having reference to the broad sweeps and windings of the Merrimack as it flows through the township. Here, when first known by the English, were the head-quarters of the Penacooks, under a powerful chief whose name was Passaconaway, and who extended his dominion over subordinate tribes, along the river, from the Winnepissigee to Pawtucket Falls, and as far east as the Squamscots and Piscataquay. In 1631, Gov. Thomas Dudley, in his letter to Lady Lincoln, estimates the Indians under Passaconaway, along the Merrimack, "at four or five hundred men." On the east side of the river, upon a bluff called "Sugar Ball," northeast of the main village, and in full view, was an ancient Indian fort. Tradition has so preserved and fixed the identity of this location with "Sugar Ball," that it is presumption, at this time, to call it in question. Near the fort, a little to the north, is the spot which probably was their ancient burying-ground—as a considerable number of human skulls and bones have been dug and ploughed up, or washed away by the rains, and been picked up on the side or at the bottom of the bank.

At this fort, according to tradition, there was once a terrible fight between the Penacooks and Mohawks. The traditionary

† "From Pennaquik, (crooked,) and Auke, (place)—a name strikingly appropriate to their fertile grounds embraced within the folds of the Merrimack at Concord." Hon. C. E. Potter.
‡ For a more minute notice of Passaconaway, the curious reader is referred to Hon. C. E. Potter's account, in the Farmers' Monthly Visitor, vol. 12, No. 2. He there shows that Passaconaway's name is on the famous Wheelwright Deed of 1729, and which Mr. P. does not believe to be a forgery. In the same article Mr. P. adventures the opinion that the Concord Indian fort was on the south side of Sugar Ball interval—an opinion which we cannot entertain for a moment, in opposition to clear, unbroken, invariable tradition. The widow of the late Benjamin Kimball, now 88 years of age, who has lived on the said interval more than sixty years, points to the north bluff as the only supposable location of the fort. Robert Bradley, Esq., of Fryeburg, a native of Concord, now 83 years of age, says, "the tradition always and invariably was, that the old Indian fort stood on Sugar Ball,—the Sand Bluff, on the east side, nearly opposite his brother Richard's house."
§ Several of these skulls and bones are now in the possession of Hon. Chandler E. Potter, of Manchester, a native of Concord, who has made diligent researches into our Indian history.
account of this fight accords so exactly with what Gookin says of the Mokawks, that its correctness can hardly be questioned. In his history, 1674, he says: "These Maquas are given to rapine and spoil: they had for several years been in hostility with our neighbor Indians, as the Massachusetts, Pawtucketts, Pennacocks—and in truth, they were in time of war so great a terror to all the Indians before named, though ours were far more in number than they, that the appearance of four or five Maquas in the woods would frighten them from their habitations and cornfields, and seduce many of them to get together in forts; by which means they were brought to such straits and poverty that had it not been for the relief of the English, doubtless many of them had suffered famine. * * * * The Maquas' manner is, in the spring of the year, to march forth in parties several ways, under a captain, and not above fifty in a troop. And when they come near the place that they design to spoil, they take up some secret place in the woods for their general rendezvous—then they divide themselves into small parties, three, four or five—and go and seek their prey. They lie in ambuscades by the path-sides in some secure places, and when they see passengers come, they fire upon them with guns; and such as they kill or wound, they seize on and pillage, and strip their bodies; and then with their knives take off the skin and hair of the scalp of their head, as large as a satin or leather cap; and so, leaving them for dead, they pursue the rest, and take such as they can prisoners, and serve them in the same kind."

The tradition of the bloody battle between the Penacooks and Mohawks is substantially this: The Mohawks, who had once been repulsed by the Penacooks, came with a strong force, and encamped at what is now called Fort Eddy, opposite Sugar Ball, on the west side of the river. Thence they watched their prey, determined either to starve the Penacooks, by a siege, or to decoy them out and destroy them.

Having gathered their corn for the season, and stored it in baskets around the walls of their fort, the Penacooks, with their women and children, entered within and bid defiance to their foes. Frequent skirmishes occurred between individuals of the parties. If the Penacooks went out of the fort, they were sure to be ambushed; if a canoe was pushed off from one bank of the river, others from the opposite side started in pursuit. Some time had thus passed, and no decisive advantage was gained by either side. The Penacooks dared not adventure a fight in the field, nor the Mohawks to attack the fort.

After a day or two of apparent cessation from hostilities, a solitary Mohawk was seen carelessly crossing Sugar Ball plain, south of the fort. Caught by the decoy, the Penacooks rushed out in pursuit: the Mohawk ran for the river. Band after band from the fort joined in the chase, till all were drawn out and scattered on the plain, when the Mohawks, who had secretly crossed the river above, and by a circuitous route approached in the rear, suddenly sprung from their hiding-place and took possession of the fort. A shriller war-whoop than their own burst on the affrighted Penacooks: they turned from the chase of the solitary Mohawk, and long and bloody was the battle. The Penacooks fought for their wives and children—for their old men—for their corn—for life itself; the Mohawks for revenge and for plunder. On which side the victory turned, none can tell. Tradition says the Mohawks left their dead and wounded on the ground; and that from that fatal day the already reduced force of the Penacooks was broken into fragments, and scattered. A diversity in the sculls which have been dug up in the ancient burying-ground has induced the belief, that in it the dead of both the savage tribes were promiscuously buried.

What remains to be said of the Penacooks can best be narrated in connection with the biography of their principal chiefs or sagamores, as gathered from authentic historical documents.

Over the track of the Concord and the Northern Railroad, at this time, (1853,) are daily seen running three powerful engines, named Passaconaway, Wonalancet and Tahanto. A stranger to our history reads these names with wonder, and asks their origin. We are almost proud to answer, They are the names of three of the noble chiefs of the Penacook tribe—tried friends of the English in prosperity and in adversity—and one of them a bold advocate of temperance, against lawless traffickers in rum. These names are almost the only visible mementos of the race that has perished from our soil.
PASSACONAWAY.

This name is supposed to mean in the Indian tongue, "the child of the bear," from Papoeis, child, and Kunnaway, a bear. How far the name corresponds with the character of the famous sagamore, must be judged by the sequel.*

The ancient historians, Wood, Thomas Morton, and Hubbard, all agree that he was regarded with the highest veneration by the Indians, on account of the wonderful powers which he possessed. He was a Powwow, sustaining at once the office of chief, priest and physician, and having direct communication with the Great Spirit. Wood, in his "New-England Prospect," says: "The Indians report of one Passaconnaw, that hee can make the water burne, the rocks move, the trees dance, metamorphise himself into a flaming man. Hee will do more; for in winter, when there are no green leaves to be got, he will burne an old one to ashes, and putting those into the water, produce a new green leaf, which you shall not only see, but substantially handle and carry away; and make of a dead snake's skin a living snake, both to be seen, felt and heard. This I write but upon the report of the Indians, who confidently affirm stranger things."

Thomas Morton writes: "If we do not judge amisse of these salvages in accounting them witches, yet out of all question we may be bound to conclude them to be but weake witches:—such of them as wee call by the name of Powahs,† some correspondence they have with the Devil, out of all doubts, as by some of their accions in which they glory is manifested:—Papasiquineo,

* Hon. C. E. Potter, on Indian names. Farmers' Visitor, (Language of Penacocks,) Vol. 13, No. 11.
† Powahs are said to be "witches, or sorcerers, that cure by the help of the devil." After Rev. Mr. Elliot began to preach to the Indians with success, "divers sachems and other principal men amongst them, met at Concord, Ms., in the end of Feb. 1646, and agreed "that there shall be no more Powwoeing amongst the Indians. And if any shall hereafter Powwow, both he that shall Powwow and he that procure him to Powwow shall pay 30s. apiece."
that sachem or sagamore, is a Powah of great estimation amongst all kinde of salvages;—there hee is at their Revels—(which is the time when a great company of salvages meete from several parts of the Country, in amity with their neighbours)—hath advanced his honor in his feats or jugling tricks, (as I may right tearme them,) to the admiration of the spectators whome he endeavored to persuade that he would goe under water to the further side of a river too broade for any man to undertake with a breath, which thing hee performed by swimming over and deducing the company with casting a mist before their cies that see him enter in and come out,—but no part of the way hee has been seene;—likewise by our English, in the heat of summer, to make Ice appear in a bowle of faire water;—first having the water set before him, he hath begunne his incantations according to their usual accustom, and before the same has bin ended a thick clowde has darkened the aire, and on a sodane a thunder clap hath bin heard that has amused the natives; in an instant hee hath showed a firme piece of Ice to flote in the middle of the bowle in the presence of the vulgar people, which doubtless was done by the agility of Satan, his consort." Such was the reputation of Passaconaway, when first known by the English.

He seems to have exercised his powers in vain against the English, on his first acquaintance with them: at least, he had the sagacity to perceive that opposition would be not only useless but ruinous: and hence he showed himself friendly, and sought in various ways to conciliate their favor. In 1632, he delivered up an Indian who had killed a white man by the name of Jenkins, who went into his country to trade. In 1642, upon an alarm of an Indian conspiracy from Connecticut, the government of Massachusetts sent a force of forty men to disarm Passaconaway. Failing to reach his wigwam, on account of a violent rain, they entered that of Wonalancet, his son, and seized him, together with his squaw and child. Tying him with a rope, they led him along; but Wonalancet, watching his opportunity, slipped the rope and made his escape into the woods. The court fearing that this unjust assault upon the family of Passaconaway would provoke his displeasure, sent a messenger to apologize to him and invite him to come to Boston and speak with them: whereupon he made the manly reply—"Tell the English, when they restore my son and his squaw, then I will come and talk with them."

Notwithstanding this provocation, Passaconaway cherished no resentment; but desirous of peace, "about a fortnight after, he sent his son and delivered up his guns" to the authorities. In 1644, Winthrop says, "Passaconaway and his son desire to come under this government. He and one of his sons subscribe the articles; and he undertook for the other." Soon after this, Winthrop again records, "Passaconaway, the Merrimack sachem, came in and submitted to our government."

At this period Passaconaway was an old man—his age variously estimated from eighty to one hundred. Hitherto he had stood aloof from Christian instruction, and from all the usages of civilized life. But the famous John Elliot, known as the Apostle of the Indians, had previous to this gathered companies of praying Indians in various places in Massachusetts, 'and in pursuance of his apostolic labors, in 1647, he visited Pawtucket Falls, (now Dracut,) where he met Passaconaway with two of his sons. The result of this and a subsequent interview in 1648, is thus told by Elliot himself, under date of Nov. 12, 1648. "This last spring I did there meet old Papassaconnaway, who is a great sagamore, and hath been a great witche in all men's esteem, (as I suppose yourself have often heard,) and a very politic, wise man. The last year he and all his sons fled when I came, pretending feare that we would kill him: But this year it pleased God to bow his heart to hear the word;—I preached out of Malachi 1:11, which I thus render to them: 'From the rising of the sun to the going down of the same, thy name shall be great among the Indians; and in every place prayers shall be made to thy name,—pure prayers,—for thy name shall be great among the Indians.' * * * * After a good space this old Papassaconnaway speak to this purpose—'That indeed he had never prayed unto God as yet, for he had never heard of God before as now he doth:' and he said further, 'that he did believe what I taught them to be true; and for his own part, he was purposed in his heart from henceforth to pray unto God; and that he would persuade all his sonnes to do the same,' pointing at two of them who were there present, and naming such as were absent. His sonnes present, especially his eldest sonne, (who is a sachem at Wadchusett,) gave his willing consent to what his father had promised, and so did the other, who was but a youth: And this act of his was not only a present motion that soon vanished, but a good while after said that he would be glad if I would come and live in some place thereabouts and teach them; and that if any good ground or place that hee had would be acceptable to me, he would willingly let me have it.”

Again, 1649, Elliot writes: “Papassaconnaway, whom I mentioned unto you the last yeere, who gave up himself and his sonnes to pray unto God, this man did this year shew very great affection to me, and to the word of God; he did exceedingly earnestly, importunately, invite me to come and live there and teach them; he used many arguments, many whereof I have forgotten; but this was one, ‘that my coming thither but once in a yeere did them but little good, because they soone had forgotten what I taught, it being so seldom, and so long betwixt the times’; further he said, That he had many men, and of them many nought, and would not believe him that praying to God was so good, but if I would come and teach them, he hoped they would believe me: He further added, ‘That I did, as if one should come and throw a fine thing among them, and they earnestly catch at it, and like it well, because it looks finely, but they cannot look into it to see what is within it, and what is within, they cannot tell whether something or nothing, it may be a stock or a stone is within it, or it may be a precious thing;—but if it be opened and they see what is within it, and see it precious, then they should believe it—so, (said he,) you tell us of praying to God, (for so they call all Religion,) and we like it well at first sight, and we know not what is within, it may be excellent, or it may be nothing, we cannot tell; but if you would come unto us, and open it unto us, and show us what it is within, then we should believe that it is so excellent as you say.’

“Such elegant arguments as these did he use with much gravity, wisdome and affection; and truly my heart much yearneth towards them, and I have a great desire to make an Indian Towne that way.”

Of Passaconaway we hear but little more till 1660. He seems to have been at the Penacook fort, which was visited by Maj. Waldron, of Dover, in 1659; but in 1660 he met the Indians subject to his authority, with their sachems, at Pawtucket Falls, and there made to them his farewell speech. An Englishman was present, probably Daniel Gookin, "who was much conversant with Indian affairs along the Merrimack," and who was a witness of the scene. The substance of the speech, as reported by Hubbard, was this: "I am now ready to die, and not likely to see you ever met together any more. I will now leave this word of counsel with you, that you may take heed how you quarrel with the English; for though you may do them much mischief, yet assuredly you will all be destroyed and rooted off the earth, if you do: for I was as much an enemy to the English on their first coming into these parts, as any one whatsoever; and I did try all ways and means possible to have destroyed them;—at least to have prevented their sitting down here; but I could no way effect it, [meaning by his incantations and sorceries,] therefore I advise you never to contend with the English nor make war with them."

With a freer rendering of this Farewell Speech of the Great Sachem, we may imagine that the venerable old man, tremulous with five score years, stood in a circle of a thousand of his children and said: "Hearken to the last words of your dying father: I shall meet you no more. The white men are sons of the morning, and the sun shines bright above them. In vain I opposed their coming: vain were my arts to destroy them: never make war upon them: sure as you light the fires, the breath of Heaven will turn the flames to consume you. Listen to my advice. It is the last I shall ever give you. Remember it, and live!"

It is a sad conclusion of the noble old chief's history, that two years after this—his tribe reduced and scattered—his possessions encroached upon on every side, his physical force abated, and waiting only to die,—he was obliged to petition the General Court of Massachusetts in these humiliating terms:

"The humble request of yr petition is that this honord Courte wolde pleas to grante vnto vs a parcell of land for or comfortable cituation, to be stated for our Injoyment; as also for the comfort of oths after vs; as also that this honerd Court wold

WONALANCET.

Though Wonalancet was the successor of Passaconaway as sagamore of the Penacooks, yet his history belongs as much to Amoskeag, Chelmsford or Pawtucket as to Concord.* In his pacific temper and friendliness to the English, he resembled his father; but his life seems to have been one of trial, disappointment and sorrow. He was wronged by the whites; distrusted by the Indians; a wanderer in the wilderness, in unknown but remote places from Penacook; at one time a prisoner at Dover; for many years under the watch and supervision of Col. Tyng, of Chelmsford; and at last he died, like his father, in poverty. The first notice we have of him, as connected with Penacook, is in 1670: “He moved to Pawtuckett and built a fort on the heights southeast of the river.” Hutchinson thus notices this event: “The Penacooks have come down the river and built a fort at Pawtuckett Falls. They were opposed to Christianity, and obstinately refused to pray to God. They joined in the expedition against the Mohawks, and were almost all destroyed. Since that time the Penacooks were several of them become praying Indians.”

In 1674, Wonalancet embraced the Christian faith. His conversion was regarded as an event of great importance, of which Gookin gives the following account: “May 5, 1674, Mr. Elliot preached from Matt. 22: 1-4, the marriage feast. We met at the wigwam of one called Wonnalancet, about two miles from the town, near Pawtucket Falls, and bordering on Merrimack river. This person Wonnalancet is * * a sober and grave person, and of years between fifty and sixty. He hath always been loving and friendly to the English. Many endeavours have been used several years to gain this sachem to embrace the

Christian religion; but he hath stood off from time to time, and not yielded up himself personally, though for four years past he hath been willing to hear the word of God preached and to keep the Sabbath. A great reason that hath kept him off, I conceive, hath been the indisposition and averseness of sundry of his chief men and relations to pray to God; which he foresaw would desert him, in case he turned Christian. But at this time, May 6, 1674, it pleased God so to influence and overcome his heart, that it being proposed to him to give his answer concerning praying to God, after some deliberation and serious pause, he stood up, and made a speech to this effect:

"Sirs, you have been pleased for four years last past, in your abundant love, to apply yourselves particularly unto me and my people, to exhort, press and persuade us to pray to God. I am very thankful to you for your pains. I have all my days used to pass in an old canoe, (alluding to his frequent custom to pass in a canoe upon the river,) and now you exhort me to change, and leave my old canoe, and embark in a new canoe, to which I have hitherto been unwilling:—but now I yield up myself to your advice, and enter into a new canoe, and do engage to pray to God hereafter."

Brother Elliot was desired to tell this sachem,"that it may be, while he went in his old canoe, he passed in a quiet stream—but the end thereof was death and destruction to soul and body:
But now he went into a new canoe, perhaps he would meet with storms and trials; but yet he should be encouraged to persevere, for the end of his voyage would be everlasting rest." Since that time, says Gookin, "I hear this sachem doth persevere, and is a constant and diligent hearer of God's word, and sanctifieth the Sabbath, though he doth travel to Wamesit meeting every Sabbath, which is above two miles; and though sundry of his people have deserted him since he subjected to the gospel, yet he continues and persists."

During the period of Phillip's War, as it is called, 1675, Wonalancet, to avoid being involved in any way in the war, withdrew with his men from the banks of the Merrimack into the woods, which excited the suspicions of the English; and messengers were dispatched to search him out and invite him back. The Court of Massachusetts assured him of a safe pass, if he would come back; but "he could not be persuaded on to return, but travelled up into the woods still further, and kept about the heads of Connecticut river all winter, where was a place of good hunting for moose, deer, and other wild beasts, and came not either to the English, or his own countrymen, our enemies."

Gookin says, that about the time Wonalancet withdrew into the woods, "Capt. Mosely, with a company of about one hundred soldiers, was sent to Penacook, where it was reported there was a body of Indians; but it was a mistake, for there were not above one hundred in all of the Penacook and Namkeg Indians, whereof Wonalancet was chief. When the English drew nigh, whereof they had intelligence by scouts, they left their fort and withdrew into the woods and swamps." But under these circumstances Wonalancet evinced his friendly disposition to the English; for he would not allow his men either to lie in ambush, nor in any case to shoot at them, although the English burned their wigwams and destroyed some dried fish.

Returning from his retreats, in 1676 he went to Dover, and submitted himself, with his men, to Maj. Waldron. He also brought back from captivity six English captives—a Widow Kimball and her five children, of Bradford—whom, it seems, he was the means of saving alive, after they had been condemned to death, and fires made ready to burn them. This year, also, Wonalancet and his men were, according to order of the court, placed near Mr. Jonathan Tyng's, at Dunstable, and under his inspection. He also resided next year awhile on land which had been granted him, at Chelmsford, and there he conducted himself, says Gookin, like "an honest Christian man, being one that in his conversation walks answerably to his knowledge. He prays in his family, and is careful of keeping the Sabbath; loves to hear God's word, and sober in conversation." Being particularly friendly to the minister of Chelmsford, Rev. Mr. Fiske, it is said that Wonalancet called on him after his return, at the close of the war, and asked him "if the town had suffered much from the enemy." Mr. Fiske replied, "they had not, for which he desired to thank God." "Me next," said Wonalancet, with a smile, conscious of the influence he had exerted.
The last we hear of Wonalancet was in 1697, when he was again placed under the care of Jonathan Tyng, and the General Court allowed £20 for keeping him. The time and place of his death is unknown. But he never committed an act injurious to the English.

WANUCHUS,
THE DAUGHTER OF PASSACONAWAY; OR,
"THE BRIDAL OF PENACOOK."

The following story is related by Thomas Morton, in his "New English Canaan," 1632:

"The Sachem, or Sagamore of Sagus, made chiose, (when hee came to man's estate,) of a Lady of noble discent, Daughter to Papasiquineo, the Sachem or Sagamore of the territories neare Merrimack River—a man of the best note and estimation in all those parts, (and as my Countryman, Mr. Wood, declares, in his prospect,) a great Nigromancer. This Lady the younge Sachem, with the consent and good liking of her father, marries, and takes for his wife. Great Entertainment hee and his receaved in those parts at her father's hands, where they weare fested in the best manner that might be expected, according to the Custome of their nation, with reveling, and such other solemnities as is usuall amongst them. The solemnity being ended, Papasiquineo causes a selected number of his men to waite upon his Daughter home; into those parts that did properly belong to her Lord and husband—where the attendants had entertainment by the Sachem of Sagus and his Countrymen. The solemnity being ended, the attendants were gratified.

"Not long after, the new married Lady had a great desire to see her father, and her native country from whence shee came. Her Lord, willing to pleasure her, and not deny her request, (amongst them) thought to be reasonable, commanded a selected number of his owne men to conduct his Lady to her Father, where, with great respect, they brought her; and having feasted there a while, returned to their owne country againe—leaving the Lady to continue there at her owne pleasure, amongst her friends and old acquaintance: where she passed away the time for a while, and, in the end, desired to returne to her Lord againe. Her father, the old Papasiqueineo, having notice of her intent, sent some of his men on ambassage to the younge Sachem, his sonne-in-law; to let him understand that his daughter was not willing to absent her selfe from his company any longer; and, therefore, (as the messengers had in charge,) desired the younge Lord to send a convoy for her; but hee, standing upon tearmes of honor, and the maintaining of his reputatio, returned to his father-in-law this answere: that when she departed from him, hee caused his men to waite upon her to her father's territories, as it did become him; but, now shee had an intent to returne, it did become her father to send her back with a convoy of his own people; and that it stood not with his reputation to make himself or his men so servile to fetch her againe. The old Sachem, Papasiqueineo, having this message returned, was inraged, to think that his young son-in-law did not esteeme him at a higher rate than to capitulate with him about the matter, and returne him this sharpe reply; that his daughter's bloud and birth deserved no more respect than to be so slighted, and, therefore, if he would have her company, hee were best to send or come for her.

"The younge Sachem, not willing to under value him selfe, and being a man of a stout spirit, did not stick to say that he should either send her, by his owne Convoy, or keepe her, for hee was not determined to stoope so lowe.

"So much these two Sachems stood upon tearmes of reputation with each other, the one would not send her, and the other would not send for her, lest it should be any diminishing of honor on his part, that should seeme to comply, that the Lady (when I came out of the Country) remained still with her father; which is a thinge worth the noting, that Salvage people should seeke to maintaine their reputation so much as they doe."*

The poet Whittier has made the above story the foundation of a beautiful poem, called the "Bridal of Penacook," whom he names "Weetamoo;" and the Sagamore-groom he calls "Winnipurkett." The real name of the bride was Wenuchus, or WanuncJius, and of her husband, Montowampate. His English name was James, brother of John, of Lynn. Governor Dudley, in his letter to the Countess of Lincoln, March 12, 1631, says: "Vpon the river of Mistick is seated Sagamore John, and vpon the river Sawgus, Sagamore James, his brother, both so named by the English. John is a handsome young [a line missing.] conversant with us; affecting English Apparel and howses, and speaking well of our God. His brother James is of a perworse disposition, yet repaireth often to us. Both theis brothers command not above thirty or forty men, for aught I can learne. Near to Salem dwelleth two or three families, subject to the Sagamore of Agawam. This Sagamore is himself tributary to Sagamore James—having been before the last yeare in his [James'] minority." This determines the age of the Saugus-groom to be about twenty.

How long his bride was absent, or how she got back, is matter of conjecture. Whittier, with poetic license, represents her as leaving her father’s home at Penacook in the spring, alone, in a canoe. She was seen going over the Falls of Amoskeag, where her frail bark was dashed in pieces, and the bride seen no more.

"Sick and a-weary of her lonely life,
Heedless of peril, the still faithful wife
Had left her mother's grave, her father's door,
To seek the wigwam of her chief once more.

"Down the white rapids, like a scar leaf whirled,
On the sharp rocks and piled up ices hurled,
Empty and broken circled the canoe,
In the vexed pool below—But where was 'Wetamoo'?"

Then follows the responsive dirge, chanted by the "Children of the Leaves."

"The dark eye has left us,
The spring bird has flown;
On the pathway of spirits
She wanders alone —
The song of the wood-dove has died on our shore;
Mat wonck Kunna-monee! * We hear it no more!

"Oh, dark water spirit!
We cast on thy wave
These furs which may never Hung over her grave;
Bear down to the lost one the robes that she wore;
Mat wonck Kunna-monee! We see her no more!

"Oh mighty Sowanna! †
Thy gate-ways unfold,
From thy wigwam of sunset
Lift curtains of gold!
Take home the worn spirit whose journey is o'er,
'Mat wonck Kunna-monee! We see her no more!'"

This is indeed beautiful poetry; but the fact is, that "Wetamoo," alias Wanuchus, found means to get back alive to her sagamore lord. The remaining incidents in her history, and that of her husband, James, are thus related by ancient historians:

"On the 8th of August, 1632, about one hundred Tarrotines landed from their canoes, at Ipswich, in the night, and killed seven of Masconomo's men, wounded Monohaquaham and Montowampate, who were on a visit to that place, and carried away Wanuchus, the wife of Montowampate, a captive." Hubbard says: "About the same time, [5th of August, 1632.] came a company of Eastern Indians, called Tarrotines, and, in the night, assaulted the wigwam of the sagamore of Agawam. They were near a hundred in number, and they came with thirty canoes. They slew seven men, and wounded John and James, two sagamores that lived about Boston, and carried others away captive, amongst whom was the wife of the said James, which they sent again (that is, returned,) by the mediation of Mr. Shurd, of Pemaquid, that used to trade with them; and sent word by him that they expected something in way of ransom." On the 4th of September following, there is recorded a sentence of the court on Richard Hopkins, of Watertown, "for selling a gun and pistol, with powder and shot, to Montowampate, the Lynn sagamore"—to "be severely whippt, and branded with a hot iron on one of his cheekes." Winthrop writes, December 5, 1633—"John Sagamore died of the small-pox, and almost all his people—above thirty buried by Mr. Maverick, of Winiscemit, in one day." "James, Sagamore of Saugus, died also, and most of his folks."

But what finally became of Wanuchus, the "Bridal of Penacook?" It is unknown; but possibly, after the death of Mono-wampate, in 1633, she returned to her aged father; for that she had two grand-daughters living at Penacook, in 1686, appears from the following testimony: "September 17, 1686. Thomas Guakusses, alias, Capt. Tom, now living at Wamesit, neare Paw-tucket Falls, aged about seventy-five years, testifieth and saith—'I know two squaws were living about Pennicooke, one named Pahpocksit, and the other's name I do not know; and I knew the grandmother of these squaws, named Wanunchus. She was a principal proprietor of those lands about Naumkeage, now Salem.'"*

TAHANTO.

In the first notice we have of TAHANTO, he stands before us the earnest opposer of the rum traffic. In the summer of 1668 an Englishman, by the name of Thomas Dickinson, was murdered at Penacook by a drunken Indian. The particulars of the murder, with the evidence relative thereto, are detailed in official papers published in the third volume of the N. H. Historical Collections. The summary of the affair is this: By virtue of a warrant from Gov. Bellingham, of Massachusetts, Thomas Hinksman, with a sufficient aid, the 18th of August, 1668, "repaired to the trucking house of Capt. Richard Walderne, at Pennycooke, to make enquiry concerning the killing of an Englishman at the said trucking house, and, also, of what strong liquors have been sold there, and by whom, and when, taking the Indians' evidences therefor, about and concerning the same." Among others examined by Mr. Hinksman, was Tahanto, sagamore, and Pehaungun, sagamore; and they say "that one Thomas Payne and the Englishman that is slain, sent several Indians to their masters, Capt. Walderne's and Mr. Peter Coffin's, to Piscataque, who told those Indians that they should bring from them guns, powder, shot and cloth; but instead thereof, Capt. Walderne, and the said Peter Coffin returned those Indians back to Pennycooke, loaded only with cotton cloth and three rundletts of liquors, with which liquors there were at least one hundred of the Indians drunk for one night, one day and one half together; in which time of their being so drunk, the Examinants say, that all the Indians went from the trucking house except one, who remained there drunk, and who killed the Englishman—the other Englishman being at the same time in the fort."

History of Salem, by Felt.

The Indians who were examined, further testified, "that an Indian, hearing the slain Englishman cry out, he swam over the river, and went to the trucking house, where he found the Englishman dead; and presently after he saw the Indian who killed the Englishman going towards the fort with his knife bloody in his hand. The murderer being examined why he had killed the Englishman, said that he was much sorry, and that he had not done it had he not been drunk. When told that they must kill him for it, the murderer answered, he was willing to die for it, and that he was much sorry for the death of said Englishman."

"The Indians then belonging to the fort held a council what to do with the said murderer, who, after some debate, passed sentence that the said murderer should be shot to death; which sentence was accordingly performed the then next ensuing day, about noon. The said murderer died undauntedly, still saying that he was much sorry for the Englishman's death."

Parris, Thomas Tarball and Joseph Bloud, October 27, 1668, "That going to Pennycooke on or about the month of June last, and riding to the fort there, they were told that an Englishman was killed by an Indian, and that all the Indians were drunk, else it had not been done. And further, they testify, 'That Tahanto, a sagamore, being afraid that we had brought liquors to sell, desired us, if we had any, that we would pour it upon the ground, for it would make the Indians all one Divill.'"

In the sequel it appeared that the chief blame in this murderous affair was thrown upon Thomas Payne, who was in Peter Coffin's employ, and upon his associate, Dickinson, who was murdered. Capt. Walderne cleared himself, upon his oath, of having any participation in it; but Peter Coffin, who, it seems, was "licensed to trade with the Indians"—though he must do it according to law—was so far implicated with his man Payne, that he confessed "his grief for the miscarriage, and more especially for the dishonor of God therein;" and "I doe, therefore, cast myself upon the favor of this honored court, to deal with mee therein as in pytie they shall see cause." Accordingly the court, finding that "said Coffin hath traded liquors irregularly, and contrary to Law, do therefore Judge that he shall pay as a fine to the Country the sum of fifty pounds, and all charges which hath accrued thereby." The next year, May, 1669, it appears from the court record "that Thomas Payne, trader among the Indians at Pennecook, confessed he sold rum to the Indians; said he did this when Thomas Dickinson was killed by an Indian, and was fined £30."

In honor of Tahanto, for his noble-hearted remonstrance against the rum trade, a temperance society was formed in Concord, in 1835, under the name of Tahantoes, and his fame celebrated in the following stanzas, written by George Kent, Esq.:

Chieftain of a wasted nation!
Thine no words of promise were—
But, in hour of dark temptation,
Thine to do, and thine to dare!
When the white man, hovering round thee,
Tempted oft thy feet to stray,
Indian shrewdness nobly bound thee
To the straight and narrow way.
With fire-water when invaded,
    Thine the evil to foresee—
Nature's light alone pervaded
    Minds that ranged the forest free;
But—shame on thy Christian brother!
    He, with "light of life" endow'd,
Sought, with "liquid fire," to smother
    Life's true light in death's dark shroud.

When approaching with temptation,
    Thine to see and shun the snare—
Thine to utter, from thy station,
    Firmly the prevailing prayer:
"Were, of liquor, they the vender,
    "On the ground at once to pour—
"For the Indians it would render "All one devil, o'er and o'er."

Honor to the chieftain ever!
    High his name by fame enroll'd—
From his bright example never Be our own departure told;—
Meet for Penacook to rally
    Under his tee-total name,
Whose resolve, in her fair valley,
    Quench'd the demon's liquid flame!

KANCAMAGUS.

KANCAMAGUS, known by the English name John Hogkins, or Hawkins, was the last sagamore of the Penacooks. He was a grandson of Passaconaway, and probably son of Nanamocomuck. He is first mentioned in 1685, when some of the Penacooks, who had been to Albany, reported, on their return, that the Mohawks threatened to destroy all the Indians from Narragansett to Pechypscot, in Maine. He seems to have possessed some of the worst traits of Indian character—cunning, deceit, treachery and revenge. Conceiving himself slighted by Gov.
Cranfield, on his report against the Mohawks, he ever after—even amid professions of friendship, and when begging protection—cherished a spirit of revenge against the English. He seems to have acquired some education, and was able to write. Some letters, reputed to have been written by him, are preserved;* the first of which the following is a copy, addressed to Gov. Cranfield, of New-Hampshire:

“May 15, 1685.

Honour Governor, my friend,—

“You my friend I desire your worship and your power, because I hope you can do som great matters this one. I am poor and naked, and I have no man at my place because I afraid allways Mohogs he will kill me every day and night. If your worship when please pray help me, you no let Mohogs kill me at my place at Malamake river, called Panukkog and Nattukkog, I will submit your worship and your power. And now I want powder and such alminishon, shott and guns, because I have forth at my hom, and I plant theare.

“This all Indian hand; but pray do you consider your humble servant, John Hogkins.”

[Signed also by fourteen other Indians.]

Under pretence of fear of the Mohawks, Hogkins removed, in the fall of the same year, with the Penacooks, to the eastward; and soon after, together with the Saco Indians, entered into a treaty with the Council of New-Hampshire, of mutual aid and protection against the Mohawks and all other enemies, agreeing, also, to return and live near the English. Yet, with the old poison of revenge rankling in his bosom, he entered into a conspiracy with other Indians, in 1689, to make the attack on Dover, which ended in the death of Maj. Waldron and about twenty others. Through the friendship of two Penacook Indians, Maj. Hinksman, of Chelmsford, had notice of this conspiracy, and informed the government of Massachusetts, who hastily dispatched a letter to Maj. Waldron, giving him warning; but unfortunately detained on the way, it was too late to save him from savage revenge. In this letter they say there is a report of “a gathering of some Indians in and about Penecooke, with designe of mischief to the English. Among the said Indians one Hawkins is said to be a principal designer; and that they have a particular designe against yourself and Mr. Peter Coffin, which the Council thought it necessary presently to despatch advice thereof, to give you notice, that you take care of your own safeguard—they intending to betray you on a pretention of trade."

Next we hear of Hawkins in a fort on the river Androscoggin, at a place (Pechypscott) which was attacked the 12th of September, 1690, by Maj. Benjamin Church and a body of soldiers, and was taken and burnt. Several Indians were captured, among whom was a brother-in-law of Kancamagus, and a sister of his was slain. On the 29th of November, 1690, a truce or treaty of peace was made by the government of Massachusetts "with the eastern Indian enemy, sagamores," among whom was John Hawkins. The sagamores, six in number, "covenant, promise and agree for themselves, and all the eastward Indians now in open hostility with the English—from Pennecook, Winnepesseockeege, Ossipe, Pigwocket, Amoscongin, Pechepsut, Kennebeck river"—to keep the peace, &c. This treaty "was signed and sealed, interchangeably, upon the water, in canoes, at Sackatehock, (Maine,) when the wind blew;"* and this is the last we know of Kancamagus!

HOPE-HOOD.

The name of this Indian is connected with the Penacooks, not as one of the tribe, but as acting with them in hostilities to the English, in 1685, and afterwards. In April, 1689, Col. Bartholomew Gidney, of Salem, is instructed by the Council of Massachusetts to dispatch a messenger to Penacook, to ascertain the number and situation of the Indians there, and to concert measures for securing Hope-Hood, and other hostile Indians. He is described as one of "the most bloody warriors of the age." "A tiger," "killing, burning and destroying in every place where he found the people unguarded." He was killed, in 1690, in a fight with an Indian party, which he mistook for hostile Indians, but who were his friends and confederates.

After this the Penacooks continued to exist as a distinct tribe for many years, but their power was gone. They are mentioned in Penhallow's Indian Wars, in 1703, in a conference held by Gov. Dudley, at Casco, with delegates from several tribes. Those of them who were hostile to the English probably mixed with the eastern Indians, between whom and the Penacooks was a close affinity. As the Governor of Canada had encouraged the Indians who inhabited the borders of New-England to remove to Canada, it is likely that some of them went thither, and were incorporated with the tribes of St. Francis. But those who continued friendly to the English—of whom there had always been a small number—remained here until 1725, and after, and were highly useful to the first inhabitants; supplying them with food in the winter, when almost in a state of starvation.

WATTANUMMON.

WATTANUMMON is the name of an Indian chief who, at the time the first settlers came to Penacook, lived in a wigwam on the knob or rise of ground on the south side of the brook which is the outlet of Horse-shoe Pond—where the Concord and Montreal Railroad now crosses. He was a friendly Indian, and owned the land which lies east of said brook, from its junction with the Merrimack, westward, to what is called Farnum's Eddy. This brook and field are called by his name. A tradition is well preserved, that soon after Capt. Ebenezer Eastman came hither, in the summer of 1726, he crossed over from the east side with his men, and began to cut the grass on Wattanummon's field:
Seeing which, the old Indian went forth with a gun and two of his sons, to prevent the trespass. As he approached, Eastman and his party ceased their labor and saluted him: “How do? how do?” His reply, in broken English, was: “My land! my grass! No cut! no cut!” and drew up his gun. Eastman replied: “Yes, this is your land, and your grass. Come, boys, put aside your tools and rest.” Sitting down under a shade, the lunch and the bottle were brought forth and offered to the old chief. “Won’t you take a drink?” “Yes, yes; me drink!” Capt. Eastman drank a little himself, and then offered a cup to one of Watanummon’s sons. The old Indian interposed, saying, “He no drink;” and taking the cup himself, drank it, exclaiming: “Hugh! good!” By this time the old Indian began to be very generous and friendly; and, stretching forth his arms, exclaimed: “My land! my grass!—all mine; every thing! You may cut grass—all you want!” After this friendly interchange of property—rum for grass—Capt. Eastman and Watanummon lived in peace on opposite sides of the river. What finally became of old Watanummon is unknown.

Some interesting facts are related, either of him or another of the same name, previous to this period. In May, 1689, mention is made of Watanum, “one of the chief captains” of Wonalancet. In 1689, March 5th, “a company of thirty or forty Indians made an attack on Andover, and killed five persons;” and Col. Dudley Bradstreet and family were preserved by the friendly interference of “Waternummon, an Indian who lived at Newbury.” In June, 1703, Waternummon is mentioned as one of the chiefs of Penacook and Pigwacket who was at the conference in Casco.

“About the year 1720, (or 1712?) Capt. Thomas Baker, of Northampton, Massachusetts, set off with a scouting party of thirty-four men; passed up Connecticut river, and crossed the height of land to Pemigeswasset river. He there discovered a party of Indians, whose sachem was called Waternummus, whom he attacked and destroyed. Baker and the sachem levelled and discharged their guns at each other at the same instant. The ball from the Indian’s gun grazed Baker’s left eye-brow, but did him no injury. The ball from Baker’s gun went through the heart of the sachem. Immediately upon being wounded, he leaped four or five feet high and then fell instantly dead. The Indians fled, but Baker and his party pursued and destroyed every one of them." This affair took place, it is said, at the confluence of a small river with the Pemigewasset, (between Plymouth and Campton,) and hence has ever since had the name of Baker's river." If the above story is correct, the Waternumnumus above named, said to have been killed in 1720, or earlier, could not be the Wattanummon of Penacook, 1726. It seems, however, probable that the person mentioned as "one of the chief captains" of Wonalancet, in 1689, and the one friendly to Col. Bradstreet, of Andover, was the old sagamore-farmer who lived, in 1726, on the bank of the stream, and cultivated the field that bears his name.*

MRS. DUSTIN.

At the junction of the Contoocook river with the Merrimack, on the north line of Concord, and near where now is the flourishing village of Fisherville, is an island, known by common tradition as the scene where the captive woman from Haverhill, Mrs. HANNAH DUSTIN, performed the daring exploit of killing and scalping ten Indians, and making her escape. The Northern Railroad now passes directly across this island, and by many a traveler it is looked at as an object of strange curiosity. A monument ought to be erected on the island, to commemorate the deed of the heroic woman.

A part of the history of Mrs. Dustin belongs to Haverhill; yet, as the scene of her exploit lies chiefly in Penacook, we are required to give it a conspicuous place.

The attack on Haverhill was made by the Indians on the 15th of March, 1697. Mrs. Hannah, wife of Mr. Thomas Dustin, was confined to her bed with an infant child, seven days old, and attended by a nurse, Mary Neff. Hearing the war-whoop of the savages as they approached, Mr. Dustin ran from the field where he was at work, to his house, and ordered his children—seven in number—to flee; while he seized his gun, and finding it impossible to remove his wife and infant, mounted his horse and rode after his children—defending them against the savages who were in pursuit. Supposing it impossible to save them all, his first thought was to catch up one of them—even the one that he loved the most—but he was unable to make a choice; and, keeping in their rear, he retreated and fired, sometimes with fatal effect, till the Indians gave over their pursuit.

In the meantime a small party of Indians entered the house, took Mrs. Dustin and nurse prisoners, and set the house on fire. The babe was snatched from the arms of the nurse, and its brains dashed out against an apple tree. Feeble, and with but one shoe on, Mrs. Dustin was compelled to travel through the wilderness, in this inclement season, till they reached the home of her Indian captors, on the island above named. The Indians on the island were twelve in number: two men, three women, and seven children; and with them an English boy, named Samuel Lannardson, who was taken prisoner about a year before at Worcester.

After a few days the women were informed by the Indians that they would soon start for a distant settlement, and when they arrived there would be obliged to submit to Indian customs—of which one was to run the gauntlet, naked, between two files of Indians. On learning this, Mrs. Dustin formed her deadly plan. She told the boy Lannardson to ask his master where he would strike a man if he wished to kill him instantly, and how he would take off a scalp. The Indian laid his finger on his temple—"Strike 'em there," said he; and then instructed the boy how to scalp. Engaging the nurse and the boy in her plot, they waited the midnight hour for executing it. With tomahawks in hand they struck the fatal blows on the heads of the Indians as they lay fast asleep. Ten were killed at once. Mrs. Dustin killed her master, and Samuel Lannardson despatched the very Indian who told him where to strike and how to take off a scalp. A favorite Indian boy was spared, and one of the squaws whom they left for dead, jumped up and ran into the thicket. Mrs. Dustin, gathering up what provisions there were in the wigwam — taking the gun of her dead master, and the tomahawk with which she killed him, and, to prevent pursuit, scuttling the Indian canoes, except one — she embarked in that, with the nurse and boy Lannardson, on the waters of the Merrimack, to seek their way to Haverhill. They had not proceeded far, however, when Mrs. Dustin, perceiving that they had neglected to take the scalps, and fearing lest her neighbors — should she ever arrive at her home — would not credit her story, hastened back with her companions to the scene of death, took off the scalps of the slain, put them "into a bag, and, with these bloody witnesses of their feat, hastened again on their downward course to Haverhill. There they safely arrived." On the 21st of April following, Mrs. Dustin and her two attendants went to Boston, carrying, as proofs of their exploit, the gun, tomahawk, and ten scalps, and received as a reward from the General Court, fifty pounds, besides many valuable presents from others.*

Mr. Dustin's heroism in defending his children has been commemorated by Mrs. Sarah J. Hale, editor of the Ladies' Magazine, in beautiful stanzas, called the "Father's Choice."

"Now fly, as flies the rushing wind!
Urge, urge thy lagging steed;
The savage yell is fierce behind,
And life is on thy speed.

"And from those dear ones make thy choice;
The group he wildly eyed:
When — "father" — burst from every voice,
And — "child" — his heart replied.

"There's one that now can share his toil,
And one he meant for fame;
And one that wears his mother's smile,
And one that bears her name.

*See a more detailed and very interesting narrative of the whole affair in Merick's Hist, of Haverhill.
"And one will prattle on his knee,
Or slumber on his breast;
And one whose joys of infancy
Are still by smiles expressed.

"They feel no fear while he is near;
He'll shield them from the foe;
But oh! his ear must thrill to hear
Their shriekings should he go.

"In vain his quivering lips would speak;
No words his thoughts allow;
There's burning tears upon his cheek,
Death's marble on his brow.

"And twice he smote his clenched hand —
Then bade his children fly!
And turned, and e'en the savage band
Cower'd at his wrathful eye.

"Swift as the lightning, winged with death,
Flashed forth the quivering flame!
Their fiercest warrior bows beneath
The father's deadly aim.

"Not the wild cries that rend the skies,
His heart of purpose move;
He saves his children, or he dies
The sacrifice of love.

"Ambition goads the conqueror on;
Hate points the murderer's brand —
But love and duty, these alone
Can nerve the good man's hand.

"The hero may resign the field,
The coward murderer flee;
He cannot fear, he will not yield,
That strikes, sweet love, for thee.

"They come, they come — he heeds no cry
Save the soft child-like wail,
'Oh, father, save!' 'My children, fly!'
Were mingled on the gale.

"And firmer still he drew his breath,
And sterner flashed his eye,
As fast he hurls the leaden death,
Still shouting — 'Children, fly!'"
"No shadow on his brow appeared,
Nor tremor shook his frame,
Save when at intervals he heard
Some trembler lisp his name."

"In vain the foe—those fiends unchained—
Like famished tigers chafe;
The sheltering roof is near'd, is gain'd—
All, all the dear ones safe!"

It may here be added that Mrs. Dustin was the daughter of Michael and Hannah Emerson, and the eldest of fifteen children. She was born December 23, 1657, and married to Thomas Dustin December 3, 1677. She had thirteen children. She was forty years of age when captured by the Indians. Her descendants of the name of Dustin, and also her family connections of the name of Emerson, are numerous in New-Hampshire. Mr. Thomas Dustin, of Henniker, N. H., a descendant who has retained the name, is said to have in possession the identical gun which his heroic maternal ancestor took from her Indian captor.

"SQUAW LOT."

On the east side of Merrimack river, due west from Federal bridge, and bordering the river, is a lot known as the "Squaw lot." The eastern bound—a dark stone—may be seen, close to the fence, on the road that runs by the house of Mr. George W. Moulton, and about one hundred paces from said house. The western bound of the lot—a stone—is also visible, about forty rods further on the same road. The lot now belongs to the heirs of the late Jeremiah Pecker, Esq. The tradition respecting this lot is, that soon after the first settlement of Penacook, an Indian chief, named Peorawarrah, enamoured of the wife of another Indian, ran away with her from a settlement below Penacook; and passing up the Merrimack in a bark canoe, had lodged for the night on Sewall's island. Missing his wife, the Indian, jealous of the cause, with his gun in hand, started in pursuit. Assured that he was on the track of the guilty pair, he sped his way on foot till near night fall, when he discovered the canoe, and saw the place of their landing on the island. Secreting himself in the bushes directly opposite, on the east side of the river, and near the late residence of Henry S. Thatcher, Esq., he impatiently waited the dawn of morning, to execute his purpose. At early dawn, Peorawarrah pushed off his canoe, to pursue their flight up the river. The revengeful husband watched his opportunity, and as a current in the river turned the course of the canoe, the guilty pair were brought within the range of his deadly aim. He fired, and both were killed—fell overboard and sunk. The report of the gun was heard by one of the settlers—tradition says, Ebenezer Virgin—who afterwards met the Indian who had satiated his revenge. The Indian told him what he had done, and said—"Peorawarrah had good gun." A few days after, the body of the squaw, with the mark of a bullet shot on it, was found washed up on the shore of the river. It was buried on the adjacent land, and ever since the lot has been called "the Squaw lot."

Tradition further says that Ebenezer Virgin made search in the river for Peorawarrah's gun, and found it; that at his death the gun descended to his son John; then to his grandson John,* from whom it was obtained, by exchange for another gun, by Jonathan Eastman, Esq., about forty years ago, and is still in his possession, as fit for good service as ever. This gun, bearing marks of antiquity, identically the same "good gun," except the stock, as when in the hands of Peorawarrah—the writer has seen and handled, and has no doubt of the substantial truth of the tradition. It is carefully kept, though in frequent service, by Esq. Eastman, now seventy-two years of age, and called "Peorawarrah's gun."†

*This was the "Old John Virgin" whose life and death are noticed in another place.
†Mr. Eastman informed me that he intended the gun should go, after his death, to his grandson, Jonathan Eastman Pecker.
THE LAST OF THE PENACOOKS.

PEHAUNGUN.

Tradition says that the last Penacook who died here was named Pehaungun, a celebrated warrior, whose wigwam and planting grounds were on the east side of the river, upon the land afterwards owned and occupied by Stilson Eastman; subsequently, by John Miller; then by the late Mr. Samuel Blake, and now by two of Mr. Blake's sons. Pehaungun is mentioned in connection with Tahanto, at the trial of the Indian for the murder of Thomas Dickinson, in 1668. He is there called an "ancient Indian." He is supposed to have died about 1732, at the advanced age of one hundred and twenty years or more. The tradition respecting his death is, that the Indians had a "big drunk" at his wigwam—that they drank from the bung-hole of a keg of rum. Capt. Eastman, hearing the drunken revel and outcries, went to see what was going on, and was invited to drink; but, hoisting the keg to his mouth, he let more run out than ran in; seeing which, Pehaungun threatened to kill him. Capt. Eastman withdrew, and the next morning this "ancient Indian" was found dead. The Indians who partook of the revel feared that the spirit of the old warrior would come back and punish them; therefore, in burying him, they placed his body in a hollow trunk of pine, covered over with a slab; bound it round with withes, and, laying it in the ground, threw in dirt, and then stamped it down hard—crying out, "He no get out! he no get up!" They then stuck up willow boughs about the grave; some at the same time dancing, wailing, howling and tearing their hair. The whole ceremony was concluded with another "big drunk," which laid them all low on the ground.
CHAPTER II.

NOTICES OF PENACOOK PREVIOUS TO ITS SETTLEMENT BY THE WHITES.

By virtue of her original charter, obtained in 1628, Massachusetts claimed all that part of New-England lying between three miles to the northward of Merrimack river, to the source of the same, and three miles to the southward of Charles river; and in length, within the described breadth from the Atlantic ocean to the South sea. Accordingly, in 1638, men were sent to discover the sources of the Merrimack, and found some part of it above Penacook to lie more northerly than forty-three and a half degrees.

In 1652 the General Court of Massachusetts ordered a survey, to ascertain the northern bound of the colony; and for this purpose appointed Captains Edward Johnson and Simon Willard commissioners. Capt. Johnson, accompanied by John Sherman, of Watertown, and Jonathan Ince, of Cambridge, surveyors, together with several Indian guides, went up the river Merrimack, to find the most northerly part thereof, which the Indians told them was A quedocktan, the outlet of lake Winnepissiogee. Capt. Johnson was the author of "The Wonder-Working Providence of Zion's Saviour." John Sherman was the ancestor of the distinguished Roger Sherman, of Connecticut; and Jonathan Ince was a graduate of Harvard college. The surveyors, on the 1st of August, 1652, decided the head source of the Merrimack "where it issues out of the lake called Winnapseakit," to be in "latitude forty-three degrees, forty minutes and twelve seconds, besides those minutes which are to be allowed for the three miles north which run into the lake." At this point, which is now called the Weares, a rock was discovered, a few years since, with its surface but little above the water, and about twenty feet in circumference, on which the following letters were found sculptured:

\begin{array}{c}
\text{E} & \text{I} \\ \text{W} & \text{P} \\
\text{I} & \text{O} \text{H} \\

\text{G} & \text{O} \text{V} \end{array}

Col. Philip Carrigain, of Concord, who carefully examined these letters in 1834, gives the following explanation: "The EI, are the initials of Edward Johnson; SW, of Simon Willard — the two commissioners. WP are on the same line, and immediately precede IOHN ENDICVT, and it is not improbable they stand for worshipful — a title often given, in those Puritanical times, to the governor and magistrates." The surveyors on this expedition passed through Penacook "in a Bote," and occupied nineteen days; and the whole expense attending it was about £84.*

While Massachusetts was thus fixing the bounds of her colony at the head waters of the Merrimack, the General Court of New-Hampshire also had an eye on the same, and claimed that the said territory was within their patent and jurisdiction. This claim of New-Hampshire was founded on a patent obtained by Capt. John Mason, in 1629, "under the common seal of the Council of Plymouth," which conveyed the land "from the middle part of Merrimack river; and from thence, northward, along the sea coast, to Piscataqua river, and up the same to the farthest head thereof; and from thence, north-westward, until sixty miles from the first entrance of Piscataqua river; and also through Merrimack river to the farthest head thereof; and so forward up into the land westward, until sixty miles were finished; and from thence, to cross over land to the end of the sixty miles accounted from Piscataqua river, together with all islands and islets within five leagues distance of the premises." This territory was called New-Hampshire. But, owing to the unsettled state of affairs, the towns settled at this period in New-Hampshire agreed, for their better defence and security, to place themselves under the jurisdiction of Massachusetts;* which continued from 1641 till 1680. Hence, being under one government, in 1659 a petition was presented to the General Court of Massachusetts, by inhabitants of Dover and Newbury, in the words following:

To the Honerd Generall Courte, now assembled at Boston:

The humble petition of us whose names are underwritten, being inhabitants of this jurisdiction, and being senseable of the need of multiplyinge of towneshippes for the inlargement of the contrey, and accommodateinge of such as want opportunity to improve themselves, have taken into consideration a place which is called Pennecooke, which by reporte is a place fit for such an one. Now the humble request of your petitioners to this honred Courte is, that we may have the grant of a tracke of land their to the quantity of twelve miles square, which, being granted, we shall give up ourselves to be at the cost and charge of viewinge it, and consider fully about it, wheather to proceed on for the settleng of a town or noe, and for that end shall crave the liberty of three yeares to give in our resolución; and, in case that wee doe proceed, then our humble request is, that we may have the grant of our freedome from publique charge for the space of seven yeares after the time of our resolution given in to this Honerd Courte for our encourragement to settle a plantation soe furre remote, as knowinge that many will be our inconvenyences (for a long time,) which we must expeckt to meet with, all which desires of ours beinge ansered, your petitioners shall ever pray for the happyness of this Honred Courte, and rest your humble petitioners.

The Deputies approve of the returne of the Committee in answer to this petition, with reference to the consent of the honored magistrates thereto.

6, 3 : 1662 — [that is — May 6, 1662.] Upon informacon that Penicooke is An Apt place for A Township, and in consideration of the lord's great blessing upon the countrie in multiplying the inhabitants and plantations here; and that Allmost All such places are Allreadie taken up: 'Tis ordered by this Court, that the lands at Penicooke be reserved for a plantation till so many of such as have petecioned for lands there or of others shall present to settle A plantation there.

It appears, also, from the records of the Massachusetts colony, that a petition was presented, in 1663, by inhabitants of Chelmsford, for the grant of a township at Penacook. In October, 1663, the court "granted the inhabitants of Salem a plantation of six miles square at Pennecook, if getting twenty families on it within three years."

The conditions not being fulfilled, the foregoing grants, it would seem, were forfeited. In June, 1714 — fifty-one years after their first petition — the people of Salem again petitioned that the grant of a plantation of six miles square to them at Pennecook, in October, 1663, may be confirmed to them. They stated that since the first was made, they had been embarrassed by Indian wars, and that "some of the inhabitants of the town had erected a trading house at Pennicook forty years since." Whether this trading house was the same as that of Waldron and Coffin, in 1668, is not clear; but, from the concurrence in the dates, most likely it was. One trading house, it is believed, stood on the east side, on or near the farm of Judge Sewall.

PETITION FOR PENNYCOOK—1721.

To his Excellency, Samuel Shute, Esq. Capt. Genl. and Govern in Chief in and over His Majesty's Province of the Massachusetts Bay; and to the Hon'ble the Council and House of Representatives in Genl. Court assembled, this 31st day of May, Anno Domini 1721.
The Petition of the subscribers, Inhabitants of the County of Essex —

HUMBLY SHEWETH, That ye Petitioners being straitened for Accommodations for themselves and their posterity, have Espied a tract of Land, situate on the River of Merrimake, (the Great River of the said Country,) whereon they are desirous to make a Settlement and form a Town, if they may obtain the favour and countenance of this Great and Hon'ble Court therein: Yr pet'rs therefore humbly pray this Great and Genl. Court to grant them, under such Restrictions, and on such Conditions as yr Excellency and Honours shall think fit, a Tract of Land for a Township, which lies at the lower end of Pennecook: to begin three miles to the Eastward of Merrimake River, at the place nearest to the mouth of Condunecook [Contoocook] River — to extend to Merrimake River, and over it, to and up Condunecook River, eight miles; from thence, to run Southerly seven miles, paralleled with Merrimake River; and at the End of the 8th seven miles, to run directly to the mouth of Sun coot River; and then up Sun coot River till it comes to the distance of three miles from Merrimake River; and then to, on a Strait Line, to the first mentioned bound and Station: Which Tract of Land is Computed to Contain about the quantity of Eight miles Square, whch Request your petitioners are the more Imboldened and necessitated to make, inasmuch as They are informed the Three Townships last Granted are all laid out and Taken up, and They cannot be accomodated in either of them.

And ye petitioners shall, as in Duty Bound, ever pray.

BEFORE SETTLEMENT.

In the House of Representatives, June 9th, 1724.

Read and Ordered, that Captain Shipley, Col. Buckminster and Mr. Winslow, be a Committee to view the said Land, and to make their Report ye next Session.

Copy Examined per J. WILLARD, Sec'y.

In May, 1722, however, a survey was made of Penacook by William Ward and John Jones, "according to the direction of the committee appointed by the Honorable House of Representatives in ye former sessions"—comprising in the whole 69,500 acres of land. The interval land was 2,000 acres.

This survey—a copy of which I have from the original plan in the Secretary's office, Massachusetts—was as follows:

The south line, crossing the Merrimack river at its junction with Shoo-Brook [Soucook.] was eleven miles, viz.: 1530 perches east, and 1990 west side.

The north line, crossing the Merrimack at "the river called Contucuk or Conduncook"—1450 perches east, and following the course of the Contucuk west.

The east line, drawn from the eastern terminus of the south line to the eastern of the north line, was ten miles.

The west line, drawn from the western terminus of the south line, northerly, till it struck the Contucuk, was 2930 perches, or nine miles and fifty rods.

Another petition was presented June 17, 1725:

To the Honble WM. Dummer, Esq., Lient. Governor, and Commander in Chief in and over His Majesties province of ye Massachusetts Bay, in New England, to the Honble His Majesties Council and House of Representatives in Gen. Court or Assembly convened at Boston, June 17th, 1725.

The petition of Benjt Stephens, Andrew Mitchel, David Kimball, Ebenezer Eastman, John Osgood and Moses Day, a Committee appointed by and in behalf of the petitioners formerly for a Tract of Land at a place called Pennycook—

HUMBLY SHEWETH, That whereas ye petitioners have at two several times petitioned the Great and Genel Court for a grant of the aforesaid tract of Land at Pennycook, with resolutions fully inclined to make a speedy settlement there, wch they conceive, under the divine protection, they are able to go on and through with; and the Honble House of Representatives having been pleased twice so far to take their petition under consideration as to grant the prayer under such conditions as by ye vote of the 3d Honble House may more fully appear, which conditions, though they be expensive, yet ye petitioners have well weighed the same, and would willingly have undertaken the settlement, if it had been the pleasure of the Honble Board to have concurred in the aforesaid vote. But as ye petitioners are informed it did not meet with a concurrence: Wherefore, ye petitioners are emboldened, with great submission, to renew their pet'n to ye Honour, and this Great and Gen'l Court, that you would please to take the premises again into ye wise and serious consideration; and as the building a Fort there will undoubtedly be a great security within and on Merrimack River, and ye your petitioners are still willing to build and maintain it as afore propos'd, at their own cost, ye they may have the countenance and authority of this Court therefor, and that they would pledge to make them a grant of it accordingly.

Ye petit's wou'd also suggest to ye Honours, that many applications have been made to the Government of New Hampshire for a grant of the 3d Land, which, though it be the undoubted right and property of this Province, yet it is highly probable that a parcel of Irish people* will obtain a grant from New Hampshire for it, unless some speedy care be taken by this great and Honble Court to prevent it. If that Government should once make ye a grant, tho' the pet's conceive it wou'd be without right, as in the case of Nutfield, yet it wou'd be a thing attended with too much difficulty to pretend to root ye out, if they shou'd once gett foot hold there. Your petitioners therefore pray that the vote passed by the Honble House may be revived, or that they may have a grant of the Land on such other terms and conditions as to the wisdom of this Court shall seem best. And for ye Hon's, as in duty bound, ye petitioners shall ever pray, &c.

Benj: Stephens,
Andrew Mitchell,
David Kimbel,
Eben* Eastman,
John Osgood,
Moses Day.

In the House of Representatives, June 17th, 1725.

Read, and the question was put whether the House wou'd revive their vote above refer'd to—Resolved in the affirmative.

Copy examined per J. Willard, Sec'y.

*"Irish people," as they were called, from Nutfield, had already built a fort on the east side of the river, as will fully appear in the sequel.
CHAPTER III.

THE PLANTATION OF PENACOOK.

The period had now arrived, in the order of Divine Providence, when the territory which had so long been desired and sought for a settlement, should become the abode of civilized life—when the "wilderness should be made glad," and the desert become vocal with the praises of God. In this chapter we shall narrate all the measures that were adopted for the settlement of the place, and detail every incident of importance that attended the enterprise. While, for the general reader, we give a connected narrative of events, with original documents, anecdotes and illustrations, we would direct particular attention, also, to the Records of the Proprietors,* which were kept with great accuracy and care, and which are exactly copied and transferred to the printed page, except, in some cases, the notifications of

*PROPRIETORS' RECORDS.

THE ORDER OF THE GREAT AND GENERAL COURT.

The committee appointed to consider what is proper for this Court to do on the petition of Benjamin Stevens and others, are humbly of opinion, that it will be for the interest and advantage of this Province that part of the lands petitioned for by the said Benjamin Stevens and company, be assigned and set apart for a township: provided, that the same be done in a good, regular and defensible manner, to contain seven miles square, and begin where Contoocook river falls into Merrimack river, and thence to extend upon a course east seventeen degrees north three miles, and upon a course west seventeen degrees south four miles, to be the northerly bounds of the said township; and from the extreme parts of that line to be set off southerly at right angles, until seven miles shall be accomplished from the said north bounds. And that the petitioners may be encouraged and fully empowered to prosecute their intended settlements—Or-meetings are left out. The records embraced in this chapter extend through the period — about seven years — that Penacook was a plantation, and until incorporated into a township. It will be perceived that the dates of the records are according to the old style, when the year commenced the 25th of March instead of the 1st of January.

The petition of June, 1725, it appears, was successful. On the 17th of January following "the Great and General Court" decided "that it will be for the interest and advantage of this Province, that part of the Lands petitioned for by the said Benjamin Stevens and Company be assigned and set apart for a Township — provided that the same be done in a good, regular and defensible manner — and to contain seven miles square." A committee of nine, of whom the Hon. William Tailer, Esq., Lieutenant Governor of Massachusetts, twenty-seven years, was chairman, and John Wainwright, Esq., clerk, was at the same time appointed by the court to take special care that the rules and conditions on which the grant was made should be punctually observed and kept by all such as shall be admitted as settlers — particularly that the land be allotted and divided into one hundred and three equal parts and shares, as to quantity and quality, and that one hundred persons or families — such only as in the judgment of the committee shall be well able to pursue and bring to pass their several settlements — should be admitted. Each settler to pay five pounds for his lot; be obliged to build a good house for his family within three years; break up and sufficiently fence in six acres of land within the same time; that the houses should be erected within twenty rods of each other, on the home lots, and in a regular and defensible manner; and that a convenient house for the public worship of God should be completely finished within the three years. The settlers were also to pay twenty shillings each for the privilege of admittance, and to defray the whole expense of cutting a road through the wilderness to the plantation; of laying out the land into lots by surveyors and chainmen, and also the charges of the committee of the Great and General Court. The remaining three rights were reserved: one for the first settled minister; one for a parsonage, and one “for the use of the school forever.”

The grant of the township being made, the next object was to begin and carry forward the settlement safely, but as expeditiously as possible. Accordingly, on the 2d of February, 1725, the committee of the General Court met at the house of Mr. Ebenezer Eastman, in Haverhill, for the purpose of admitting settlers. In this matter they proceeded with great care and caution. Persons were not admitted merely because they had petitioned for it; but the committee inquired into their character and their ability to fulfil the conditions. To aid them in this they officially invited some of the principal inhabitants of the towns to which the generality of the petitioners belonged, to attend and give the committee information of the circumstances of the petitioners and others, “in order to the admitting of such as shall be thought most suitable.” After such careful inquiry and examination, the requisite number—one hundred—was admitted. Among this number, as appears in the list on record, were the Rev. Samuel Phillips, of Andover, Rev. Bezaleel Toppan, son of Rev. Christopher Toppan, of Newbury, and Rev. Enoch Coffin, then a young preacher, also of Newbury. The shall be well able to pursue and bring to pass their several settlements on the said lands within the space of three years at farthest from the first day of June next: That each and every intended settler to whom a lot, with the rights and privileges thereto belonging, shall be assigned, shall pay into the hands of the committee, for the use of the Province, at the time of drawing his lot, the sum of five pounds, and be obliged to build a good dwelling-house, fit comfortably to receive and entertain a family who shall inhabit the same; and also break up and sufficiently fence in six acres of land for their home lot, within the term aforesaid: And that the first fifty settlements shall be begun and perfected upon the eastern side of said river Merrimack, and the several houses shall be erected on their home lots not above twenty rods the one from the other, where the land will possibly admit thereof, in the most regular and defensible manner, the committee, in their best prudence, can project and order; the houses and home lots following letters from Rev. Mr. Toppan and Rev. Mr. Phillips will evince the deep interest which was felt in respect to the admission of settlers.

LETTER OF REV. CHRISTOPHER TOPPAN, OF NEWBURY.

NEWB: Febr: 2, 1726.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONORS:

It was my design to have waited on your Honours and the other Gentlemen appointed to be a Committee for Granting Lotts at Penny-Cooke, but being at present bodily Indisposed, durst not venture so far from home, have therefore sent my Son to wait on you, and, in my name, to Request yt you'd be pleased to Grant me or them a Lott amongst the Rest, and the Conditions of yt Grant shall be performed by my Self or them. ——And if your Honours would give me leave, I'd mention a few things relating to the Affair now before you, as

1. That it seems Just yt Consideration be had to one Town as well as another, and that there be some Proportion, in that respect, as to the Number of Persons in each that the Lotts are granted to.

2. That those who have at any time before had Lotts allowed them in any New Township, should be excluded now.

3. That the Persons to whom the Lotts are granted be obliged [if it may be] to keep their Lotts and not sell yt to others, at least not without the leave of the major part of the Society to whom the rest of yt Lotts belong. Some, no doubt, will desire Lotts under no other view than to make gain by Selling of yt afterwards, [and 'tis pity such should have any.] Besides, if the Lotts should be presently bought and sold, it will be likely some of yt at least may fall into the hands of Persons very undesirable for the first Settlement of a place.

4. That the Persons to whom the Lotts are granted be obliged, at their first Settling on the place, to build a Garrison or Block-House for their defence, and so live as near it as with Convenience may be; for it will be very unsafe at first for enny one to build and dwell on his own Lott. This will too much expose yt to yt Indians, in whom little trust is at any time to be putt; besides, we may expect they'l on each side of the river to be alike subjected unto the above-mentioned conditions. That a convenient house for the public worship of God be completely finished within the term aforesaid, for the accommodation of all such as shall inhabit the aforesaid tract of land, upon such part thereof as shall be agreed upon by the aforesaid Committee, for the ease of the community; and that there shall be reserved, allotted, and laid out to the first minister that shall be lawfully settled among them, one full right, share, and proportion of and in the aforesaid tract of land, with all rights and privileges thereto belonging: his house lot to be laid out next adjoining to the land whereon the meeting-house shall stand. One other full right, share, and proportion of and in the aforesaid tract of land, not a little resent it, when ye come to understand that we are Settling upon a former noted Settlement of theirs.

5. That in case the Tract of Land at Penny-Cooke [the Settlement whereof is Designed] was formerly purchased of ye Indians [as I have heard it was, tho' I know not by whom.] it seems but Just that He or They so purchasing, should have reasonable allowance made ym out of the Lotts that shall be granted, as shall be to their satisfaction; for that Right I take to be the best in ye Eye of Conscience, what ever it be in the Eye of the Law; besides, I know not how the Title can fairly be Justified against the Indians, if at any time they should demand it, but under the consideration of a former purchase.

Many other things might have been added, but 'tis not for me to direct your Honours. Begging therefore pardon, for my boldness in offering what I have, I take leave, so Subscribe my Self your Honour's most humble and obedient Servant,

CHRISTOPHER TOPPAN.

SAMUEL PHILLIPS.

The persons who had the honor of being admitted on such conditions as settlers, proceeded with energy, and with entire unanimity, to forward their object. To save the committee of the General Court the trouble and expense of coming again from Boston, upon application of the admitted settlers, another meeting was held on the 7th of February, at which, with the approval of the committee, the settlers unanimously agreed and resolved to fulfil all the conditions and orders of the Court respecting the settlement; and in case of any settler failing to comply with said conditions and orders within two years and a half from the 1st day of June next, such settler shall absolutely forfeit the lot or lots by him drawn, with all the improvements thereon, to the other settlers. Also, it was agreed and resolved "that no alienation of any Lott shall be made without the consent of the Community," on penalty of forfeiting the same. This regulation was in accordance with the suggestion of Rev. Christopher Toppan, and probably with special reference to the exclusion of the "Irish people," against whom a strong prejudice then existed.

At this meeting, moreover, the committee of the court voted to appoint surveyors, and chainmen to attend them when they should go, to allot the said tract of land into one hundred and three shares, according to order; to meet at Dunstable, on the venient time and place, they being seasonably notified of such meeting, who, when assembled, shall make such necessary rules and orders as to them shall be thought most conducive for the carrying forward and effecting the aforesaid settlement; provided, that three fourths of the persons present at such meeting are consenting to what rules or orders shall be then proposed and agreed upon, two or more of the Committee to be present at such meeting, who shall enter into a fair book, to be kept for that purpose, all such rules, orders, and directions agreed on as aforesaid, and give out copies thereof when required; the whole charge of the Committee to be paid by the settlers. And that when they shall have performed the conditions above expressed, provided it 5th of April next, at the house of Col. Tyng, in order to proceed thence to Penacook to lay out the land into lots; that Col. Tyng be desired to prepare fifteen days provisions for twenty men, and that the settlers be notified to pay the sum of forty shillings for defraying the charges of the committee, and "that the money be ready at Col. Tyng's, at Dunstable, on or before the 5th day of April next."

On account of engagements as members of the General Court, the committee found it necessary to postpone the laying out of the lands at Penacook until the second Tuesday (10th) of May, 1726. They then started from Haverhill, with surveyors and chainmen, and "a number of admitted settlers attending them," and proceeded to Penacook and laid out one hundred and three home lots, or divisions, on the west side of the river, instead of the east side, as at first proposed. This was done with consent of the General Court, for reasons assigned, viz.: That "upon view and strict survey of the Lands on the East side of Merrymack, we find that there is little or no water; the Land near the River extream mountainous and almost impassible, and very unfit for and uncapable of receiving fifty families, as the Court has ordered; more especially, considering that near the centre of the Town, on the East side of the River Merrymack, the Honourable Samuel Sewall, Esq., has a farm of Five Hundred acres of good

By order of the Committee. N. Byfield.

In Council, January 17th, 1725. Read and ordered that this Report be accepted. Sent down for concurrence. J. Willard, Sec'y.

Judge Sewall's farm embraced the island known by that name, and the intervals, with some upland east of it, including the farms now owned by Mr. Samuel B. Larkin, Samuel B. and John Locke, and what is known as the Thatcher farm.*

The first survey and laying out of the house and home lots, with the incidents connected therewith, are graphically related in the journal kept by John Wainwright, Esq., clerk of the General Court's committee, of which the following is an exact copy—every word of which is interesting to read.

This afternoon we forded two Brooks or Rivulets, call Great and little, which proceeded from Great Massa Beseck and little Massabesck Ponds and Empty themselves into Merrimack; and about Five a Clock we arrived at a place called Amoskeeg Falls, on Merrimack River, and there Encamped that night.

there came up a smart Thunder Shower, and we had enough to do to save our Bread from the Rain. This Sugar Ball plain is a pretty large Tract of Land, encompassed on all parts with very high and mountainous Land, as steep as the Roof of an House ordinarily: only where the River runs round it, which encompasses the other parts of it. It is altogether impracticable for a Team, or indeed Horse Cart to get on ye plains, ye land is so mountainous round it; and there is no Spring on it, as we could find.

PRESENT,

Agreed and Voted, That some of the principal inhabitants of the towns to which the generality of the petitioners belong, be desired to attend the committee, and inform them of the circumstances of the petitioners and others, in order to the committee's admitting such of them as shall be thought most suitable for bringing forward the settlement of Penny Cook. Capt. John White, Mr. Obadiah Ayer and Capt. Joshua Bayley, of Haverhill; Capt. Benjamin Stevens, Messrs. John Chandler and John Osgood, of Andover; Messrs. Moses Day and David Kimball, of Bradford, did accordingly attend the committee.

Then the committee adjourned till to-morrow morning, ten o'clock.

Then the committee adjourned till to-morrow morning, ten o'clock.

Saturday, Feb. 5th, 1725. At a meeting of the committee: Present as before. The committee further proceeded to admit settlers, and completed the number according to the order of Court. A list whereof follows, each of whom paid men, being first duly Sworn, were appointed to survey the Intervale on ye West side of the River Merrimack, in which Service they severally proceeded. About Twelve of the Clock this day, Messrs Nathl Weare, Richard Waldron, Jun; and Theodore Atkinson, a Committee appointed by the L' Gov't and Council of New Hampshire, came up to our Camp, [being attended with about half a score Irish men, who kept some Distance from the Camp,] and acquainted us that the Governmt of New Hampshire, being informed of our Business here, had sent them to desire us that we would not proceed in appropriating these Lands to any private or particular persons, for that they lay in their Government; and our Governments making a twenty shillings to Mr. Chairman, upon their admittance to pay and defray the charge of the committee, viz.:

The committee received the following application from the admitted settlers, viz.:

To the Honorable Committee of the General Court, for bringing forward the settlement of Penny Cook.

We, the subscribers, being admitted settlers at Penny Cook, and being very desirous that the settlement may be brought forward with the greatest expedition, according to the rules and directions of the General Court, do therefore request that the community may be notified to appear at the house of Mr. Ebenezer Eastman, in Haverhill, on Monday, the seventh day of this instant, February, at twelve of the clock in said day, in order to make such necessary rules and orders as shall be thought most conducive for the bringing forward our intended settlements, agreeable to the order of Court.

And the committee having considered thereof, and for the avoiding considerable charge to the settlers, did concede to make the following order, viz.:
ment would be always ready to Support and Justifie their own Grants, and that it was the Bisness of the publck and not ours to Engage in, in order to determine any Controversy about the Lands. We sent our Salutes to the Lt Govt of New Hampshire, and the Gent took their Leave of us and w homeward this afternoon. The Surveyors and Chainmen returned to us in Safety about Sun down. Fair Weather.

Sabbath day, May 15th This day Mt Enoch Coffin, our Chaplain, performed divine Service both parts of the day. Fair and Cool.

At a meeting of the committee for bringing forward the settlement at Penny Cook —

PRESENT,

Agreed and Voted, That proper notifications be given to the intended settlers now admitted, to assemble and convene in order for the making the necessary rules and orders, and at the time and place as within mentioned and requested.

Dated at Haverhill, February ye 5th, 1725.

Then the clerk published the said order to the settlers. Then the committee adjourned till Monday, ye 7th curr't, at 10 o'clock before noon.

Monday, February ye 7th, 1725. At a meeting of the committee — present, the same as last.

Agreed and Voted, That there be two surveyors and four chainmen to attend the committee upon the next adjournment, to allot out the said tract of land into one hundred and three equal parts and shares, according to the order of the General Court.

The settlers came into the following orders and rules for their future regulation and proceedings in their intended settlement, viz.:

At a meeting of the subscribers, admitted settlers of the land at Penny Cook, held at the house of Mr. Ebenezer Eastman, in Haverhill, the seventh day of February, 1725, the committee of the General Court for bringing forward the said settlement being present, and the subscribers being duly notified, the following rules and orders were unanimously agreed on and resolved, viz.: That the settlers will well and truly fulfil the conditions and orders of the Great and General Court for bringing forward the settlement at Penny Cook to all intents and purposes; and for the effectual accomplishing the same, it is agreed and resolved, That such and so many of the intended settlers as shall fail of plowing, fencing or clearing of one acre of land within twelve months from the first day of June next, shall each of them forfeit and pay to the community or settlers the sum of five pounds, to be used and employed for their service as they shall direct and order.

In ease of failure of complying with the aforesaid article for bringing forward the intended settlement within two years from the said first day of June, and of Monday, May 16th This morning at Sun Rising, according to Notification, we choose a Representative, nem con., viz.; M' Jos. Sanders. Early this morning the Surveyors and Chainmen went out to their Business respectively. Four of the Company that came out with us returned to Haverhill this day. At night the Surveyors returned. M' Houghton's Company brought in a Bever. M' Hazzen's acquainted us they had caught a Hedge Hogg. Fine clear Weather.

Tuesday, May 17th This morning Early M' Houghton and Company went over to the West side of the River, in order to run the Line of the Town on that side, and took two days' provision. M' Bacheldor and Company went on with Surveying the Interval on ye East side of the River. M' Hazzen and Company went on with Surveying ye Interval on ye West side of ye River. At Night the two last Surveyors and their Companys returned, and gave an acco't that they had Surveyed the Interval on each side of the River. M' Bacheldor informed the Committee that he was of opinion that Gov. Endecott's Grant of 500 Acres of Land claimed by the Hon'ble Judge Sewall, lay on ye Interval on the East side the River; that he discovered an Island in ye River very much like that in the plan of ye s'd 500 acre Grant. Fair pleasant Weather.

Each settler having a sufficiency of timber felled, hauled, and adapted for building his house within six months after the direction of the committee of the General Court for building the same, such defective settler or settlers shall forfeit and pay the sum of ten pounds each, to be used and employed as aforesaid.

And in case of any settler or settlers failing to comply with the orders and directions enjoined him or them respectively, by the General Court, for bringing forward and effectually completing the settlement within two years and a half from the said first day of June next, such settler or settlers shall absolutely forfeit the lot or lots by him or them drawn, with all the improvements that shall be made thereon to the other settlers; and in such case it shall be in the power of the other settlers, with the consent of the committee of the General Court, to appoint and admit such person or persons to bring forward the settlements or allotments of the deficient persons as aforesaid, as may be judged will effectually bring forward the settlements according to the Court's order.

Agreed and Resolved, That no alienation of any lot shall be made without the consent of the community; and if any of the intended settler or settlers shall alienate his or their lots or settlements, to any person or persons, without the consent of the community first had and obtained, such sale shall be declared void of itself, and the settler that shall so pretend to alienate his lot shall forfeit the same to the community.

Agreed and Voted, That Messrs. Timothy Johnson, Moses Day and Joshua Bayley be a committee, in the name of the settlers, to wait on the Honorable Committee of the General Court for giving out notifications proper for the settlers to assemble and convene for the future, as shall hereafter be thought necessary.

Agreed and Voted, That Mr. Obadiah Ayer be desired and empowered, in the Wednesday, May ye 18th. This morning Early some of ye Committee went over to ye West side of the River with M. Hazzen and Company, and some of them with M. Batcheldor and Comp, to lay out the Home Lotts according to the order of ye General Court. On ye West side the Committee and Surveyor met with Great Difficulty to find a tract large enough to lay out the Number of Lotts and their contents agreeable to the Court’s Act, but at length agreed they should be lay’d out on the Great Interval, over against Sugar Plain and the Land next adjoining thereto, having first made a Beginning on the Upland next adjoining to the Interval: but found it impracticable if not impossible to lay out the Land there into Six Acre Lotts so as to be fenced and broken up within Three Years: the con-name of the settlers, to examine the General Court’s Records, and see if there be any former grant made of any of the lands now granted and ordered to be settled at Penny Cook, and report to the settlers at their next meeting.

PRESENT,

The Honorable William Tailer, Esqr., John Wainwright, Esqr., Capt. John Shipley, Mr. John Sanders, Eleazar Tyng, Esq., and Mr. Joseph Wilder.

The committee, with the surveyors and chainmen, and a number of the admitted settlers attending them, proceeded to Penny Cook, and laid out one hundred and three home lots or divisions on the west side of the river, in equal proportion, according to quantity and quality, as near as the land would admit thereof, agreeable to the order and last direction of the Great and General Court, and then they returned to Haverhill, to receive the payment of two hundred pounds, to defray the charges of the survey of the town and laying out the home lots, as above said, and the said committee defrayed the said charges accordingly.

The settlers of the township at Penny Cook are hereby notified and warned to assemble and convene at the house of Mr. Francis Crumpton, at Ipswich, on Tuesday, the sixth day of September, at eleven of the clock before noon, to draw their respective lots according to the General Court's order, and raise the sum of one hundred pounds, to defray the charge of laying out a way to the township, and other necessary charges, which may be thought reasonable to be allowed.

By order of the committee: John Wainwright, C. Clerk.

Boston, August ye 27th, 1726.

The settlers came into the following orders and rules for the bringing forward and effecting the settlement which the committee received from them, viz.:

At a meeting of the proprietors of the town of Penny Cook, assembled at Ipswich, September ye 7th, 1726—

Agreed and Voted, That Capt. Benjamin Stevens, Esqr., be and is appointed treasurer, to receive of the Honorable General Court's committee the money which they have received from said admitted settlers, and not expended in defraying their own charges, the said money to be disposed of in marking out and clearing a way to Penny Cook.

Agreed and Voted, That there shall be three men chosen a committee to go out and clear a sufficient cart way to Penny Cook, the highest and best way they can from Haverhill. For said committee were chosen, Ensn. John Chandler, of Andover; John Ayer, of Haverhill, and Mr. William Barker, of Andover.

Agreed and Voted, That the said committee be paid out of the money which may be in the treasurer's hands, so far as that will go, [for their said service,] the remainder, if any be wanting, to be defrayed by the community.

Agreed and Voted, That Mr. Obadiah Ayer be paid out of the treasury forty shillings, money for his service in searching the province records, in order to find out any former grant of Penny Cook.

Agreed and Voted, That Mr. Obadiah Ayer make application to the Honorable General Court at their next session in behalf of the admitted settlers of Penny Cook, in order to have the five hundred pounds abated, and the five hundred acres, [being an equivalent for Mr. Sewall's farm,] added to said township.

The settlers completed their payment of twenty shillings each, making in the whole the sum of one hundred pounds to Mr. Chairman, inclusive of what orders were given to their treasurer for the delinquents to pay him.

After some short tarry we set out for Nutfield, and in our way there we over took abundance of the Irish with loaded horses returning from Amoskeeg, and met a many of them going to the Falls for their Loads. About two a'Clock, afternoo, we arrived at Johny Barr's, at Nutfield, where we refreshed our Selves and our Horses, and made a considerable tarry there, and then sot out for Haverhill. We stoped a little while at Providence Brook, and about Sun down we arrived at M'. Eastman's in Safety, by Divine protection. M' Bachelдор, the Surveyor, came back with us.

Timothy Johnson and others, for their perusal and examination, and that they report their opinion to Benjamin Stevens, Esqr., of Andover, treasurer to the settlers, what charges ought to be allowed and paid, who is hereby ordered and directed to pay the same accordingly out of the settlers' money in his hands.

Agreed and Voted, That the Honorable William Tailer, Esqr., William Dudley, Esqr., and John Wainwright, Esqr., be desired to meet at the dwelling-house of Benjamin Stevens, Esqr., in Andover, on Tuesday, the seventh day of February next, in order to receive of each settler a bond, with sufficient surety, for the sum of five pounds, that so they may draw their respective lots, and proceed on the premises granted, and effectually bring forward the said settlement, according to the grant of the General Court.

Attest: John Wainwright, C. Clerk.

At a meeting of the committee for bringing forward the settlement of the township at Penny Cook, held at Andover, the 7th and 8th of February, 1726:

Present,

The committee proceeded to take a bond of five pounds from each of the admitted settlers, under hand and seal respectively, for the payment of five hundred pounds for the use of this province, when the General Court shall order the committee to demand the same of them, on penalty of forfeiting their title and interest, &c., in and to the lands respectively, as by the said bonds lodged in the hands of Mr. Chairman, and the clerk may fully appear, reference being there-unto had.

The committee then allowed the settlers to draw their lots, which was accordingly done, as appears by the following list of their names and the lots entered to them:

In obedience to an order of His Hon., the Lieut Govt, and the Honble the Council, made the 10th Instant, appointing us a Committee, with directions to repair immediately to Pennecook and forewarn any persons whom we might find there from laying out or settling upon that place or any other of His Majesty's lands within this Govern't, as by the 2d order will more at large and fully appear. The settlers came into the following orders, votes and rules, for the more speedy bringing forward and securely effecting the settlement, which were presented to the committee for their consideration, and allowed and approved of by them.

At a general meeting of the intended settlers of a tract of land called Penny Cook, held at Andover the eighth day of February, Anno Domini 1726, Agreed and Voted, That a block house of twenty-five feet in breadth and forty feet in length, be built at Penny Cook for the security of the settlers.

Agreed and Voted, That John Chandler, Moses Hazzen, Nehemiah Carlton, Nathan Simonds and Ebenezer Stevens, be a committee, and they are hereby empowered to build, either by themselves, or to agree with workmen to build, a block house of twenty-five feet in breadth, and forty feet in length, as in their judgment shall be most for the security of the settlers.

Agreed and Voted, That Benjamin Stevens, Esq., be treasurer for the settlers.
therein would be at their peril; for that they might depend upon it when the controversial boundary between the two Provinces should be determined, the poor misled people who might be induced to settle there under the colour of a Mass. Grant would be dispossessed of the said lands, or suffer some other inconveniences equally grievous, and that the message on which we were sent, and the fair forewarning they had by us, would take away all occasions of complaint when they should be compelled to leave the said lands and lose the benefit of their improvement.

To which the gentlemen above named were pleased to reply, that as we were sent by the Govern'r of N. Hampshire, so were they by the Govern'r of Mass., and that when they returned home they shall lay before their Gen. Assembly the order of Coun. which we had delivered them, who without doubt would pass thereon, as they, the said Gen'r Assembly, should think proper.

Dated at Portsmouth, the 18th May, 1726.

On the 28th June, 1726, Mr. Dummer, agent in London, was instructed by the government of Massachusetts "to take care and answer any complaint" that New-Hampshire might send home against the grant of Penacook, lately made; and he was furnished Agreed and Voted, That Timothy Johnson, John Osgood and Moses Day, be chosen, appointed and empowered to examine the charges that shall arise in building a block house at the place called Penny Cook, or any other charges that shall arise in the bringing forward the settlement, and to allow, as in their judgment shall be just and equal, and also to draw money out of the treasury for the defraying of said charges.

Agreed and Voted, That the sum of one hundred pounds be raised and paid by the settlers into the hands of Benjamin Stevens, Esqr., treasurer for defraying the charges that are past, or that shall necessarily arise in bringing forward the intended settlement, to be paid in to said Benja. Stevens, Esqr., by the first day of March next, in equal proportion.

Enoch Coffin dissented.

Agreed and Voted, That a committee of five persons on oath, three whereof to be a quorum, be chosen out of the number of the intended settlers, to lay out the remaining part of the interval at the place called Penny Cook, that is not yet laid out, so that the whole of the interval already laid out, or to be laid out to the settlers, shall be equal in quantity and quality.

Agreed and Voted, That John Chandler, Henry Rolfe, William White, Richard Hazzen, junr., and John Osgood, be a committee, chosen and empowered to lay out the interval at the place called Penny Cook, that is not yet laid out, so with the necessary papers. And, on the 8th of August, Mr. Henry Newman, agent of New-Hampshire, addressed the following letter

To the Right Honorable, the Lords Commrs. of Trade and Plantations.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR LORDSHIPS:

I have just now received Letters from New-Hampshire complaining of the encroachment of the Massachusetts Province, by selling, granting and laying out great quantities of land near the centre of the Province of New-Hampshire, at a place called Penneecook.

I have some time since lodged in the Council Office, to be laid before his Majesty, a Memorial, requesting that the boundaries of these Provinces may be settled, so as to prevent any future disputes between their respective governments, which I presume will be referred to your Lordships; but as that may require time to be considered, I humbly beg your Lordships would be pleased, in the meanwhile, to interpose your authority for securing his Majesty's interest in the Province of New Hampshire, from any detriment by the grants already made, and for suspending all grants of land on or near the boundaries in dispute, till his Majesty's pleasure therein shall be known.

I am, with the greatest respect,

Your Lordship's most obedient,

Humble servant,

that the whole of the interval already laid out or to be laid out to the settlers shall be equally divided among them as to quantity and quality.

Agreed, That Jonathan Hubbard be admitted a settler in place of Daniel Davis, who was admitted a settler of Penny Cook by the Honorable General Court's Committee, appointed to admit persons to settle Penny Cook.

Agreed and Voted, That three pence per tail for every rattlesnake's tail, the rattlesnake being killed within the bounds of the township granted at Penny Cook, be paid by the intended settlers; the money to be paid by the settlers' treasurer, upon sight of the tail.

By the Committee of the General Court — Agreed and Voted, That Mr. Richard Hazzen, junr., be desired to draw a plan of the township of Penny Cook, at the charge of the settlers, to be annexed to the town's book, for the use thereof.

The committee adjusted the accounts of the sum of four hundred pounds they received of the settlers, the balance of which, being forty-nine shillings and five pence, was lodged in the hands of the clerk.

Agreed and Voted, That the settlers petition to the General Court about settling on the west side, founded on the report of the committee with the order of Court thereof, allowing their settlement on the west side of the river to be recorded, which is in the words following:

The committee appointed by the Great and General Court, in their session

* From the original in the Secretary's office.
At a meeting held at Ipswich, on the 9th of September, 1726, Ens. John Chandler, John Ayer and William Barker were chosen a committee of the proprietors "to go out and clear a sufficient cart-way to Penny Cook — the nighest and best way they can from Haverhill." Richard Hazzen, also, was one who went "to search out a way from the place where Chester meeting-house stands to Penny Cook, and mark the same." This way was partly cleared during the fall, and, according to tradition, several persons, among whom were Henry Rolfe and Richard Urann, passed the winter of 1726 in the settlement — suffering severely from the cold, and for want of suitable provisions; and that they were relieved by the aid of friendly Indians who still dwelt there.

In January, 1726, (the reader will bear in mind that this is old style — the year then commencing the 25th of March,) the committee of the Court, having taken a bond of five pounds from each of the admitted settlers for their lots, to be paid on demand, begun and held in November last, to bring forward a settlement and admit one hundred persons therein on a tract of land lying on Merrimack river, at a place there known by the name of Penny Cook, and having given sufficient notice for any persons that were ready and would engage in the settlement, to meet the committee at Haverhill, the first week in February last. The committee at that time and place admitted one hundred persons or grantees into the said tract or grant, giving preference to the petitioners that appeared to us the most suitable therefor. And in May last we proceeded to the place, in order to lay out the whole township, and the lots directed in the order of the General Court, beginning at the mouth of Contoocook river, where that joins Merrimack river, and thence run a line east seventeen degrees north, three miles, and upon a course west seventeen degrees south, four miles, and so at right angles at the extremes of each of the aforesaid lines, seven miles southerly each, and thence from the termination of the seven miles which complete the grant, and is according thereto; and upon view and strict survey of the lands on the east side of Merrimack, we find that there is little or no water, the land near the river extreme mountainous and almost impassable, and very unfit for and incapable of receiving fifty families, as the Court has ordered; more especially considering that near the centre of the town on the east side of the river Merrimack the Honorable Samuel Sewall, Esqr., has a farm of five hundred acres of good land, formerly granted by this Court, and laid out to Gov'r Endicott. The committee, therefore, with submission to the Honorable General Court, thought it advisable, and accordingly have laid out one hundred and three lots of land for settlements on the west side, contiguous to each other, regularly, and in a defensible manner, as by the plat of them and of the whole grant, [which is hereby presented,] will appear; and inasmuch as the generality of the land answers not the grantees' then allowed the settlers to draw their lots, which resulted as stated in the list presented above in the records. The figures represent the house and six acre home lots. Thus—"Enoch Coffin, N. 36, 26," means that Enoch Coffin drew house lot number thirty-six, and home lot—six acres—number twenty-six. All the house and home lots recorded in the list were on the west side of the river. By reference to the map at the close of this chapter—drawn from original plans, and carefully arranged by Stephen C. Badger, Esq.—the primitive house and home lots may be identified, and their exact location determined. The ranges—such as "2d range," "Island range," "3d range," "Lowest range," &c.—are explained on the map.

The lots being drawn, the proprietors, at a meeting in Andover, on the 8th of February, 1726, voted to build a block-house, twenty-five feet in breadth and forty feet in length, which should serve the double purpose of a fort and a meeting-house. Then, to meet and defray all expenses as they went along—or, rather, in advance,—they agreed to raise and pay into the hands of their Treasurer, Benjamin Stephens, Esq., the sum of one hundred pounds by the first day of March, in equal proportion; chose a committee to lay out the remainder of the interval "that is not yet laid out"—including all on the east side, and a portion also on the west side. In the records this is called "The Second Division of Intervale at Penny Cook."* This division was surveyed and laid out in May, 1727, by Richard Hazzen, Jr., surveyor, and was accepted by the Court's committee in the following March. The division on the east side comprised

Twenty-four lots on the Mill Brook Interval, first range;
Twelve lots on the Mill Brook Interval, second range;
Sixteen lots on the Sugar Ball Plain;
Twenty-eight lots on the Middle Plain;
"Which lots were numbered from the upper end down Merri-mack river."

Haverhill, warning them to assemble and convene at the house of John Griffin, in Bradford, inn-holder, on Wednesday, the sixth day of March next, at ten of the clock before noon, then and there to receive the return of the committee of the settlers to lay out a way, &c., from Haverhill to Penny Cook, and to settle accounts with the treasurer, and to take effectual measures to oblige any settlers to pay the arrears of any former grants of money for the bringing forward the settlement, if any such there be, and generally empowering the settlers at said anniversary meeting to come into such good and wholesome rules, votes and orders for the speedy and effectual settlement of the said town, agreeable to the conditions of the grant thereof from the General Court, as they may then judge proper and necessary:—provided there be two at least of the General Court's committee present at the said meeting, and approving of the votes the settlers shall then pass before they are entered in the town book.

[The meeting of the admitted settlers was held at the house of John Griffin, in Bradford, agreeable to notification, March 6, 1727.]

*See Records, Mar. 7, 1727-8, and explanation at the close of this chapter.
The division of the Lowest Interval, on the east side, in which the "lots were numbered from the town line up Merrimack river, consisted of thirty-one lots, with a drift-way of three rods wide through the westerly end of the thirty-first lot.

In the same "Second Division" were included seventeen lots on "Rattle-snake Plains," numbered up the river; sixteen lots at "Frogg Ponds," together with lots to several individuals, as appears in the record. No plan being found of the lots in the Second Division, they cannot easily, if at all, be identified. By reference to the annexed list the quantity of lands and their locality, as designated by particular names, may be seen.

The section called "Rattle-snake Plains" included the interval lands from "Farnum's Eddy," so called, to the hills and bluffs which border the river, north-east of West Parish village. The Agreed and Voted, That Solomon Martin be admitted a settler in the place of Nathaniel Barker's right, who, refusing to pay his proportionable charge, the same was paid by the said Solomon Martin to the treasurer, the 8th of Feb'ry last.

Agreed and Voted, That the sum of twenty-six pounds be allowed and paid out of the settlers' treasury to the persons to whom the same is respectively due, to discharge the account of laying out the second division of interval.

Agreed and Voted, That the sum of one hundred and thirteen pounds seventeen shillings be allowed and paid out of the treasury to the persons to whom the same is respectively due, for building the block house, making canoes, &c., in full discharge of said accounts.

Agreed and Voted, That Ebenezer Eastman, Joseph Hall and Abraha Foster be a committee appointed and empowered to amend the new way to Penny Cook from Haverhill, and to fence in all the first division of interval,—the said fence to begin at the corner of John Peabody's house lot next the river, and so to run along the foot of the home lots to Horse Shoe Pond, where a gate is to hang; then to begin at the corner of David Wood's house-lot by the pond, and thence to the upper end of Walter Nummons' field, along by the hill side, and there hang a gate, or leave a pair of bars,—each proprietor to have liberty to fence in his proportion, or else to pay the committee for doing it,—which fence shall be erected and finished by the last day of May next. The eleven lots in the lowest interval are excepted out of this vote, and any person who neglects to make up his proportion of fence by the aforesaid time, he shall pay ten shillings per day to the committee who makes it up.

Agreed and Voted, That the committee aforesaid shall set out each settler's proportion of fence by the middle of May next.

Agreed and Voted, That Messrs. Joseph Hall and John Pecker be a committee empowered to agree with a minister to preach at Penny Cook the year ensuing, to begin the service from the fifteenth day of May next. The said committee are directed to act with all prudence, and not assure the gentleman hill west of this interval was formerly called Rattle-snake Hill — now more commonly known as Granite Hill. Three pence per tail was offered as a reward by the settlers for every rattlesnake's tail that should be killed within bounds of the township — to be paid "upon sight of the tail."

Richard Hazzen, Jr., who surveyed the "Second Division," was desired by the committee of the General Court "to draw a plan of the Township of Penny Cook, at the charge of the settlers, to be annexed to the Town's Book;" but no such plan is now to be found. The tradition is, that he drew the plan, but, on account of some misunderstanding about the pay for it, he burnt it up. In a deposition given by Mr. Hazzen, in 1752, he says — "That during the time he was laying out said lots there was constantly near fifty of the Proprietors of said Plantation at work, or persons whom they hired, as he understood more than after the rate of one hundred pounds per annum for his services, and to make report of their proceedings to the settlers.

Agreed and Voted, That the sum of one hundred pounds be forthwith raised on the settlers in equal proportion, and put into the hands of the treasurer for defraying the necessary charges that have already arisen, or which shall hereafter arise for effecting the settlement.

Adjourned to three o'clock, post meridian.

Agreed and Voted, That Ebenezer Stevens, Moses Hazzen, John Coggin and Benjamin Carlton, be, and are hereby empowered, appointed and chosen collectors, to demand and receive of the settlers respectively, as soon as may be, all such sums and sums as have been raised on said settlers and not paid by them or any of them, according to the grants for raising the money; and the said collector or collectors are hereby constituted and appointed attorney or attorneys respectively, if need be, in the name and behalf and for the use of the settlers, to sue for and recover in the law the sum or sums raised on any settler or settlers as aforesaid, who shall neglect to pay the same; and the said collectors are directed to pay the money they collect unto the treasurer, the charge of collection to be paid by the settlers.

Agreed and Voted, That Deacon John Osgood be chosen treasurer, and is hereby empowered to adjust accounts with Benjamin Stevens, Esqr., the former treasurer, and receive of him any money which he has received of any settler or settlers, and not yet paid out.

Agreed and Voted, To pay Deacon Osgood and Capt. Rolfe, out of the treasury, twenty shillings for the charge in preferring a petition to the General Court in behalf of settlers.

Agreed and Voted, That the treasurer be empowered and directed to pay to John Wainwright, Esqr., clerk to the committee, according to law, for recording all the votes of this present meeting, upon his certificate of the charge.

Some were building the Meeting House; some were clearing and fencing in their lots, and others were plowing up their land: and that Ebenezer Eastman, one of the Proprietors, worked constantly in said Plantation during the whole time he was there, laying out lands." According to tradition, Ebenezer Eastman's team — six yoke of oxen, with a cart — was the first that crossed the wilderness from Haverhill to Penacook. It was driven by Jacob Shute, who, in order to get safely down Sugar Ball bank, felled a pine tree and chained it, top foremost, to his cart, to stay the motion of it down the precipice.

While the proprietors of Penacook were thus vigorously bringing forward their plantation, under the auspices of the Great and General Court of Massachusetts, the government of New-Hampshire, on the 20th of May, 1727, made a grant to Jonathan Wiggin and others, of the tract comprised within the following Received of John Wainwright, Esqr., clerk to the committee of the General Court, appointed to bring forward the settlement of Penny Cook, March 7th, 1727, the sum of two pounds, nine shillings and five pence, being the balance of an account of four hundred pounds paid by the said settlers of Penny Cook at sundry times to the said committee, which account was adjusted at a meeting of the settlers, held at Andover, the 8th of February, 1726, and the said balance was then lodged in the said Wainwright's hands, as appears by the Penny Cook book.

 bounds, viz.: "Beginning on the south-east side of the town of Chichester, and running nine miles by Chichester and Canterbury, and carrying that breadth of nine miles from each of the aforesaid towns, south-west, until the full complement of eighty-one square miles are fully made up." This grant, covering the greater part, both of Concord and Pembroke, and a part of Hopkinton, gave rise to a vexatious controversy between the claimants under each grant, which was continued from 1750 till 1762, of which we shall speak in full hereafter.

Robert Bradley, Esq., of Fryeburg, relates that his grandfather, Samuel Ayer, when a young man of eighteen years of age, drove a team of six or ten pairs of oxen from Haverhill to Penacook, with a barrel of pork; that on reaching Sugar Ball hill, he took off all but the hind team, and let the cart down the hill by fastening to it a pine tree, which was cut down and

At a meeting of the admitted settlers to bring forward the settlement of the township of Penny Cook, began and held at the house of John Griffin, innholder, in Bradford, the 6th day of March, Anno Domini 1727, and from thence continued by adjournment to Wednesday, the fifteenth day of May, then next following, at ten of the clock, and held at the block house in Penny Cook—Capt. Henry Rolfe, moderator, being present,

Voted, That Capt. Henry Rolfe, Messrs. Ebenezer Eastman and James Mitchell be a committee to agree with some person or persons to build a saw mill at Penny Cook, at some suitable place for a mill, and to oblige the persons who shall build the same to supply the town with good merchantable boards of yellow pine at thirty shillings per thousand, and good merchantable white pine boards at forty shillings per thousand,—or else to saw of each sort to the halves; the said mill to be ready to go and cut within six months; and to agree with some person or persons to erect and build a grist mill at Penny Cook, in some place convenient for the same, and to oblige the persons with whom they shall agree, to grind the town's corn of all sorts, well and free from grit, for the usual toll; said mill to be ready to go and grind within one year from this day, or as much sooner as they can. The said committee are to indent and agree with persons to build said mills upon the conditions following, viz.: That as soon as said mills are built, fifty pounds in bills of credit shall be paid by the community to the builders of the saw mill, and fifty pounds more to the builders of the grist mill; and, secondly, to lay out fifty acres of land to the said saw mill, as convenient as may be, and also fifty acres more to the said grist mill, to be laid out as convenient as may be. And lastly, that the persons that shall build said mills shall be entitled to the said lands and also the stream or streams upon which the said mills shall stand and be, so long as they are kept in good repair, and the end and design of the town in having said mills built answered. And in case the said committee cannot find persons that will undertake to build the

In swimming the oxen across the river to the west side, one ox was drowned, but was immediately dressed for beef. Young Ayer is supposed to be the first person who ploughed a field in Penacook. He started, on his return to Haverhill, at sunrise, and did not arrive there till midnight. It is conceded that Ebenezer Eastman's family was the first that settled in Penacook in 1727.

The proprietors were exact in requiring each one to bear his part of expenses, as they were incurred; and in case of refusing to do this, the right to a settlement was forfeited. Hence Solomon Martin was admitted a settler in place of Nathaniel Barker; and, subsequently, (1730,) William Whitcher, Nathaniel Sanders, Thomas Coleman and Thomas Wicome, forfeited their rights, and their lots were taken by Joseph Gerrish, Henry

Agreed upon and Voted, That Mr. Ebenezer Eastman, Mr. Abraham Foster and Mr. Joseph Hall shall be a committee to agree with some suitable person to keep a ferry on Merrimack river at Penny Cook, in the most convenient place they can find for that purpose; and that they lay out and clear the best way they can to the ferry place, and after they have stated the place where the said ferry shall be kept, that the ferry-men shall have and receive the prices following, viz.: For ferrage of each man and horse, six pence; for each horned beast, four pence; and this establishment to remain and be in force for six years.

Agreed upon and Voted, That Capt. Henry Rolfe, Mr. Ebenezer Eastman and James Mitchell be empowered to exchange Samuel Jones's house lot to some more convenient place, there being no conveniency for water where the lot is now laid.

Agreed upon and Voted, That this meeting be adjourned to the house of Mr. Griffin, in Bradford, on the last Tuesday of October next, at nine of the clock in the forenoon.

The spring of 1728 opened upon the new plantation with most favorable auspices. Eager to fulfill the conditions of their grant, and to become settled in their chosen home, a large number of the proprietors were early engaged in building houses; clearing, fencing and plowing their lands. The block, or meeting-house, was finished; canoes constructed for navigating the river; the new-way to Pennycook from Haverhill was improved, and the First Division of interval ordered to be completely fenced by the last of May. Messrs. Joseph Hale and John Pecker were chosen a committee to agree with a minister to preach at Pennycook — to begin the 15th of May, — but they were not to Andover, December the 10th, 1728.

To the Honorable Committee for Penny Cook:

Whereas those men which have been empowered for building the meeting-house at Penny Cook, and laying out land, are kept out of their money, are in want of it, and they can't come at it:

We, the subscribers, humbly pray that a meeting be appointed for the community and society of Penny Cook, to consult some way and method how every man may come by his just dues, and also to see if they can come into some way and method to preserve their corn,— we received great damage the last year in our corn for want of fence,— and also to see whether those men that first went to wait upon the Honorable Committee to Penny Cook may have allowance for their service therein, and to do such other matters as may be thought necessary for the interest of the settlers.

Due notification being issued upon this petition, 1729, N. S.

At a meeting of the settlers of Penny Cook, regularly assembled at Andover, the 8th day of January, Anno Domini 1728, at the said meeting were present the Honorable William Tailer, Esqr., John Wainwright, Esqr., and Mr. John Saunders, of the General Court's Committee.

Voted, That Ens'n John Chandler be moderator of this meeting.

Voted, That Benja. Stevens, Esq., be chosen and empowered to prefer a petition to the Honorable General Court in behalf of the settlers of Penny Cook,

"assure the gentleman more than after the rate of one hundred pounds per annum for his service."

In answer to a petition presented by John Osgood, in behalf of the settlers,—praying that an allowance might be made them for the five hundred acres formerly laid out to the right of Gov. Endicott—the General Court, on the 6th of August, this year, authorized them "to extend the south bounds of the township one hundred rods, the full breadth of their town," and the same was confirmed to them as an "equivalent for the aforesaid five hundred acres."

Arrangements were also made for building a saw-mill within six months, a grist-mill within one year, and to establish a ferry at the most convenient place. The first grist-mill stood at or near the bark-mill now owned by Robinson & Morrill, in the East Village, and the saw-mill, on the same stream, about half a mile above. The mill-crank was brought upon a horse from Hathat they will be pleased to declare the said township to lie in the county of Essex, or some county.

Voted, That the sum of six pounds be allowed and paid out of the settlers' treasury to the Honorable Col. Tailer, and Col. Wainwright, Esqrs., for their service in the Penny Cook affair, January 8th,1728-9, and Deacon John Osgood, the present treasurer, is directed to pay the same accordingly.

Voted, That the meeting be adjourned to the house of Mr. John Griffin, in Bradford, to Wednesday, the twelfth day of March next, at nine of the clock before noon.

Attest:

JOHN WAINWRIGHT, C. Clerk.

Upon adjournment on the twelfth day of March, 1728, the proprietors and settlers of the lands called Penny Cook met at the house of Mr. John Griffin, in Bradford, and the moderator, Ensign John Chandler, opened the meeting.

Voted, That a good and substantial fence, according to law, be made, so as to enclose the great interval, and secure the corn and mowing grass from the encroachment of cattle, horses, &c., and that the said fence be made at the charge of the proprietors in said field in equal shares or parts, except Mr. John Ayer, who is excused for that he has no improvable land on the west side of the river, and that the said fence be made up and finished, completely finished, on or before the fifteenth day of May next.

Voted, That Messrs. Ebenezer Eastman, Ebenezer Stevens, John Chandler, John Pecker and Nathan Simonds, be a committee to view the fence and see that the same be made sufficient, according to law, and maintained accordingly; and in case any one shall refuse to make and maintain his part of the fence, it shall and may be in the power of the committee to hire the fence made at the verhill. Soon after commencing operations the crank was broken. How to remedy the evil they knew not, as there was no blacksmith nearer than Haverhill. One of the men, who had once been in a blacksmith's shop and seen them work, undertook to mend it. Collecting together a quantity of pitch-pine knots for a fire, they fastened the crank with beetle rings and wedges, and then welded the disjointed parts. The crank was afterwards used many years. For the grist-mill fifty pounds were allowed, and fifty acres of land granted to Nathan Symonds, as near to the mill as was convenient.

It appears from the records that Rev. Bazaleel Toppan and Rev. Enoch Coffin, both of whom were proprietors, had been employed to preach to the settlers. The first was allowed and paid thirty shillings in full discharge for his services; and "the heirs charge of the delinquent, and every such delinquent shall pay ten shillings per diem for every laborer who shall be employed and hired by said committee to make or repair such delinquent's fence.

Voted, That fourteen pounds, two shillings, be allowed and paid unto the several men who have laid their account before us for mending the highways to Penny Cook, in full discharge of said accounts.

Voted, That Mr. Bezaliel Toppan be allowed and paid out of the proprietors' treasury, for preaching and performing divine service at Penny Cook, thirty shillings in full discharge.

Voted, That the sum of four pounds be allowed and paid unto the heirs of the Reverend Enoch Coffin, deceased, for his preaching and performing divine service at Penny Cook, in full discharge.

Then the proprietors by unanimous vote desired the moderator to adjourn the meeting to this place, to the first Tuesday of May next, at nine o'clock, which was accordingly done. To which time this meeting stands adjourned.

Whereas several persons the last year lost their corn which was growing at Penny Cook, by reason of sundry disorderly persons who failed in bringing forward their settlements as was proposed, and by reason of several other inconveniences we labor under: therefore,

Voted, That Mr. William Barker, Lieut. Timothy Johnson and Mr. Nicholas White be a committee to make a ford-way over Sow Cooke river, and clear a way from thence to Merrimack river, against the eleven lots, to be done at the charge of the community by the 16th of May current.

Voted, That Mr. Nehemiah Carlton be desired to build a ferry boat of about nineteen feet long, and of a suitable breadth, to be well timbered, and every way well built, workmanlike, at the charge of the community, and to be done by the 20th of May current. Said boat to be delivered at Penny Cook for the use of the society. And a pair of good and suitable oars to be made by said Carlton, for said boat, said boat to be well and sufficiently caulked, pitched or turpentedine, and finished fit to carry people and creatures.

Voted, That Messrs. John Osgood and John Pecker be desired to procure a minister to preach at Penny Cook, to the community there, the charge to be paid by the community.

Voted, That there be a floor of plank or boards laid in the meeting-house, at the charge of the community of Penny Cook, and that Lieut. Timothy Johnson and Mr. Nehemiah Carlton be a committee to get the floor laid as soon as may be conveniently.

Voted, That the sum of seven pounds, eighteen shillings and six pence, paid by several persons and several subscriptions, to the sum of forty-one shillings and six pence, be put into the treasurer’s hands, and by him paid to Mr. Nehemiah Carlton for the ferry boat when it is finished,—which was accordingly delivered to the treasurer.

Tuesday, October 14th, 1729. The intended settlers met by adjournment at Mr. John Griffin's, in Bradford, and chose Mr. Obadiah Ayer for this present meeting their clerk.

Voted, That every proprietor or intended settler of Penny Cook shall forthwith pay or cause to be paid into the hands of John Osgood, of Andover, the company's present treasurer, the sum of twenty shillings toward the support of an orthodox minister, and to preach at Penny Cook aforesaid for this current year,—the same to be by him paid in proportion to his preaching and performing divine service at Penny Cook.

Voted, That the sum of fifty pounds be forthwith raised and paid into the hands of the company's treasurer;—that is to say, ten shillings to be forthwith paid by each proprietor toward paying for a grist mill at Penny Cook, when the same shall be finished according to contract.

Whereas sundry persons who have been admitted intended settlers at Penny Cook have refused to pay in their respective proportion of charges that have necessarily arisen in order to bring forward the settlement according to the condition of the grant, which very much tends to hinder and discourage the same:

Voted, therefore, That Messrs. Henry Rolfe, Esqr., and Deacon John Osgood, of Andover, be empowered to make due inquiry who or what persons are in arrearage, and that then Deacon John Osgood, or some meet person, be by him employed to call upon all such as are behind hand in their payments, forthwith to pay in the same to the company's treasurer; and upon their refusal or non-payment, to return their names to the General Court's Committee, praying that their honors would proceed with them with the utmost rigor and severity.

Voted, That Messrs. John Johnson, Ebenezer Stevens and John Pecker be a committee to view the saw mill and grist mill at Penny Cook, and see whether they be well built and finished according to contract, and so as to answer the company's design in granting the stream or streams, &c., and upon their reporting that the said mills are so built, that then Mr. Osgood, our treasurer, be paid “in whatever shall be the medium of trade for the time being in this Province, at silver, seventeen shillings per ounce.” The late John Farmer, Esq., estimated Mr. Walker’s salary of £100 at $130.67; adding £20 it would be $156.83. In addition to this, £100 was paid to Mr. Walker “to enable him to build an house;” and he also had, in his right, the lot laid out directed to pay unto Mr. Simonds and company the sums heretofore granted for building said mills. Then

At this period it appears that John Wainwright, Esq., clerk of the committee of the Great and General Court, resigned his office — the last record in his hand being the answer of Rev. Penny Cook, October 14th, 1730.

To the Admitted Settlers or Grantees of Penny Cook:

Whereas, formerly, by a committee you have invited me to settle in the ministry in the said township, upon which invitation I have advised with learned, pious and judicious divines in the ministry, who have jointly advised me to take up with your invitation, provided you vote a sufficient maintenance for me, and you having this day renewed your invitation to me, and done what satisfies me upon the account of salary: — I, therefore, being deeply sensible of the importance of the charge, and my own insufficiency to discharge the duty of the same, do accept your call, humbly relying upon the all-sufficient grace of God, which alone can enable me suitably to discharge the same, — earnestly desiring your prayers, as well as of all other of God's people, that such plentiful measures of His grace may be afforded to me as may enable me to discharge the duties of so sacred a function to His acceptance and to your edification, — so that both you and I may rejoice together in the day of our Lord Jesus.

ADDENDA TO CHAPTER III.

NO. 1.

EXPLANATION

OF THE FIRST SURVEY AND DIVISION OF HOUSE AND HOME LOTS ON THE WEST SIDE OF MERRIMACK RIVER.

This survey was made in May, 1726.

I. The house lots contained one acre and a half, more or less, and were laid off in the following ranges:

1. The first range, on the east side of Main street from Pond Hill, (Rev. Timothy Walker's — where Joseph B. Walker, Esq., now lives,) to the hill on the north side of the present Gas Works — numbering 37 lots. Nos. 6 and 35 in this range are vacant.

2. The second range, on the west side of Main street, from Pond Hill, and of the same extent, and parallel with the first range — numbering 34 lots. No. 30 in this range is vacant.

3. The third range was west of the Biblical Institute, extending from the road running west, (by Richard Bradley's, Esq.,) to Washington street — numbering 11 lots. In this range No. 39 is vacant, and was subsequently laid out for a burying-place. The road between the second and third range was ten rods wide.*

*The original width still appears at the north end of State street; but from the late James Bissell's, south, it is but three rods, as subsequently laid out. The space between the old Hopkinton road and Washington street not being improved as a road, was laid out to Joshua Bailey as a part of his twenty acre lot.
4. The "Island Range" lay along the high land on the west side of Horse-shoe Pond, and extended up to what is called Wood's Brook — numbering 9 lots.

Note. Besides the above, lots were laid out west of the north end of the third range, to Timothy Johnson, William Whitcher, Richard Coolidge and the School — which lots were bounded on the north by the road that formerly lead to Boscowen, and seem to have been in place of the vacant lots before mentioned. These lots are not numbered on the record.

II. The "Six Acre, or Home Lots," were laid out in the following order:

1. The "Eleven Lots," or Lowest Interval, comprised both house and home lots — "a highway four rods broad, saved and reserved through the aforesaid eleven lots."

2. "Wattanummon's Field"— still known by that name — contained ten lots. "A highway, two rods broad, saved and reserved on the southeasterly side of the first lot in this division, and also a highway, two rods broad, through the last mentioned ten lots."

3. "The Great Plain" comprised the whole interval on the west side of the river — lying east of Main street — from Wattanummon's Field to Frog Ponds, and numbered 72 lots, including the lot numbered 103.

N. B. The several highways through these lots are marked with sufficient distinctness on the accompanying Plan, by double lines. In addition, however, to the principal highways so marked, (1.) "A highway, two rods in breadth, is saved and reserved through the 20th, 21st and 22d lots." (2.) "A highway, three rods wide, through the easterly end of lots 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 103, as nigh to Merrimack river as may be with convenience;" and "a highway of two rods wide through the easterly end of the 36th, 37th and 38th lots." (3.) "A highway, two rods broad, saved and reserved through the 59th lot, where it is now used to go over Wattanummon's Bridge, so called."

4. Horse-shoe Island comprised ten lots.

OF THE "SECOND DIVISION OF INTERVAL," MOSTLY ON THE EAST SIDE OF THE MERRIMACK RIVER, SURVEYED BY RICHARD HAZZEN, Jr., IN MAY, 1727, AND LAID OUT BY JOHN CHANDLER, RICHARD HAZZEN, Jr., AND WILLIAM WHITE, COMMITTEE.

The plan of this survey is not preserved, but the localities mentioned are understood by tradition — the several names given in the record being still applied to them.

1. The "Mill Brook" Interval designates the lands which lie in the vicinity of the brook that runs from Turtle Pond through the East Village, and empties into the Merrimack easterly of Federal Bridge. This was divided into two ranges, which included the whole interval west and north of the bridge.

2. "Sugar Ball Division" lies in the valley south of the Sugar Ball Hill, in the vicinity of Samuel Clifford's present residence.

3. "The Middle Plain" includes the interval immediately north and south of the Free Bridge Road, extending up to Sugar Ball Plain and down to the curve in the river, near the house of the late William Davis.

4. The "Lowest Interval" includes the lands from the ancient town line, this side of Turkey Falls, upwards, till it meets the Middle Plain.

5. "Rattle-snake Plains" lie on the west side of the river, from what is called Farmum's Eddy, northward, to the high banks north-east of the West Village, or as far as the interval extends in that direction.

6. "Frog Ponds" include the section of interval still well known by that name—though the course of the river has greatly changed the original bounds of some of the lots.

The following table shows where the several lots, as laid out originally, were located, and, also, the quantity of land to each. It will be observed that in several cases two parcels were allotted to the same person, in different localities.
The record of this "Second Division" is in Vol. I. of Proprietors' Records, pp. 29-43.

6. DIVISION AT "FROG PONDS."

Laid out to Nathaniel Abbot, "all that swamp betwixt his first division of interval and Merrimack river, containing one acre and a quarter, more or less."

To Joseph Hale, two acres of swamp adjoining Abbot’s.

To David Wood, one acre of swamp adjoining Hale’s.

To Benjamin Niccols, one acre of swamp adjoining Wood’s.

To John Austin, one acre of swamp adjoining Niccols’.

To Ebenezer Stevens, four and a half acres of land, bounded on Benjamin Parker’s lot, on one side, and Horse-shoe Pond and the brook that runs out of it, on the other.

To William Barker, all that land lying betwixt the highway that runs by his interval lot, and the brook that runs through Horse-shoe Pond, containing thirty-five poles, more or less.

To Ebenezer Virgin, the land betwixt his first division of interval and the brook that runs out of Horse-shoe Pond — forty poles.

To Timothy Johnson, the land lying betwixt his first division of interval and Horse-shoe Pond brook — one acre and a half.

EXPLANATION OF THE "TWENTY ACRES" DIVISION.

This division of land was made between the 14th of September, 1732, and the 16th of June, 1734, agreeable to a vote of the proprietors, "according to our best judgment," by Ebenezer Eastman, John Chandler, Jeremiah Stickney, Joseph Eastman, Edward Abbott, Benjamin Rolfe, committee.

No plan has been preserved of this division. The lots were laid off in different parts of the township. The original bounds are recorded in the Proprietors’ Records, Vol. II., but only a part of them can at the present time be recognized by the description there given. Ten twenty acre lots were laid off north of what was called the Contoocook [Boscawen] road — extending from the north end of Main street into the neighborhood of the West Village. Ten more were laid off on the Hopkinton road, in the vicinity of the new jail, westward, beyond the monument. Several were laid off west of the "second range," on Main street. In many cases, however, the original lots are known only by tradition, and by records of conveyances, &c.
These lots were laid out in different quantities, and frequently in different sections, in order "to make the interval lots belonging to the proprietors equal as to quantity and quality." The bounds are recorded in Proprietors’ Records, Vol. II., but must be recognized mainly, at this time, by family tradition, and by written conveyances. This division was made between the 14th of November, 1732, and the 1st of December, 1734, by vote of the proprietors, and "according to our best judgment," by Ebenezer Eastman, Abraham Bradley, Joseph Eastman, committee.

A division of common and undivided land was ordered (14th of March, 1736,) to be made to the several grantees, "as large as the committee shall think the good land will allow of" — to be laid out in one or more pieces. This is called the "eighty acres" division, though the lots varied from eighty acres to one hundred and fifty, or even more, according to quality. The lots were laid off, in many cases, in different pieces, remote from each other. Plans of these lots are preserved among the Proprietors’ Records, Vol. III., with the roads and drift-ways reserved which ran through them. The division was made by Benjamin Rolfe and John Chandler, committee.

Special grants of land were made as follows:

To Nathan Simonds — mill grant, one hundred acres, on the east side of the river.

To Cutting Noyes, for doing blacksmith work, forty acres, on the east side of the river, and ten acres on the west side, opposite Lot No. 23, first range of house lots.

To Henry Lovejoy and Barachias Farnum — mill grant on Turkey river — one hundred and forty acres.

To Col. John Wainwright, for services as clerk, one hundred acres.

To John Merrill, for keeping ferry, twenty acres.

Abated, 500 00

It appears, however, that £500—toward which each settler gave a bond of £5 for his right to a lot—was, upon petition, abated. Beside these expenses—which, it would seem, were promptly met—each settler met his own charges in building his house, clearing and fencing his land; and, after Rev. Mr. Walker’s settlement, paying his salary and other current expenses of the community—all which shows that they were, in general, men of substance, and “well able” to prosecute their noble and hazardous enterprise.

BRIEF NOTICES

OF THE PROPRIETORS AND EARLY SETTLERS, IN THE ORDER OF THEIR NAMES.

ABBOT.

Nathaniel Abbot, son of Nathaniel, son of George, the ancestor of the Abbots of Andover, Massachusetts, was born in Andover in 1696. He married Penelope Ballard; was about thirty years of age when he came to Penacook. They had thirteen children. His house lot was No. 12, second range—where the North Congregational Church now stands. He was the first constable of Penacook, (1732/3,)—an efficient, enterprising, useful citizen, and member of the church.
At the commencement of the French war, (1744,) he entered the service, and joined the rangers under Maj. Robert Rogers. He held a lieutenant's commission in 1755, in Capt. Joseph Eastman's company, in the expedition against Crown Point, and was a lieutenant in Capt. Richard Rogers' company of rangers, in Fort William Henry, at the time of the massacre, 1757. In 1746 he had command of a company in defense of the town against the Indians. He died in 1770, aged 74. [See Register of Abbot family.]

Edward Abbot, cousin of Capt. Nathaniel; son of Timothy, son of George, of Andover, married Dorcas Chandler; was one of the first selectmen of Rumford. In 1746 his house was a garrison that stood on the spot where Dr. Thomas Chadbourne now lives — south-east corner of Montgomery and Main streets. Edward, his son, was the first male child born in Penacook, (7th of January, 1731,) and Dorcas the first female child. [See Town Register.]

Jacob Abbot, cousin of Nathaniel and Edward; son of Benjamin, son of George, of Andover. He died in the French war, 1760.

AUSTIN.

John Austin, probably a descendant of Thomas Austin, from Andover, where was Samuel Austin (1714,) who died 1753, aged eighty-three.

AYERS.

Obadiah, Samuel and John Ayers, or Ayer, were from Haverhill. Obadiah was a graduate of Harvard College, 1710; was employed to "examine the General Court's records, to see if there be any former grant" of the township; was "one of the principal inhabitants of Haverhill." Samuel and John were of the same family — young men — and were among the most active and enterprising settlers. [See Family Register.] They were all descendants of John, who was of Salisbury, 1640, of Ipswich, 1648, and at Haverhill, 1657.

BLANCHARD.

Thomas Blanchard, from Andover, was a son or grandson of Samuel Blanchard, who came from England, in 1639, with his father, Thomas, on the ship Jonathan, and settled in Charlestown. Thence Samuel removed to Andover, in 1686, and died April, 1707, aged seventy-seven. Thomas, the proprietor of Penacook, died in 1759, aged eighty-five.

William, Nathan and Zebediah Barker came from Andover. William, son of Richard Barker, one of the founders of the church in Andover, 1645, was uncle to Nathan and Zebediah — the one, son of Ebenezer, and the other of Stephen Barker, brothers of William. [See Family Register.]

BAYLEY.

Capt. Joshua Bayley is named in the Proprietors' Records as "one of the principal inhabitants of Haverhill." Probably came to Haverhill from Newbury; born the 30th of October, 1685, and a descendant of John Bayley, who came from Chippenham, England, (a weaver,) and settled in Newbury, 1650. Zechariah Chandler was a cousin of John, son of William, son of Capt. Thomas. The first Capt. John was a powerful, athletic man, of great muscular strength and cool, indomitable courage. The late Nathaniel Chandler, great-grandson of Capt. John, used to relate, that on one occasion, when his ancestor, Capt. John, of Andover, went to Newburyport, he was impressed by three of the king’s officers—saying to him, as they laid hands on his shoulder: “The king needs your service.” He wished to be excused; saying that his family required his care and attention, &c.; to which the reply was: “We cannot help that; the king needs your services; you will go with us.” Apparently yielding, he walked quietly along with them till they reached a spot where a house had been burned down, and where was a deep cellar with ashes and half consumed timber. Turning quickly around, he seized them one by one, and threw them into the cellar, where he left them and went on his way.

Carlton.

The Carltons—Benjamin, Nehemiah and Christopher—were relatives, probably from Andover and Haverhill. Mirick, in his History of Haverhill, says, “Christopher Carlton was among the original proprietors of Penacook;” but the late John Farmer, Esq., said that Christopher Carlton was son of John Carlton, of Andover. The name was common in both places.

He received a call to settle in Dunstable, N. H., as successor of Rev. Thomas Weld, but declined it on account of his health. Mr. Coffin accompanied the honorable Committee of the Court and surveyors when they came to Penacook to lay out the land, in May, 1726, and preached twice on the Sabbath after their arrival, in a tent, on Sugar Ball Plain. His father, Nathaniel, was son of Tristram Coffin, of Newbury, whose father, Tristram Coffin, was born in Brixham Parish, town of Plymouth, England, in 1609. In 1642 Tristram Coffin came to this country with his mother, wife, two sisters, and five children—Peter, Tristram, Elizabeth, James and John. Peter Coffin, son of this Tristram, was born in 1630; resided the principal part of his life in Dover, N. H., and was concerned in the trucking house, in Penacook, in 1668. He died the 21st of March, 1715, at Exeter, aged eighty-five. Tristram Coffin was the ancestor of a numerous race, to which belong Samuel Coffin, Esq., of Concord, and those of the name in Boseawcn. [See Coffin’s Hist. of Newbury.] The first settlers of the name in Concord, after the death of Rev. Enoch, were William and Peter, sons of John, of Newbury. Peter afterward settled in Boseawcn, from whom those of that name there have descended.

He was born the 20th of March, 1697 — son of Ephraim, son of John, a descendant of Thomas, who was of Marlborough, England, and was in Newbury, 1641; then in Haverhill, 1642, where he died in 1683, aged eighty. [See Family Register.]

His house was a garrison in 1746 — situated west of the present residence of Robert Eastman. Ephraim Farnum, from Andover, was son of Ephraim, son of Ralph Farnum, who married Elizabeth Holt, in 1658. He drew house lot No. 15, which was the spot where the house of the late Dr. Green stood. He afterward settled on the land now owned by Dea. Benjamin Farnum and by Moses H. Farnum, who are descendants. Ephraim Farnum was chosen deacon of the church August, 1731. How long he served is unknown. But, “desiring a dismissal from the office, at a church meeting, he was dismissed, and George Abbot chosen in his room.” He died in 1775, aged about eighty. His descendants in Concord are many. [See Farnum Family.]

John and Samuel Granger were brothers from Andover; sons of John Granger, who was born in 1655, and died in 1725, aged seventy — who was probably a son of Lanceolot Granger, of Newbury, ancestor of the late Gideon Granger, Postmaster General of the United States.

He drew one of the “Eleven Lots,” (No. 2,) for his house and home lot, and settled there. July 5, 1736, he married Deborah Abbot, sister of Edward and George Abbot, by whom he had five children. [See Family Register.] He was deacon of the church in Concord more than forty years; a benefactor to the poor, and an example of Christian virtues. During the hostilities of the Indians his house was a garrison. He died April 8, 1784, aged seventy-seven. Deborah, his wife, was a pattern of industry, economy, charity and piety. She rose, summer and winter, as early as four o'clock. "In the early settlement of the town, going one day from her brother Edward's to her brother George's, she turned from the path to pick berries, near where the State House now stands, and lost her way. In her ninety-fifth year she fell and injured her limbs so that she could not walk."

Joseph Parker was son of Joseph Parker, son of Joseph who died in 1678 — one of the founders of the church in Andover (1645.) This family went from Newbury to Andover. CHAPTER IV.

RUMFORD INCORPORATED.

From 1731 till 1733 the settlement at Penacook was in a transition state from a plantation to an incorporated town. The petition of Henry Rolfe, Esq., Dec. 1732, was so far successful that, as we have seen, "the inhabitants" of Penacook were allowed to hold legal meetings, for the choice of officers, and to raise money for necessary town purposes. But they were under the immediate direction of "the Great and General Court," who appointed the moderator of the meetings. This state of things continued till near the close of the year 1733–4, when the Act of Incorporation for the township by the name of Rumford, was obtained.* The origin of this name we have been unable to determine. It is supposed to have been given from that of a parish in England, from which some of the proprietors originated; but which of them, we cannot tell.

* The proceedings preliminary to the Act of Incorporation were as follows:

"Samuel Game, Esq., brought down a petition of Henry Rolfe, Esq., for himself and the other grantees of the plantation of Penny Cook, praying that they might be heard to make it appear to the Court that they have fulfilled the conditions of their grant, and that thereupon they may be allowed to bring in a bill to erect the plantation into a township, for the reasons mentioned.

Passed in council.

February 8, 1733, Read and Ordered, That Thomas Cushing and Edward Godard, Esqrs., with such as shall be joined by the honorable house, be a committee to consider of this petition, and report, as soon as may be, what may be proper for this court to do thereon.

Sent down for concurrence.
The proceedings of the inhabitants while in transition from a "plantation" to a township, are not otherwise important than as illustrating the order and resolution with which the "inhabitants carried forward their enterprise. Capt. Ebenezer Eastman was moderator;" twenty shillings were offered "for encouragement of killing wolves in the township," and six pence for rattlesnakes,—"provided that the destroyer of such snakes shall bring in a black joint of the tail, or with the tail, to the selectmen;" also, "a penny for killing of black-birds—the head being brought to the selectmen, or any of them, and burnt." In December, 1733, thirty pounds were voted to be drawn out of the treasury for the use of the inhabitants and freeholders of the plantation; also, a sum sufficient to pay all just debts, and "sixteen pounds for to pay a school for this present winter and spring following; and that the selectmen shall find books for the use of the inhabitants and freeholders, on the town's cost, so far as they shall think necessary."

In January, (16,) 1733—4, fifty pounds were appropriated to Rev. Mr. Walker, "for building of him a dwelling-house in Penny Cook, provided he gives a receipt that he has received in full February 9, 1733. The committees reported thereon that the petitioners had leave to bring in a bill.

"An Act for erecting a new town within the County of Essex, at a plantation called Penny Cook, by the name of Rumford."

Whereas, the plantation of Penny Cook, so called, of the contents of seven miles square, and one hundred rods, extending on the south bounds the full breadth of said plantation, which has by this court formerly been [and hereby is] declared to lie in the County of Essex, is competently filled with inhabitants who have built and finished a convenient meeting-house for the public worship of God, and some time since have settled a learned Orthodox minister among them; and have, to full satisfaction, complied with all the articles and conditions of their grant respecting their settlement, and thereupon have addressed this court to be erected into a separate and distinct township, and hold and enjoy equal powers and privileges with the other towns in the province:

Be it enacted by His Excellency the Governor, Council and Representatives, in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same, That the plantation of Penny Cook, in the County of Essex, as the same is hereafter bounded for his salary in times past, until this day, for the decay of money— it not being equal to silver at seventeen shillings the ounce.”

From this period the affairs of the new town proceeded with regularity and safety, till 1737. The proprietors’ books and papers, that had been faithfully kept by John Wainwright, Esq., were delivered into the hands of Benjamin Rolfe, Esq., who was both proprietors’ and town clerk. May 19, 1735, Mr. John Chandler, town treasurer, was ordered to make the several collectors that are in arrears, forthwith to pay in what was due; and Benjamin Rolfe, Esq., was appointed attorney in behalf of the town, “to sue for and recover in the law, any sum or sums of money which Mr. John Chandler, treasurer, is indebted to the town.” In September, money was raised for building a bridge over Suncook river,—“one third part of the expense of building said bridge to be at the cost of the town.” Deacon John Merrill and Mr. James Abbot, or either of them, were empowered to hire a man to keep school four months the next winter and spring; and Capt. John Chandler, Benj. Rolfe, Esq., Dea. Merrill and Abner Hoit, appointed a committee “to take care that the bridge over Suncook be well done.”

1736.

Fifty pounds were granted to Rev. Mr. Walker, to enable him to clear a pasture and bring it to English grass: thirty pounds and described, be and hereby is constituted a separate and distinct township, by the name of Rumford; the bounds of said township being as follows, viz.: Beginning where Contoocook river falls into Merrimack river, and thence to extend upon a course east seventeen degrees north three miles, and upon a course west seventeen degrees south four miles, which is the northerly bounds of said township; and from the other parts of that line, to be set off southerly at right angles until seven miles and one hundred rods shall be accomplished from the said northern bounds; and the inhabitants thereof be and hereby are vested and endowed with equal powers, privileges and immunities that the inhabitants of any of the other towns within this province are or ought by law to be vested or endowed with.

of the said fifty pounds to be paid in 1736, and twenty pounds in the year 1737. Henry Rolfe, Esq., was authorized "to use proper means to get the County of Essex divided into counties." Edward Abbot was "empowered to repair and fit up the seats in the meeting-house, and make a door to the pulpit, and put up the windows." On the 18th of May the question of sending a Representative to the Great and General Court in Boston, was tried in town-meeting, and decided in the negative. The same question was decided in the negative the next year, and still again in 1738.

The school was ordered to be kept from the 20th of October to the 20th of April, 1740. Seventh of November, Voted, "That there shall be a good and sufficient garrison built around the Rev. Mr. Timothy Walker's dwelling-house, as soon as may be conveniently, at the town's cost." Benj. Rolfe, Esq., Dea. Merrill, Dea. Ephraim Farnum, Lieut. John Chandler and Edward Abbot, to build the said garrison, at the town's cost, "as they shall think best." Five pounds were also granted to Mr. Barachias Farnum, to enable him to build a flanker to defend his mills,—"provided he give security to the town that in case he shall not keep a garrison at his dwelling-house, the town shall have liberty to take said flanker, and convert it to their use." Mr. Farnum's mill was on Turkey river, and his house also in that neighborhood.

Mr. James Scales,* afterward minister of Hopkinton, was allowed "liberty to build a pew in the one half of the hindermost seat at the west end of the meeting-house, that is next the window."

* To the Church of Christ in Rumford, the First Church of Christ in Boxford sends greeting:

Reverend and Beloved:—We dismiss from our to your holy communion, our beloved and worthy brother, Mr. James Scales, desiring you to receive him as becometh saints, and pray for us.

Your brethren in Christ,

Joseph Eastman and Lieut. John Chandler were appointed "to inform of all breaches of an act for the better preservation and increase of deer within the province, and to take care that the violators thereof be duly prosecuted and punished."

At this early period there appears to have been a ferry across the Merrimack from Hale's Point in a "Great Boat," and a road was laid out from the landing-place along the bank of the river "to the old fort," through land of Mr. Nathaniel Abbot and William Barker.

June 11, Benjamin Rolfe, Esq., "was elected and deputed to serve for and represent the town in the Great and General Court" in Boston, and empowered, in behalf of the inhabitants, "to prefer a petition to His Majesty, that they may be quieted in their possessions, and remain under the jurisdiction of the Massachusetts Bay, or for any thing that may be proper or convenient."

In order to understand the ground and reasons for the disquiet implied in the foregoing, it is needful to refer, briefly, to the controversy at this time going on between Massachusetts and New-Hampshire respecting their boundary lines.

The point in controversy between the governments of the two provinces, so far as affected Rumford, was the southern boundary line of New-Hampshire, or which is the same, the northern boundary line of Massachusetts. The latter by virtue of her charter and grants claimed to "hold and possess" all the lands "on the southerly side of New-Hampshire, beginning at the sea, three English miles north from the Black Rocks, so called, at the mouth of the river Merrimack, as it emptied itself into the sea sixty years ago; thence running parallel with the river, as far northward as the crotch, or parting of the river; thence due north, as far as a certain tree, commonly known for more than seventy years past by the name of Endicott's tree, standing three miles northward of said crotch or parting of Merrimack river, and thence due west to the south sea" — which they said they were "able to prove, by ancient and incontestable evidence, were the bounds rightfully belonging to them and within their jurisdiction."

The "crotch" above spoken of was the point of confluence of the Pemigewasset and Winnepissiogee rivers at Franklin, on the southeast side of the home-farm of George W. Nesmith, Esq.; the "Endicott tree," standing three miles north,—which cannot be identified at this time,—must have been near to Sanbornton Bridge; a line thence due west to the south sea or Pacific ocean, might have taken in some of the gold mines of California, as well as the rich interval lands of Penacook!

On the other hand, New-Hampshire claimed "that the southern boundary of her province should begin at the end of three miles north from the middle of the channel of Merrimack river, where it runs into the Atlantic ocean; and from thence should run on a straight line west, up into the main land, (toward the south sea,) until it meets His Majesty's other governments;" that is, until it should reach New-York.

At this time New-Hampshire and Massachusetts, as provinces of His Majesty, were so far united that they were under one Governor,—Jonathan Belcher,—who resided in Massachusetts, and was supposed to be in her interest; while David Dunbar, Esq., was Lieutenant Governor of New-Hampshire, who, with a majority of the Council and of the House of Representatives, was opposed to Governor Belcher and to the Massachusetts claim.

In order to settle the conflicting claims as to boundary, appeal was finally made to His Majesty, and a royal order obtained, constituting a board of commissioners, to be selected from the counsellors of the neighboring provinces—Nova Scotia, New-York, New-Jersey and Rhode-Island, with power to settle the contested lines. This commission first met at Hampton, August 1, 1787. Benjamin Rolfe, Esq., then and afterward of Rumford, was appointed one of the clerks. Arrangements had likewise been made for a meeting at about the same time, August 10, for the legislative assemblies of the two opposing provinces: that of Massachusetts at Salisbury, and of New-Hampshire at Hampton-Falls—five miles apart. This was done in order that the claims of each might with greater facilities be represented before the commission, and that the Governor, who professed to be equally the father of both, might seem to discharge his duty in the premises with entire impartiality. This great occasion was conducted with pomp and parade. Governor Belcher was escorted from Boston by a troop of horse, and met at Newbury by another troop, who, joined by three more at the supposed divisional line, conducted him to the "George tavern," at Hampton-Falls, where he made a speech to the assembly of New-Hampshire.

No doubt this procession, with the Governor riding in state, attended by members of the Great and General Court, was an imposing spectacle; but such was the temper of the times, that it was made the subject of burlesque in true Hibernian style.

"Dear Paddy, you ne'er did behold such a sight,
As yesterday morning was seen before night;
You, in all your born days saw,
Nor I didn't neither,
So many fine horses and men ride together.

At the head, the lower house trotted two in a row,
Then all the higher house pranced after the low;
Then the Governor's coach gallop'd on like the wind;
And the last that came foremost were troopers behind:
But I fear it means no good, to your neck or mine,
For they say, 'tis to fix a right place for the line!"*

While the assemblies were in session, and the commissioners were devising to settle the disputed claims, Gov. Belcher, with a select company, made an excursion of three days to the falls of Amoskeag—an account of which was published in the papers, and concluded in the following manner: "His Excellency was much pleased with the fine soil of Chester, the extraordinary improvements at Derry, and the mighty falls at Skeag."

Among the questions which puzzled the commissioners, and which it required all their wits to settle, were, "Whether Merrimack river, at that time, emptied itself into the sea at the same place where it did sixty years before? Whether it bore the same name from the sea up to the crotch? and whether it were possible to draw a parallel line three miles northward of every part of a river; the course of which was in some places from north to south? The first and second questions might be settled historically, or by competent living witnesses, but the last must have required wiser heads than Solomon's to decide!

* See Belknap's Hist. N. H., 1737. Note.
The commissioners at this session evaded the main point on which the controversy turned, which was, "Whether the charter of William and Mary granted to Massachusetts all the lands which were granted by the charter of Charles the First?" If the former, then the claim of Massachusetts must be granted; if not, then it must fail. Making, therefore, an evasive decision, the commission adjourned, and left the parties to pursue their contentions as best they could, by means of agents, before His Majesty's Council in England. The New-Hampshire interest was represented by John Tomlinson, Esq., who employed a Mr. Parris as solicitor—a man of shrewdness, penetration and artful address: Massachusetts employed as her agent Mr. Edmund Quincy, who died in 1738, and afterward the affair was in the hands of Wilks and Partridge—neither of whom understood so much of the controversy as Tomlinson, nor had the address of Parris. The latter drew up "a petition of appeal" to His Majesty's Council, in which all the circumstances attending the transaction from the beginning were recited and colored in such a manner as to asperse the Governor and assembly of the "vast, opulent, overgrown province of Massachusetts;" while "the poor, little, loyal, distressed province of New-Hampshire," was represented as ready to be devoured, and the king's own property and possessions swallowed up by the boundless rapacity of the charter government.*

To those who would look further into the merits of the question, I must refer to original documents, or to the condensed view in Belknap's History. It suffices my purpose to say, that after the agents of the respective governments had exhausted all their ingenuity and address to accomplish their objects, the whole subject was decided by His Majesty, in Council, on the 5th of March, 1740, on principles of equity and common sense; at least, so far as respects the course of the Merrimack river—which, at the date of the original charter of Massachusetts, was unknown, viz.: It was determined, "That the northern boundary of the province of Massachusetts be a similar curve line, pursuing the course of Merrimack river at three miles distance, on the north side thereof, beginning at the Atlantic ocean, and ending at a point due north of Pawtucket Falls; and a straight line drawn from thence due west, 'till it meets with His Majesty's other governments.' The northern boundary line of New-Hampshire was fixed as it remains essentially to this day.

By this decision of His Majesty all the towns that had been laid out by Massachusetts west of the Merrimack river, above Pawtucket Falls, and those bordering the river, and embraced within the "three miles north of the river," which Massachusetts claimed, fell within New-Hampshire.

In pursuance of this decision, the next thing was to run the line. Gov. Belcher received orders, 1741, to apply to the governments of both provinces, to join in appointing surveyors to run out and mark the lines; and that if either should refuse, the other should proceed ex parte. Massachusetts failed to comply. New-Hampshire appointed three surveyors, one of whom was Richard Hazzen — surveyor of the interval lots at Penacook — who surveyed and marked the west line from Pawtucket Falls across Connecticut river to the supposed boundary line of New-Hampshire.*

This decision respecting the boundary awakened deep concern in the inhabitants of Rumford. Strongly attached to the Massachusetts government, they were anxious, if possible, to retain their connection. On the 11th of June, 1740, in obedience to a precept from the General Court of Massachusetts, they elected their first representative, Benjamin Rolfe, Esq., and instructed him to prefer a petition to His Majesty, that the inhabitants "may be quieted in their possessions, and remain under the jurisdiction of the Massachusetts Bay; also, to petition the General Court to use their influence with His Majesty in that behalf." At a meeting, also, September 26th, "the town being informed that by the determination of His Majesty in Council, respecting the controverted bounds between the province of Massachusetts Bay and New-Hampshire, they were excluded from the former province, to which they always supposed themselves to belong—'Voted, unanimously, to prefer a petition to the king's most excellent Majesty, setting forth their distressed estate, and praying to be annexed to the said Massachusetts province.'"

* Belknap, 1741.
At the same meeting, Thomas Hutchinson, Esq., agent of Massachusetts, "was empowered to present the said petition to His Majesty, and to appear and act fully in behalf of the town, with respect to it;" and in case he declined, Benjamin Rolfe was authorized to act in the matter, "according to his best discretion."

All, however, was to no purpose. In accordance with the decision of His Majesty, New-Hampshire extended her jurisdiction over all the inhabitants within her bounds, and on the 18th of March passed what was called the District Act, including a part of Salisbury and Almsbury; a part of Methuen and Dracut, Litchfield, Nottingham-West, [Hudson,] part of Dunstable, and Rumford.* By this act the inhabitants of these several districts were subjected to taxation without representation.†

† Voted, That Benjamin Rolfe, Esq., be hereby desired and empowered, in the name and behalf of said inhabitants, to prefer a petition to His Excellency our Governor, or to the General Assembly of this province, that they may be empowered to make choice of some suitable person to serve for and represent them in every session of the General Assembly from time to time, within this province. — Rec., 1744.
CHAPTER V.

RUMFORD AS A DISTRICT—FROM 1742 TO 1750.

We have now reached a period of tragical interest in our history. From 1742 to 1754 scenes of anxiety, alarm and terror were of frequent occurrence. The Indians, whose hostilities are related in this chapter, were not, so far as known, of the Penacook tribe; for as long as any of the Penacooks remained in this section of country, they were friendly to the inhabitants, and especially so to the minister, Rev. Mr. Walker. But the Indians who committed depredations and massacres in Rumford and vicinity, were mostly from Canada—instigated by the French, who then had possession, and who, from 1744 till 1762, were most of the time at war with England and her colonies.

Entirely unmolested by Indians, great progress had been made by the inhabitants in their settlement, in clearing and cultivating their lands, improving the roads, and in the structure of their houses. But in 1739 apprehensions of danger were entertained, and the town, by vote, ordered “that a garrison should be built round the house of Rev. Mr. Walker, and that five pounds should be granted to Barachias Farnum, to enable him to build a flanker, in order to defend his mills on Turkey river.”

About the year 1742, according to tradition, the wife of Mr. Jonathan Eastman—who resided on the Hopkinton road, opposite the house of Mr. Aaron Shute—was taken by a party of Indians and carried to Canada. She was, however, soon redeemed by her husband, and restored to her family.
The opening of the French war, in 1744, greatly increased the alarm and anxiety which pervaded the colonies; and, particularly, the frontier towns which were most exposed. As one means of removing or allaying these fears, the expedition against Louisburg, on Cape Breton — which was the strong-hold of the French — was projected, and triumphantly executed by the daring enterprise of the New-England colonies. In this expedition Capt. Ebenezer Eastman was commander of a company raised in these parts, and was engaged in the assault made on that strong-hold the following year.* Before he set out, he signed a petition, with sixty-two others, to the General Assembly of New-Hampshire, for assistance against the French and Indians. This petition was drawn up by Rev. Mr. Walker, of which the annexed \textit{fac-simile} will be examined with interest.

In the company which Capt. Eastman commanded were Nathaniel Abbot, Isaac Abbot, Obadiah Peters, one Chandler, and probably others whose names are not known. The late aged Joseph Abbot said he "always understood that his uncle Isaac was killed at Cape Breton, and that one Mr. Chandler from this town also died there." Capt. Eastman went to Cape Breton twice. He first set out from Rumford, March 1, 1744–5, and returned November 10th, the same year. The next year he went again, and returned home July 9, 1746.†

The reduction of the fortress at Louisburg only changed the scene of war. The Indians, the more instigated by the French, poured forth from Canada upon the frontier towns, and, with horrible barbarity, carried on the work of destruction. The inhabitants of Rumford felt the general shock, and sought for means of defence and safety. At each parish meeting, from 1744 to 1747, they chose some person to represent to the government, either of New-Hampshire or Massachusetts, or both, "the deplorable circumstances they were in, on account of their being exposed to imminent danger, both from the French and Indian enemy."‡ The language which they instruct their agents

In answer to these petitions, early in 1745 two small companies of scouts were raised, by authority of Gov. Wentworth, under the direction of Col. Benjamin Rolfe, of which Capt. John Chandler, of Rumford, had command of one, consisting of ten men, and Capt. Jeremiah Clough, of Canterbury, of the other, consisting of five men.* The Massachusetts government also sent a small detachment of men from Andover, and another from Billerica, who were stationed here in 1745. In 1746 precautionary measures were taken by the proprietors for the preservation of their records.† Under authority of Gov. Wentworth, garrisons were established at different points in the town, and men, with their families, assigned to them, as was most convenient.

The garrisons, or forts, were built of hewed logs, which lay flat upon each other—the ends, being fitted for the purpose, were inserted in grooves cut in large posts erected at each corner.‡ They enclosed an area of several square rods; were raised to the height of the roof of a common dwelling-house, and at two or more of the corners were placed boxes where sentinels kept watch. In some cases several small buildings—

In the day-time men went forth to their labor in companies, always carrying their guns with them, and one or more of the number placed on guard. If the enemy was discovered approaching, alarm guns were fired, and the report answered from fort to fort. On the Sabbath the men all went armed to the house of worship; stacked their guns around a post near the middle, and sat down, with powder-horn and bullet-pouch slung across their shoulders, while their revered pastor—who is said to have had the best gun in the parish—prayed and preached with his good gun standing in the pulpit.

The following official document was found among old papers in the hands of Jonathan Eastman, Esq., and presents an exact view of the state of the settlement in the summer of 1746.

Jonathan Bradley, had been sent by the Governor, from Exeter, for the defense of Rumford and the adjacent towns. This company had been ranging in the woods and scouting in the vicinity about three weeks previous, and a part of them were in Rumford on the Sabbath, August 10th. On that day it appears that the Indians had meditated an attack upon the inhabitants while engaged in worship, and the night previous had secreted themselves in the bushes adjacent to the meeting-house, to await the favorable moment. One party of them was concealed in a thicket of alders back of the house where Dr. Samuel Morril now lives; another was hid in the bushes, northwest, between the meeting-house and where Ebenezer S. Towle, Esq., now lives. Some few of the Indians, it is said, were seen in the time of worship by a little girl—Abigail Carter, sister of the first Dr. Ezra Carter—but she did not make known the discovery until the meeting closed, when the people marched out in a body with their guns. The presence of Capt. Ladd's company, it is believed, prevented the Indians from making the designed attack. Thus thwarted in their bloody purpose, they retired and lay in ambush till next morning, in a deep thicket, about a mile and a half south-west of the main village, in the valley—a few rods beyond where the Bradley Monument now stands.

THE MASSACRE.
AUGUST 11, 1746.

For the particulars of the tragic scene which now follows, we are indebted to the journal of Abner Clough, clerk of Capt. Ladd's company, which is published in full in the fourth volume of the Collections of the New-Hampshire Historical Society, and to the story related by the aged Reuben Abbot, five years before his death, which was taken down in writing by Hon. Samuel A. Bradley and Richard Bradley, Esq., grandsons of Samuel Bradley, who was one of the killed. The manuscript is now in the hands of Richard Bradley. It was taken August 29, 1817, when Mr. Abbot was in the ninety-fifth year of his age.

FROM ABNER CLOUGH'S JOURNAL.

"Capt. Ladd came up to Rumford town, and that was on the tenth day [of August] and, on the eleventh day, Lieut. Jonathan Bradley took six of Capt. Ladd's men, and was in company with one Obadiah Peters, that belonged to Capt. Melvin's company of the Massachusetts, and was going about two miles and a half from Rumford town to a garrison; and when they had gone about a mile and a half, they were shot upon by thirty or forty Indians, if not more, as it was supposed, and killed down dead Lieut. Jonathan Bradley and Samuel Bradley, John Lufkin and John Bean [and] this Obadiah Peters. These five men were killed down dead on the spot, and the most of them were stripped. Two were stripped stark naked, and were very much cut, and stabbed, and disfigured; and Sergeant Alexander Roberts and William Stickney were taken captive. * * * * It was supposed there was an Indian killed where they had the fight; for this Daniel Gilman, who made his escape, saith that he was about sixty rods before these men* when they were shot upon, and, he says, the Indians shot three guns first. He says he thought our men shot at a deer; he says that he run back about forty rods upon a hill, so that he could see over upon the other hill, where the Indians lie, and shot upon the men; and, he says, as ever he came upon the hill so as to see over upon the other hill, he heard Lieut. Jonathan Bradley speak and say, 'Lord, have mercy on me: — Fight!' In a moment his gun went off, and three more guns of our men's were shot, and then the Indians rose up and shot a volley, and run out into the path, and making all sort of howling and yelling, and he did not stay long to see it, he saith. It was supposed that John Lufkin was upon the front, and Obadiah Peters on the rear: and they shot down this Lufkin and Peters the first shot, as they were in the path, about twelve or fourteen rods apart; and they shot Samuel Bradley,

* Tradition says that Gilman went on ahead to shoot a hawk, and the Indians, seeing him alone, let him pass.
as he was about twelve feet before where this Obadiah Peters lay, and wounded [him] so that the blood started every step he took. He went about five rods right in the path, and they shot him right through his powder horn, as it hung by his side, and so through his body——and there lay these three men, lying in the path——and Lieut. Bradley run out of the path, about two rods, right in amongst the Indians. He was shot through his wrist. It was supposed he killed the Indian; it was supposed that he fought, (as he stood there in the spot where he was killed,) till the Indians cut his head almost all to pieces; and John Bean run about six rods out of the path, on the other side of the way, and then was shot right through his body;——so that there were none of these men that went one or two steps after they were shot, excepting this Samuel Bradley that was shot as above said. And there seemed to be as much blood where the Indian was shot as there was where any one of the men were killed. It was supposed the men laid there about two hours after they were killed, before any body came there. We did not go till there came a post down from the fort,* three quarters of a mile beyond where the men lie and were killed. The reason we did not go sooner, was because we did not hear the guns. I suppose the reason that we did not hear the guns, was because the wind wa'nt fair to hear. We went up to the men, and ranged the woods awhile, after these captives, and then brought the dead down to town in a cart, and buried the dead men this day. These men, when they went away in the morning, said they intended to be at home about twelve o'clock, in order to go to Canterbury in the afternoon, or, at least, to get fit to go. It was supposed that these men, some of them, rid double on horses when they were killed. On the twelfth day, early in the morning, went up and took the blood of the Indian, and followed along by the drag and blood of the Indian about a mile, very plain, till we came within about fifteen rods of a small river, and then we could see no more sign of the Indian; but we tracked the Indians along down the river, about twenty or thirty rods, and there were falls where they went over. * * * It was supposed there could not be less than fifty or sixty Indians."

* Jonathan Eastman's fort, on the rocky knoll opposite Mr. Aaron Shute's.
Who drove the cart that contained the dead bodies, from the place of massacre to James Osgood's garrison.

"I, with Abiel Chandler, was at work in the Fan, near Sugar Ball, making hay, on Monday morning, August 11, 1746, then in my twenty-fourth year. We heard three guns fired at Parson Walker's fort, which were the appointed signal of alarm at the approach or apprehension of the Indians. On hearing the alarm guns we ran up to the garrison, and found the soldiers who were stationed there, and such men as could be spared, had gone to where the men were killed. We followed on, and took the foot-path [by Capt. Emery's, near the prison,] and arrived at the spot where the bodies lay as soon as those did who went round on the main road. When we arrived near the brook that runs through the farm formerly owned by —— Mitchell, on the east side of the brook we found Samuel Bradley, stripped naked, scalped, and lying on his face in the road, within half a rod of the bridge over that brook. He was shot through the body, and supposed through his lungs; the ball struck and spoiled his powder horn, which the Indians left. He was not otherwise wounded by the Indians than shot and scalped. Jonathan Bradley lay about ten feet out of the road, on the south side, and about two rods east of the brook. He was lieutenant in Capt. Ladd's company, from Exeter, and a number of years older than Samuel. He was not wounded by the Indians in their fire, and immediately after the Indians had first fired he ordered his men to fight them. As but few of the Indians fired the first time, Jonathan supposed that he and his six men could manage them, and they fired at the few who had risen up from their ambush. Immediately the whole body of the Indians, about one hundred in number, rose up and fired. Jonathan, seeing their number and receiving their fire, ordered his men to run and take care of themselves. By this time, Obadiah Peters, John Bean, John Lufkin and Samuel Bradley, were killed. The Indians then rushed upon Jonathan Bradley, William Stickney and Alexander Roberts — took Stickney and Roberts prisoners, and offered Jonathan Bradley good quarter. But he refused to receive quarter, and fought with his gun against that cloud of Indians, until they struck him on the face repeatedly with their tomahawks, cut a number of gashes in his face, one large gash running obliquely across his forehead and nose down between his eyes; another on the side of his head, and one on the back part of his head, which entered his skull and brought him to the ground. The Indians then despatched him, took off his scalp, and stripped him nearly naked. Obadiah Peters we found shot through the head. Bean and Lufkin were shot, and ran from the brook toward the main road about six rods, and fell within a rod of each other, on the north side of the road as now travelled. Four of the Indians were killed and two wounded, who were carried away on biers.

The soldiers from the garrisons were too late to avenge the lives of these brave men. Before their approach the Indians fled like cowards, leaving many of their packs and various things, which the soldiers took."

Mr. Abbot further related that the bodies of the dead — mangled, bloody, and some of them naked — were laid side by side in a cart which had been sent up with a yoke of oxen to convey them down to the main street. As all others refused, Mr. Abbot himself drove the team down to Mr. James Osgood’s garrison. There a great multitude of men, women and children collected to see the dreadful sight; they wept aloud. Mothers lifted up their young children to see the dead bodies in the cart. The late Mr. Joseph Abbot, who died January 20, 1832, aged 90, then about four years of age, said his “mother lifted him up and he see the bodies dreadfully mangled.” Next day they were all buried in two graves, near what was then the northwest corner of the old burying-ground. The Bradleys were buried in one grave, and Lufkin, Peters and Bean in another: the spot cannot now be exactly identified, but it was very near the place now enclosed and occupied as the burial-plat of the Bradley and Ayer family.

NOTICES OF THE PERSONS WHO WERE MASSACRED, AND OF THE CAPTIVES.

Lieut. Jonathan Bradley was a son of Abraham Bradley, who came from Haverhill, Massachusetts, to Penacook, in 1730. He married Susanna Folsom, of Exeter, who at first settled on the farm with his father, but afterward disposed of his property in Penacook and moved to Exeter, a year or two before the time of the massacre.* He was Lieutenant in Capt. Daniel Ladd's company, and only two weeks before, as appears from Clough's Journal, had been "very sick," and was not yet entirely recovered. He was a brave man, about thirty years of age, and when he met the Indians would neither flee nor fall alive into their hands. The ancestors and relatives of Mr. Bradley, in Haverhill, had had a bitter experience of Indian cruelty. Daniel Bradley was killed there, August 13, 1689. Isaac Bradley, at the age of fifteen, was captured in the fall of 1695.† Daniel Bradley, (son of Daniel,) and Hannah his wife, and two of their children, Mary and Hannah, were killed, March 15, 1697, when Mrs. Dustin was made prisoner; and Joseph, Martha and Sarah Bradley, children of Joseph Bradley, were slain at the same time. The house of Joseph Bradley, grandfather of Lieuten-ant Jonathan, was burnt by the Indians, February 8, 1704, and his wife taken prisoner a second time, and her infant child, born in captivity, was sacrificed by her barbarous captors. The story of this Mrs. Bradley's captivity and sufferings, (grandmother of Jonathan and Samuel,) is so intensely interesting as to justify a place in this narrative. It is abridged from Mirick's History of Haverhill.

"On the 8th of February, 1704, about three or four o'clock in the afternoon, a party of six Indians attacked the garrison of Joseph Bradley, which, unhappily, was in an unguarded state—even the sentries had left their stations, and the gates were open. The Indians approached cautiously, and were rushing into the open gates before they were discovered. Jonathan Johnson, a sentinel, who was standing in the house, shot at and wounded the foremost; and Mrs. Bradley, who had a kettle of boiling soap over the fire, seized her ladle, and filling it with the streaming liquid, discharged it on his tawny pate—a soap-orific that almost instantly brought on a sleep, from which he has never since awoke. The rest of the party immediately rushed forward, killed Johnson, made prisoner of the intrepid woman and some others.

"Mrs. Bradley was in delicate circumstances and in slender health. * * The weather was cold, the wind blew keenly over the hills, and the ground was covered with a deep snow; yet they obliged her to travel on foot and carry a heavy burden, too large even for a man. In this manner they proceeded through the wilderness, toward Canada; and Mrs. Bradley informed her family, after she returned, that for many days in succession she subsisted on nothing but bits of skin, ground-nuts, the bark of trees, wild onions and lily roots.

"While in this situation—in the midst of a thick forest—she gave birth to a child. The Indians then extended their cruelties to the babe. For the want of proper attention it was sickly; and when it cried these remorseless fiends showed their pity by throwing embers into its mouth. They told the mother that if she would permit them to baptize it in their manner, they would suffer it to live. * * They took it from her, and baptized it by gashing its forehead with their knives. Not long after, while she was absent for a short time from the child, they seized it and piked it upon a pole, where the mother saw it dead.

"When they arrived in Canada Mrs. Bradley was sold to a French master for eighty livres. She was treated kindly. It was her custom, morning and evening, when she milked her master's cow, to take with her a crust of bread, soak it with milk and eat it. With this and with the rations allowed her by her master, she eked out a comfortable subsistence."

In March, 1705, her husband, hearing she was in Canada, started on foot with a small sled, accompanied only by a dog, and succeeded in redeeming her.

Knowing, as Lieut. Bradley doubtless did, the story of these sufferings which his immediate ancestors experienced, it is no wonder that "he refused to receive quarter" from the Indians, and that he chose death rather than captivity.

SAMUEL BRADLEY.

Samuel Bradley, brother of Jonathan, resided at Rumford with his father Abraham, after Jonathan removed to Exeter. He married Mary Folsom, sister of his brother Jonathan's wife, by whom he had two children, viz., John, born February 13, 1743, and Mehetabel, born January 16, 1745. In Rev. Mr. Walker's notes is the following: "February 19, 1744, baptized John, son of Samuel Bradley, and Anne, daughter of Jona. Bradley. Dec. 22, 1745, baptized Mehetabel, daughter of Sam. Bradley." Mr. Bradley was a young man of great enterprise and promise. The anguish of his wife on hearing of his massacre, and seeing his mangled body, was intense and overwhelming. His little son John, then less than four years old, was shown the bloody bodies of the slain, as they lay together at Osgood's garrison, and retained through life a lively impression of the scene. Indeed the impression was so strong, that a terror of the Indians haunted him for many years afterward, and his grandfather's faithful servant, Pompey, used to accompany him, as a sort of life-guard, and to carry him, when quite a large boy, on his back. Mrs. Bradley afterward married Robert Calfe, Esq., of Chester, and died at Concord, in the family of her grandson, Richard Bradley, Esq., August 10, 1817, aged ninety-eight. She was a woman of remarkable powers. In the latter years of her life she used to speak with great affection of the husband of her youth, and of his tragical end;* to relate many little incidents of his life, and to repeat expressions which she said he used in the last prayer he offered in his family; also, the last chapter which he read in the Scriptures.

OBADIAH PETERS

Was of Rumford, son of Seaborn Peters, one of the first settlers. "He had been out in the Louisburg expedition, and was at the capture of Cape Breton the year before his death"—one of Capt. Ebenezer Eastman's company. About the time he was killed he appears to have been a soldier in the Rumford company of militia, commanded by Capt. Nathaniel Abbott, as he is named in his muster roll, and his death there recorded. Peters' father and family lived near Eastman's fort, to which the party was going at the time they were attacked and massacred by the Indians.

John Bean was from Brentwood, and John Lufkin from Kingston.

William Stickney, who was taken captive, was son of Capt. Jeremiah Stickney, of Rumford, and a brother of the late Col. Thomas Stickney. "After about one year's captivity in Canada, he found means to escape with a friendly Indian, and proceeded on his way home to within about one day's journey of the white settlements, when they fell short of provisions. The Indian directed Stickney to light a fire and encamp, while he would go in quest of game. After Stickney had prepared his camp, he also went out to hunt, and in attempting to cross a river on a log, fell in and was drowned." This was the story the Indian told when he came to Rumford; but from the circumstance of his being dressed in Stickney's clothes, many were led to doubt the truth of it.

Alexander Roberts, who was one of Capt. Ladd's company, made his escape from captivity, after being carried to Canada. On his return to Rumford, next year, Roberts stated that four Indians were killed and several wounded—two mortally, who were conveyed away on litters, and soon after died. Two they buried in the Great Swamp, under large hemlock logs, and two others in the mud, some distance up the river, where their bones were afterwards found. Roberts claimed a bounty from government, for having, as he said, killed one of the Indians at the time of the attack, whose bones he afterwards found. On the 19th of November, 1747, the General Assembly of New-Hampshire passed the following resolution, which was approved by the Governor:

"Whereas Alexander Roberts and others have been carefully examined upon oath, of and concerning a human skull-bone, which said Roberts and company found at or near the place where said Roberts supposes he killed an Indian man, and where he saw said Indian buried; and inasmuch as it appears to the House, upon the evidence produced, that the said skull is really the skull of the aforesaid Indian: Therefore,

"Voted, That there be paid out of the money in the public treasury, unto the said Alexander Roberts and company, the sum of seventy-five pounds, in the following proportions, viz.: To the said Alexander Roberts, fifteen pounds; to Daniel Gilman, seven pounds ten shillings; to the widows of Jonathan and Samuel Bradley, each eleven pounds five shillings; and to the heirs or legal representatives of Obadiah Peters, John Lufkin, John Bean and William Stickney, each seven pounds ten shillings."

The Assembly also, April 3, 1747, Voted, "That there be allowed to John Osgood twelve shillings sixpence for expense for coffins, &c., for the men killed at Rumford last year."*

The initials of the names of the persons who were massacred, soon after were marked on a large tree which stood near the fatal spot, and which remained as the only monument of the event for many years, when the tree was cut down. But it was fit that an event of so much tragic interest should be commemorated by a monument, that should stand for succeeding generations to behold.

The monument — which the annexed engraving well represents — bears the inscription beneath it.

This Monument is in memory of
SAMUEL BRADLEY,
JONATHAN BRADLEY,
OBADIAH PETERS,
JOHN BEAN AND JOHN LUFKIN,
Who were massacred Aug. 11, 1746,
by the Indians.
Erected, 1837, by Richard Bradley, son of the Hon. John Bradley, and grandson of Samuel Bradley.
The following notice of the erection of this Monument, and the event it commemorates, appeared in the New-Hampshire Statesman and State Journal, August 26, 1837.

THE MONUMENT.

On Tuesday last, the 22d instant, corresponding with the 11th of August, O. S., the ceremony of raising the Monument in commemoration of the massacre of the Bradleys and others, on that day, 1746, was attended near the scene of the event, in this town, by a large concourse of people. The procession was formed under the direction of Col. Stephen Brown, Chief Marshal, at the residence of Mr. B. H. Weeks, in the following order.

Teachers and Scholars of the several Public and Private Schools.
Chief Marshal.
Music.
Committee of Arrangements.
Orator.
New-Hampshire Historical Society.
Descendants of the persons killed in 1746.
His Excellency the Governor.
Officers of the State Government.
Past Officers.
Citizens generally.

The procession moved to the ground on which the Monument was to be erected, when it was raised into its place; after which the procession moved in the order above to the grove of oaks on the south side of the road, when the following order of exercises was observed:

1. Hymn, by the Rev. John Pierpont, of Boston, and sung under the direction of Mr. Wm. D. Buck.

Not now, O God, beneath the trees
That shade this vale at night's cold noon,
Do Indian war-songs load the breeze,
Or wolves sit howling to the moon.

The foes, the fears our fathers felt,
Have, with our fathers, passed away;
And where in death's dark shade they knelt,
We come to praise thee and to pray.

We praise thee that thou plantest them,
And mad'st thy heavens drop down their dew —
We pray, that, shooting from their stem,
We long may flourish where they grew.

And, Father, leave us not alone:
Thou hast been, and art still our trust:
Be thou our fortress, till our own
Shall mingle with our fathers' dust.

3. Address, by Mr. Asa McFarland.
[This highly appropriate and well written address was published in the New-Hampshire Statesman, the following week, and was republished, nearly entire, in the sixth volume of the New-Hampshire Historical Collections, 1850, pp. 112—121, to which we refer the reader.]

4. Ode, by George Kent, Esq.

On this devoted spot —
Never to be forgot,
Till time shall end —
Manhood's high hopes were crush'd,
And mercy's voice was hush'd,
While blood in torrents gush'd
From foes and friend.

Pasconaway's kindly aid,
That erst had been display'd,
Was now withdrawn;
And Wonalancet's skill, Ready each feud to still,
And cultivate good will —
A hope forlorn.

Mild Kancamagus,* too,
With love could not imbue
His recreant sons;
But Hope-Hood's hostile art
Possess'd each mind and heart,
And led them to depart
From peace at once.

No council fires around Told of the battle's sound,
Or signal gave;
But by the white man's path,
Sudden as lightning's scath,
The red man in his wrath
Ambush'd the brave.

Five gallant yeomen fell —
While loud the Indian yell
Echord the deed;
Peters, Lufkin and Bean,
With Bradleys bold, were seen,
Staining with blood the green,
Without remead.

Not unaveng'd was done
The work of death, begun
In treachery base;
Four of the tribe lay low,
To bleach in winter's snow;
Unstrung for aye, the bow;
Unjoined the chase.

Hallow the memory, then,
Of the devoted men

RUMFORD AS A DISTRICT.

Who bravely fell!
Long may this stone display,
In the broad light of day,
The deeds their children may
With honor tell.

5. Reading, by Richard Bradley, Esq., of an original petition of the inhabitants of Rumford, to the Governor, Council and Assembly, for succor against the Indians, with autographs of the original settlers; after which a conveyance of the Monument and grounds was presented to the New-Hampshire Historical Society, by Mr. Bradley, [which was received by Rev. N. Bouton, in behalf of said society, and, being duly recorded, was deposited in the society's archives.]

6. An Historical Ballad, by Miss Mary Clark, of Concord, read by Mr. T. D. P. Stone,* entitled, "A Ballad commemorating the fall of the Bradleys, Peters, Bean and Lufkin, near this spot, on the 11th of August, 1746, O. S., ninety-one years ago this day.

I sing a tale of days of old,
When Penacook was young,—
A tale that often has been told,
But never yet was sung.

It was a mournful tragedy,
Most doleful to relate:
How five young men all suddenly
Met with a horrid fate.

The settlement at Penacook
Was girt with forests then,
Where savage beasts a shelter took,
And still more savage men.

England and France a cruel war
Had with each other waged;—
Woe to the colonies! for there
Its bloodiest contests raged.

The fierce Canadians, (Frenchmen they,) Had set the Indians on;
'Twas sad to see for many a day The mischief that was done.

Houses were burnt and cattle slain, And smiling fields laid waste: To seek the lurking foe was vain,— His steps might not be traced;

For the dark, trackless woods concealed Him, issuing whence, he seized The unwary laborer in the field, A captive, if he pleased;

* Timothy Dwight Porter Stone, from Andover, Mass., then Principal of the Concord Literary Institution and Teachers' Seminary.
Or else, more merciful, despatched
Him at a single blow;
Then his defenceless home attacked,
And laid his loved ones low;

Or led into captivity
The children and the wife,
In hardship, pain and misery,
To drag a weary life.

Such scenes as these, we understand,
Were acted o'er and o'er,
Beginning first at Westmoreland,
Not far from Number Four.*

In both those towns, in Keene likewise,
Were killed and taken some;
And then eight persons, by surprise,
They took in Hopkinton.

In Rumford, alias Penacook,
The people all alarmed,
Themselves to garrisons betook,
Nor ventured out unarmed.

Oh! faces gathered paleness then,
Hearts trembled with dismay;
For foes without and fears within,
Disturbed them night and day.

A hundred Indians, near about,
Blood-thirsty, fierce and strong,
Seen now and then in straying scout,
As they had passed along;

In August, '46, came down
Direct from Canada;
Bent to destroy the embryo town,
If in their course it lay.

Yet did the people not forget
The holy Sabbath day;
In their log meeting-house they met
To hear, and praise, and pray.

Each carrying his gun, went in,
For fear what might betide;
And Parson Walker there was seen,
With musket by his side.

No prayer from feigned lips arose —
With death and danger near,
Their cries to Heaven, we may suppose,
Went up from hearts sincere.

Hid in an alder thicket, nigh
The meeting-house, the foe
(A little girl did them espy,)
Were laid in ambush low.

* Now called Charlestown.
A military company
Had come the place to guard,
Yet truly might the people say
Their help was from the Lord;

For not a single hand was raised
To harm them on that day;
They safely came unto the place,
And safely went away.

But ah! the morrow comes, and then
In Penacook was seen
Such slaughter of their bravest men
As never yet had been.

Eight of the men set out to go
To Eastman's garrison;
Full two miles off—but did not know
The risk they were to run.

Arriving early at the spot
Where now secure we stand,
Two fell beneath a fatal shot
From unseen Indian hand.

They wounded Samuel Bradley, too—
At every step he bled—
Another shot his body through,
Laid him among the dead.

Lieutenant Bradley cried out, "Lord,
Have mercy on me! — Fight;"
He fired—but as he spake the word
They rush'd on him outright.

But stoutly he resisted, still Refusing proffered life;
They, horrid! mangling him, until Death closed the unequal strife.

As they rush’d out, the echoing woods
With Indian yells they filled;
And kept their work of death and blood
Till three more men were killed.

Then seizing the remaining two,
They quickly left the place;
A dreadful sight it was to view
Those bodies in such case.

Some of the foe were slain, 'tis said,
How many, is not known,
For leaving there the other dead,
They bore away their own.

And thus did end this dire affray:
The names of all who fell,
I need not in these verses say,
For yonder stone will tell.
One of the men, it seems, went on Some rods before the rest,
And safely reached the garrison,
Which they did not molest.

But sad the news he carried there,
For he had seen the fight;
And sad were they who stood to hear,
O'erwhelmed with grief and fright.

And having gathered what he knew,
A man was posted down
To bear the woeful tidings to
The people of the town.

And there were sounds of keen distress,
"And hurryings to and fro,"
So deep is human tenderness,
So bitter human woe.

When speedily a cart, prepared
The bodies to convey,
Was sent, attended by a guard,
Along the fearful way.

The rustic hearse came heavily
O'er the uneven ground;
Returned, their slaughtered friends to see,
The people gathered round.

Oh! what a day for Penacook!
The widow — what a day!
A long, a last heart-rending look,
And in the earth they lay.

The Bradleys were distinguished men;
Brothers, they were, so brave,
And many a tear was shed for them,
Laid in untimely grave.

Each left a mourning family,
Samuel, an only son,
Father of him whose piety
That monumental stone

Has raised — the sorrowful event
Thus to commemorate:
Go read their names, and then lament
Their melancholy fate.

7. Concluding prayer, by Rev. E. E. Cummings, [of the Baptist Church.]

But to resume the narrative of Indian troubles: After the massacre, as above related, the Indians withdrew for a short time from the immediate vicinity. The inhabitants, however, were in constant anxiety and alarm. On the 13th of August, Clough, in his journal, says: "Rumford people said that they heard several guns, early in the morning, some distance from the town. They supposed that the Indians had killed some cattle, as they [had,] about a month before, killed two oxen." In answer to repeated petitions, a guard was kept stationed here most of the time, at least for the two following years. * In the mean time, some new arrangement was made concerning the garrisons, as appears from the following official document:

Province of New Hampshire

District of Rumford, March 21st, 1746/7.

We, the subscribers, Committee of Militia, &c., at the request of sundry of the inhabitants of Rumford aforesaid—representing their uneasiness with the orders not being complied with; and the pressing of the enemy having compelled two of the stated Garrisons to break up, and, by that means, apprehending a further view and settlement to be necessary—

Have, therefore, repaired to Rumford afores'd and reviewed their circumstances, and do still continue the following Garrisons, as at first, viz.: The Garrison round the house of the Revd Mr. Timothy Walker, with the inhabitants stated there, excepting Obadiah Foster, who is removed and ordered to attend and do his duty at the Garrison round the house of Mr. Joseph Hall.

Also, the Garrison round the house of Mr. Jeremiah Stickney—and have further ordered that the house of Mr. Edward Abbot, being near and convenient to make one joint defence with said Stickney's Garrison, be likewise garrisoned—both which houses to be looked upon, and in all Garrison privileges and duties, to be one Garrison—their keeping, in times of necessary watching and warding, a watch and ward in each house; and that the inhabitants before ordered and stated at said Stickney's, be as equally, as with convenience may be, apportioned to each house, as best accommodates them, under the regulation of Capt. John Chandler—excepting Ephraim Carter and Joseph Carter, Lt. Isaac Chandler and his son Isaac, who are ordered to remove and do their duty at the Garrison round the house of the aforesaid Rev. Mr. Timothy Walker.

Also, that the Garrison round the house of Mr. Timothy Walker, jun., be continued, with the inhabitants ordered there, excepting Stephen Farrington and Benjamin Abbot, who are hereby ordered to remove to, and do their duty at the Garrison round the house of the aforesaid Jeremiah Stickney and Edward Abbot.

Also, the Garrison round the house of Mr. Joseph Hall be continued, with the inhabitants before ordered there; and that the Garrison round the house of Mr. Henry Lovejoy, and the Garrison at Jonathan Eastman's house,† be thrown up and not kept, until the inhabitants posted at those Garrisons, or either of them, shall have further assistance and be willing to return, and then to be invested with the same Garrison privileges as before—but not till then; and, in the mean time, they are respectively ordered to the following Garrisons, as most convenient for them, viz.: James Abbot, Amos Abbot, Amos Eastman, Henry Lovejoy, Abiel Chandler and Joseph Farnum, to do duty at the garrison stated round the house of the Rev. Mr. Timothy Walker; and that Ephraim Farnum, Seaborn Peters, Timothy Tytus and Jacob Hoyt, to do duty at the garrison stated round the house of the aforesaid Jeremiah Stickney and Edward Abbot; and John Burbank to do duty at the garrison stated round the dwelling-house of Mr. Timothy Walker, jun.:—which four garrisons, in our judgment, is as many as can be admitted for the interest and safety of the inhabitants, and the places well situated for the defence of the town.

Joseph Blanchard,
Benjamin Rolfe,
Zachariah Lovewell,

Henry Lovejoy's garrison, at the West Parish, [where Mr. Levi Hutchins now lives,] it seems had been broken up; and as there had been a grist mill, it subjected the inhabitants in that section, and also in Boscawen and Canterbury, to serious inconveniences, as appears from the following joint petition:

To His Excellency Benning Wentworth, Esq., Captain General and Governor of His Majesty's Province of New-Hampshire: To the Honorable His Majesty's Council and Assembly of said Province:
The Petition of the Subscribers, Inhabitants of Rumford, Canterbury and Contoocook—

Humbly sheweth, That we, especially at the two last mentioned places, are greatly distressed for want of suitable Grist Mills; that Mr. Henry Lovejoy has, at great expense, erected a good mill at a place the most advantageously situated to accommodate the three towns: that it is the only mill in all the three towns that stands under the command of the guns of the garrison:—That the ill consequences of abandoning the said garrison the year past has been severely felt by us: That the said Lovejoy appears desirous of residing there again, provided he might be favored with such a number of soldiers as just to keep his garrison with a tolerable degree of safety; and that, as an additional encouragement to us to appear as petitioners on his behalf, and to your Excellency and Honours to grant our said petition, he will become engaged, with all convenient speed, to erect a forge for the making of Barr Iron,* which may also

*This forge was erected by Capt. Lovejoy, and was in operation many years. Mr. Levi Hutchins says the forge was situated about forty rods westerly of his house, on the stream that flows from Long Pond, and that old cinders of ore are still visible there. The ore was obtained from the banks at the deep bend of the river, just above the Concord Bridge. Iron ore was also found in the south part of the town.
stand under the command of the said garrison; which undertaking would probably be vastly advantageous to all the towns and plantations up this way, as well as to the general interest of the Province.

We therefore pray, as well on behalf of ourselves as the said Lovejoy, that your Excellency and Honours would take the premises into your wise consideration, and grant unto the said Lovejoy such a protection as may encourage him to reenter and possess his present abandoned garrison, for the ends and purposes above mentioned; and your Petitioners shall, as in duty bound, ever pray.

ANECDOTES.

The following traditionary anecdotes relative to this period have been received by the author from sundry individuals, and may be relied on as substantially correct.

PHILIP EASTMAN, son of Capt. Ebenezer, married Abiah
Bradley, sister of the Bradleys who were killed, and in 1746 lived on the farm where John L. Tallant, Esq., now lives. When the news of the massacre reached them, Mr. Eastman hastily saddled his horse, rode up to his door, and said, "Come, Abiah, let us go." She replied, "I am ready," and at a single bound sprung upon the horse's back, behind her husband — and then they rode on full canter down to Capt. Eastman's fort. It was a common saying in those times, "It takes a hard blow to kill a Bradley!" — C. E. Potter.

On the 10th of November, 1746, a Mr. Estabrookes, of Hopkinton, was killed by the Indians on the road leading from Concord to Hopkinton, and about one fourth of a mile eastward of where the Bradleys were killed. The circumstances, as related by Mr. Benjamin Gale, now in his eighty-fifth year, and in full possession of his faculties, are as follows: "My grandfather, Dr. Ezra Carter,† lived in a house which stood where Sanborn's book-store now is; he pastured his horse in Dea. George Abbot's lot, where the late Timothy Chandler lived. Mr. Estabrooks came into town, and called on Dr. Carter, but was in great haste to return to Hopkinton before night. Dr. Carter said, 'I have a call to make on the same road, and will accompany you;' then taking his bridle and saddle bags in hand, he went to the pasture to catch his horse; but, what was very unusual, the horse could 'nt be caught. The doctor, therefore, standing in the field, waved his hand to Mr. Estabrooks, who was waiting, and said, 'Go on.' Estabrooks proceeded about three quarters of a mile on the road, to where the watering-trough now is, at Rum-Hill, (so called,) when he was fired at and killed. The report of the gun was heard in the street, and in half an hour after-

* PETITION OF DR. EZRA CARTER.

To His Excellency Benning Wentworth, Esq., &c.:

The Petition of Ezra Carter, in behalf of the inhabitants of the town of Rumford, shewed, that they are destitute of soldiers, and very much exposed both to the French and Indian enemy, and daily expect, by experience of last year, invasions by them, by reason of their killing one man on the tenth of November last; and on the nineteenth of said November they were discovered by their tracks in a small snow: — and pray your Honours to consider our dangerous circumstances, and grant us such protection as you in your great wisdom shall think meet.

Ezra Carter.

ward Estabrooks was found dead on the spot.” Dr. Carter’s escape was considered very providential.

Jacob Hoyt, Esq., residing on the east side of the river, (on the Mountain, so called,) now in the eighty-third year of his age — vigorous both in body and mind — relates that his father, John, son of Abner, who came to Penacook from Salisbury, Massachusetts, about 1728, and lived in a house where Dr. Samuel Morril now lives, was said to have been the second male child born in Penacook. He married Abigail Carter, the little girl who saw one Indian or more in the bushes on the Sabbath before the massacre. His grandfather, Abner, was in Mr. Jonathan Eastman’s garrison, and at this time owned land where Mr. B. Hubbard Weeks now lives. On one occasion his daughter Betsey went out to milk the cows, just at twilight. She was accompanied by a soldier named Roane, for a guard. While she milked the cows, Roane sat on the fence; but instead of looking out for Indians, his eyes were attracted toward Betsey. She, observing his gaze, said, “Roane, you better look the other way, and see if there are any Indians near.” Turning round at that moment, he saw an Indian with tomahawk in hand, creeping slyly toward him. Roane screamed, leaped from the fence, and run, gun in hand, leaving Betsey to do the best she could for herself. Fortunately, however, Betsey regained the garrison in safety.

Mr. Hoyt further relates — as what he had often heard his father say — “that at this time Indians were constantly lurking about, so that people had to go out in companies to do work in the field; that Benjamin Abbot had a large field of rye on what is now called the Bog Road, which the Indians watched with a design to kill the men who went out to reap it. But at the proper time, the people turned out in such force that the rye was all harvested and carted home early in the forenoon, so that the Indians were disappointed; whereupon they gratified their revenge by killing as many cows, oxen, sheep and horses as they could, at pasture, in the vicinity of Turkey Pond. They also fired at and wounded an old Mr. Pudney, who was carrying a wooden bottle of beer from one of the garrisons to men at work at the Eleven Lots. The ball broke his arm, so that he dropped the bottle, and ran back to the garrison,"* [round Timothy Walker, junior's, house.]

In the fall of 1747† a large party of Indians made their appearance in the southwest part of the town, and for several weeks continued ranging about the woods, destroying cattle, horses, &c. Jeremiah Bradley, (who lived near where Mr. Charles Hall now lives,) had a fine field for fall grazing, and into this many of the citizens had turned their sheep and neat cattle. Reports from the guns of the Indians were frequently heard, and numbers of the cattle were destroyed. The inhabitants at length rallied, and a strong party, armed, proceeded cautiously in two divisions toward the enemy. In the woods, near the field, one of the party found numerous packs, &c., belonging to the Indians, and concluded to await their approach in concealment. As they were approaching, one of the men, through accident, or an eager desire to avenge his losses, fired his musket, and alarmed the Indians, who, observing the smoke

PROV. OF NEW-HAMP.

To His Excellency BENNING WENTWORTH, Esq., Gov'r, &c.:
The Petition of Joseph Pudney, of Rumford, most humbly sheweth —

That your petit'r, the last summer, at Rumford afores'd, while in His Majesty's service, was wounded by the Indians, who by their shot broke his arm, and the bones much shattered; that altho' the wound is healed up, yet he is unable to do any work to earn his livelihood, and his arm so weak that he is unfit for scouting, &c.; that he is able to do the duty of a garrison soldier, and as such are wanted in the sd town of Rumford, he humbly conceives in that body he might be so far serviceable as to earn his living. Wherefore your pet'r most humbly prays that he may be held in His Majesty's service, and posted at the sd town as a garrison soldier. And yr pet'r as in duty bound shall ever pray.

JOSEPH PUDNEY.

May 17, 1748.

In the House of Representatives, 28th May, 1748, of the gun, filed off in an opposite direction. The whole party then fired, but with little injury to their tawny adversaries. The body of an Indian was, however, sometime afterward found secreted in a hollow log, into which, it is supposed, having been wounded by the fire of the party, he had crawled and expired.

There was a garrison—though probably at a somewhat later period—situated on what was called Rattlesnake Plain, just across the road southwest of Mr. Simeon Abbot’s house, near the track of the Concord and Claremont Railroad. Belonging to and defended by the garrison, were four houses, built of logs, the cellars and foundations of which are visible to this day. Here were James Abbot, James Abbot, jun., Reuben Abbot, Amos Abbot, and Joseph Farnum. There is a story that the young folks from the Abbot garrison were very fond of going out, of an evening, to visit the Farnums, who lived some eighty rods distant, and that the old people were much concerned lest they should be waylaid by the Indians. As the young folks did not heed the cautions given them, Mr. Reuben Abbot, (the same who lived to his hundredth year,) undertook to cure their temerity. Accordingly, one evening, when the young folks were at Ephraim Farnum’s, he, dressed in Indian style, secreted himself in the bushes by the road-side, and waited their return. As they approached the spot, he made a rustling noise, grunting like an Indian, and partially showed himself—when the young people fled with terror to the garrison. After that they never wished to go out again in the evening, but they kept the cause of their fright a secret.

Samuel Farrington, grandson of Stephen Farrington, who married Applia, daughter of Abraham Bradley, relates that on one occasion, in the time of Indian troubles, her grandmother, who, like others of the Bradley race, was a fearless woman, went into the field where her husband and others had gone to mow, and she found them reclining under a tree, after dinner, asleep, and their guns stacked near by. She took one of the guns—of the kind called Queen Anne’s muskets—and discharged it very near them. The gun rebounded and nearly kicked her over. They sprung upon their feet with great consternation, supposing that Indians were upon them: when Mrs. Farrington, recovering also from the unexpected shock, laughingly signified that possibly they might receive a worse fire than from a woman, if found asleep again!

Capt. Henry Lovejoy once had a narrow escape from the Indians. Returning from Osgood’s tavern to his garrison, on horseback, in the evening, he apprehended that Indians might waylay him, and that they would be likely to do it in the gully, south of Ephraim Farnum’s. As he approached the crossing-place, he pretended to have command of men, and cried out, “Rush on, my boys — be ready to fire!” and then galloped over with full speed. On reaching home he went to turn his horse into pasture on the north side of Rattlesnake hill: letting the bars down, he noticed an alarm and stir among the cows. Inferring that Indians were near, he turned toward the garrison, and hid himself under a large wind-fall tree. Immediately two Indians with guns trotted over the tree in pursuit. He lay still till they returned and went off, and then regained the fort.

In a deposition given relative to the Bow controversy, 1757, Isaac Chandler and Jacob Pilsberry, of Rumford, state, “That there was no way for the people, in their power, to defend themselves against their [Indian] enemies, but by assembling together, by common agreement, as many families as conveniently could, and first erecting a fort or garrison sufficient to contain them, and then building within the same a house for each family to screen them from the inclemency of the weather. And all this they did at their own expense. Moreover, by being obliged to keep watch and ward, and to work together in large companies for the greater safety during the summer; and their being frequently called from their business — either by some assault, or the discovery of the Indians — and other avocations occasioned by the war, the deponents really believe that the said inhabitants lost near one half of their time during the most busy and valuable part of the year; for all which they never, as the deponents heard of, had any allowance or consideration.

“And that notwithstanding all these discouragements, they have stood their ground against the enemy; supported themselves with all the necessaries of life; and also yearly spared considerable quantities of provisions to the neighboring villages in the said province,—which must have suffered very much if they had not had their assistance.

"And that they have been always ready, upon notice of distress or danger among their neighbors, during the war, to go to their relief, many times in considerable companies, to places at a great distance, all at their own expense: beside the losses they have sustained, not only of human lives, but also in their stocks of cattle, many scores of which were destroyed in one day by the enemy, beside what were destroyed at other times.

Isaac Chandler,
Jacob Pilsberry."

CHAPTER VI.

FRENCH AND INDIAN WARS, IN WHICH THE INHABITANTS OF RUMFORD TOOK AN ACTIVE PART.*

By what was called the "Treaty of Aix la Chapelle," in 1748, between France and England, there was a suspension of hostilities for a few years. The border towns, however, were constantly exposed to Indian depredations and massacres. Hence garrisons were kept up, and the people continued to go out, armed, in companies, to their work in the fields. The war, however, between France and England was renewed in 1754, and continued till 1762.

This long, bloody and savage war, which involved England and her colonies on the one side, and France, with her Indian allies on the other, arose out of unsettled boundaries.†

In these wars New-Hampshire bore a conspicuous part, and Rumford contributed her full share of men and means. The New-Hampshire troops were distinguished above most others for bold and daring enterprise, hardihood, expertise in shooting, and especially for their knowledge in all the arts of Indian warfare. They were, therefore, for the most part employed as

† "By the construction of charters and grants from the crown of England, her colonies extended indefinitely westward from the Atlantic coast. The French, however, had settlements in Canada and Louisiana, and they meditated to join these distant colonies by a chain of forts and posts, from the river St. Lawrence to the Mississippi, and to extend the limits of Canada as far eastward as to command navigation in the winter, when the St. Lawrence is impassable. These claims of territory, extending, on the one part, from east to west, and, on the other, from north to south, necessarily interfered."—Belknap.
Rangers and scouts—to lay in ambush—to make sudden attacks upon the enemy—to clear roads through woods, and, in short, to perform all the most difficult and dangerous services. Many of them were rangers under those fearless leaders, Robert Rogers, John Stark and William Stark. Others were in more regular service under the command of Col. Joseph Blanchard, of Dunstable, and Col. Nathaniel Meserve, of Portsmouth. Soldiers from Rumford were in the first expedition to Crown Point in 1755; at Fort Edward, and in the terrible scene at Fort William Henry, in 1757. Some of them were also with General Amherst, under the command of Colonel Zaccheus Lovell, at the reduction of Ticonderoga and Crown Point, in 1759, and shared in the glory of the victory at Quebec, when the brave General Wolfe was slain.*

Great pains have been taken to ascertain the names of all the soldiers from Rumford, engaged in the French and Indian wars, from 1754 till the peace in 1762. From the different muster rolls, found in the office of the Secretary of State, and from other sources, we have been able to collect the following.

In September, 1754, Capt. John Chandler had command of a company of nine men, "in His Majesty's service," for eight days only, viz.: from the 8th to the 17th of September. Probably they were engaged in a scouting service in the neighboring towns. The men were:

*In regard to the geographical position of the several places above mentioned, it may be noted, that (1.) Crown Point was at the southern extremity of Lake Champlain; (2.) Ticonderoga, near the junction of Lake George with Lake Champlain, and about ten miles south of Crown Point; (3.) Fort William Henry was at the southern end of Lake George; (4.) Fort Edward was about fifteen miles southeast of Fort William Henry, near the head waters of the Hudson river. (5.) St. Francis Village, where a terrible fight took place, 1759, between the Rangers, under Rogers, and the Indians, was on the river St. Francis, near the Thousand Isles in the river St. Lawrence, and some thirty or forty miles from the head waters of the Connecticut river.

In 1759, the troops from New-Hampshire cut almost a straight road from Charlestown No. Four to Ticonderoga.

In 1755 Capt. Joseph Eastman, third son of Capt. Ebenezer Eastman, had command of a company of sixty-five men in Col. Joseph Blanchard’s regiment, which was raised for the expedition against Crown Point.† This company was ordered to proceed to the Coös country, toward the head waters of the Connecticut, and to build a fort there; and thence to proceed to Crown Point, supposing that to be the most direct route. They first marched to Baker’s Town, (now Franklin,) where they began to build batteaux, with which to navigate the waters, and cross rivers betwixt that place and Crown Point. Thus, much time was consumed and provisions spent to no purpose. They afterward performed a fatiguing march through the wilderness, over the height of land, to Number Four, Charlestown, and reached Albany. Gen. Johnson, who had command at Lake George, ordered the New-Hampshire Regiment to Fort Edward, where they remained for some time, but subsequently were employed mostly as rangers.

The men in this company from Concord, were — Joseph Eastman, captain; Nathaniel Abbot, lieutenant; David Copps, sergeant; Moses Eastman, sergeant; Nath’l Morse, clerk; David

The company under Capt. Eastman were mostly in service from April to October. The journal kept by Nath'l Morse, the company's clerk, will be read with interest.

In Capt. John Shepard's company, of Col. Meserve's regiment, 1756, Ezekiel Steel is enrolled as of Rumford.

Joshua Abbot, son of Lieut. Nathaniel Abbot, John Shute, Daniel Abbot, Benjamin HannaFord, Amos Eastman, Nathaniel Eastman, Joseph Eastman, Benjamin Bradley, Stephen Hoit, David Evans, Stilson Eastman and Philip Kimball, and no doubt others, for some time, were engaged in the French and Indian wars, either in the regular service or as rangers. But, as Belknap truly remarks, "The history of a war on the frontiers can be little else than a recital of the exploits, the sufferings, the escapes and deliverances of individuals, of single families or small parties," — so I shall proceed to give details of individual daring, hardihood and sufferings, which have been gathered from public documents or from family traditions.

‡ Perhaps of Boscawen.
On the 28th of April, 1752, Amos Eastman,* of Rumford, son of Jonathan Eastman, (whose garrison was on the mill road,) in company with John and William Stark, of Derryfield, (now Manchester,) and David Stinson, of Londonderry, was on a hunting expedition near Baker's river, in Rumney. The company had been very successful, estimating their furs, &c., at £560 old tenor. Here they fell in with a party of ten Indians, of the St. Francis tribe. It being a time of peace, danger was not at first apprehended. But towards evening the Indians made prisoner of John Stark, who had separated from the rest, to collect the traps. Suspecting mischief, the party was proceeding down the river—William Stark and Stinson in a canoe, and Eastman on the bank—when the Indians came upon them, took Eastman prisoner, shot into the canoe and killed Stinson, who was afterward stripped and scalped; William Stark escaped through the intrepidity of John, who struck up the Indians' guns when they were leveled at his brother. Eastman and John Stark were carried captives to St. Francis, which they reached on the 9th of June.† Here they were compelled to undergo the ceremony of running the gauntlet. The young Indians of the settlement ranged themselves in to two lines, each armed with a rod, to strike the captives as they passed along. Eastman was severely whipped; but Stark snatched a club, and made his way through the lines, knocking the Indians down, right and left, whenever they came within his reach, and escaped with scarcely a blow. Eastman was sold to a French master, and was kindly treated: as was also Stark, who became a favorite among the Indians. Both were redeemed, after about six weeks, by a Mr. Wheelwright, from Boston, and Capt. Stevens, from Charlestown, who were sent from Massachusetts for the purpose of obtaining the release of prisoners. Stark paid for his redemption one hundred and three dollars, and Eastman sixty. They returned home by way of Albany.‡

When the news of the capture of Eastman and Stark reached

Rumford, a party was raised, who proceeded to Baker's river, found and buried the body of Stinson in the woods, and brought home one of the paddles of the canoe, which was pierced with several shot holes. It was preserved a long time by the Virgin family.

Benjamin Bradley, son of Timothy, son of Abraham Bradley, was one of Rogers' rangers. He was with Rogers in the terrible fight at St. Francis, October 3, 1759. The particulars of this bloody scene are substantially these: The Indian village of St. Francis, which lay some thirty miles above the source of the Connecticut, was the head-quarters of the savages who committed the worst depredations on the border towns of New-England. Upon the reduction of Ticonderoga and Crown Point, Major Robert Rogers was despatched from the latter place, by Gen. Amherst, with about two hundred rangers, to destroy the village of St. Francis. After a fatiguing march of twenty-one days, over mountains and through swamps, they reached the place in the evening, and found the Indians engaged "in a wedding frolick." Arranging his forces, he waited till near morning, when the Indian revelry had ceased, and all were asleep; then the fatal attack was made. Some were killed in their houses; others were shot or tomahawked, as they attempted to flee. In the morning the rangers discovered about six hundred scalps hanging upon poles over the doors of the wigwams, that the Indians had taken, and also found great quantities of plunder from the English settlements. These were taken; about two hundred Indians were killed, and the whole village laid in ashes. Among the articles brought away were two hundred guineas, a silver image, weighing ten pounds, and a large quantity of wampum and clothing. The rangers also rescued five English prisoners, and took twenty Indians captive. In this fight it is related that Lieut. Jacob Farrington, of Andover, Massachusetts, and Benjamin Bradley, of Rumford—two of the stoutest men of their time—headed one of Rogers' parties. Coming to the door of the house, where the dance had taken place, they pushed against it so violently that the hinges broke, and Bradley fell in head-foremost among the sleeping Indians. Before they could make resistance, all the Indians in the room were killed. In returning, wearied, exhausted, cold and almost destitute of provisions from this expedition, the rangers struck Connecticut river, in the month of November, at the upper Coös, which they mistook for the lower Coös. Here they parted. Bradley took a point of compass which, from the lower Coös, would have brought him to the Merrimack; but at the upper Coös, would bring him out near the White Hills. He remarked on starting that if he was in his full strength, he would be at his father’s house in three days. He started, tradition says, with a party of four or five men, but they never reached home. It is supposed they all perished with hunger and cold amid the snows of the wilderness.

In the following spring a party of hunters found the bones of a man in Jefferson, near the White Hills. Near by were three half burnt brands piled together, and a quantity of silver broaches and wampum lay scattered about. The hair was long, and tied with a ribbon such as Bradley wore. No arms were with him, nor any signs of his companions.* Bradley was only twenty-one years of age.

Mr. Jacob Hoit relates that his uncle, Stephen Hoit, was with Bradley when they started from upper Coös, and that the following spring some clothes and other things were found on an island in the Winnepissiogee lake. Among them was a snuff-box, marked Stephen Hoit, found by Capt. Archelaus Miles, of Canterbury.

David Evans, of Rumford, was one of the rangers who was in the fight at St. Francis. He was a sergeant, and led a party from upper Coös down the Connecticut to Number Four. He stated that the rangers at times suffered every hardship which men could endure; that one night, while the men of his party were asleep in the camp, his own cravings for food were so insupportable, that he awoke from a sleep, and seeing a large knapsack belonging to one of his comrades, opened it, in hopes of finding something to satisfy his hunger; that he found in it three human heads; that he cut a piece from one of them, broiled and ate it, while the men continued to sleep; but said that he would sooner die of hunger than do the like again. He observed "that when their distresses were greatest, they hardly deserved the name of human beings." *

Nathaniel Eastman, fourth son of Capt. Ebenezer, was in the battle fought at Lake George, in September, 1755, between Gen. Johnson's forces on the one side, and the French Baron Dieskau's troops and Indians on the other. Mr. Eastman was in Col. Williams' regiment of twelve hundred men, who, nearly surrounded by the French, fought with the utmost desperation. Eastman was wounded in the knee. He, however, continued to fire at the enemy, till he was left almost alone by the retreat of the advanced guards. He then limped through the woods, and joined his company. Gen. Dieskau was wounded and taken prisoner. He praised the valor of Johnson's troops, saying, "that in the morning they fought like brave boys; at noon, like men; but in the afternoon like devils!"†

Stilson Eastman, a grandson of Capt. Ebenezer Eastman, was a ranger under Lieut. John Stark, and was in the bloody fight near Ticonderoga, in January, 1757: when Major Rogers was twice wounded, and the command devolved on Lieut. Stark. Eastman said that on receiving his second wound, Major Rogers advised a retreat; but Stark, taking the command, declared he would shoot the first man that fled, and that he would fight the enemy till dark; and then, if necessary, retreat. While Stark was speaking, a ball broke the lock of his gun; at the same time, observing a Frenchman fall, he sprang forward, seized his gun, returned to his place, and continued the fight.

At Crown Point Gen. Amherst had command of the army. The General was so fond of milk that he kept a cow in camp, which had liberty to run at large, to find the best feeding ground. It so happened after a while that the cow was missing, and could not be found; soldiers were sent in various directions, but could not find her. At length Eastman was sent with others, and he found her, to the great joy of the General, who, as a reward, ordered Eastman's canteen to be filled. Eastman at this was as well pleased as the General, for no one loved the good crater better than he. The cow had strayed away into a piece of meadow, where she found good feed. Well, for the sake of getting the good crater, he occasionally drove the cow to the same by-place, where no one could find her but himself, and whenever he brought in the cow he got his pay in the canteen.*

John Shute and Joseph Eastman, both from Rumford, belonged to Rogers' rangers. They were mess-mates through the French war, equally distinguished for their enterprise, hardihood and trustworthiness. John was the son of Jacob Shute, and Eastman, born May 20, 1720, was probably a nephew of Capt. Ebenezer, and son of Joseph, of Salisbury. In 1760, General Amherst, at Crown Point, wished to send despatches to General Murray, at Quebec—the distance through the wilderness being estimated at five hundred miles. Major Rogers was directed to select men to bear the despatches; and on account of the difficult and dangerous nature of the service, a reward of fifty pounds was offered to any four who would volunteer to perform it. Sergeant Beverly, who had been a prisoner of war, and escaped from Canada the preceding year, with John Shute, Joseph Eastman and Luxford Goodwin, volunteered for the hazardous enterprise.

Having received particular instructions and orders from Major Rogers, as to the route, they took the despatches, and also numerous letters from officers at Crown Point to their friends in Quebec, and first proceeded under a convoy to Missisquoi Bay. Thence they were to travel on foot to Quebec, taking the route by St. Francis, which the rangers under Rogers had travelled the year before. In relating the incidents of this journey, as Mr. Shute often did, in after life,† he says:

With these instructions, they left the Bay, and proceeding many days through wet, marshy grounds, where they could scarcely find a dry spot to encamp upon at night, they reached the St. Francis one Sunday morning, striking the river just above a rapid. They now consulted whether it was better for them to disobey orders, and cross immediately, or to wait until night. They came to a conclusion that they were far enough from the army to be their own masters, and determined to cross the river as soon as possible. For this purpose, they collected a quantity of driftwood and constructed two rafts, at some distance above the falls, in order that two of the party might first cross, and if they found no cause of alarm, notify the others to follow with the letters. By casting lots, it fell upon Shute and Eastman to cross first, who immediately pushed off; but as they had no better instruments than poles with which to work the raft, the current proving stronger than they expected, carried them some distance down stream, and they saved themselves by leaping upon a rock, just at the head of the falls, against the point of which their raft struck. They saved their guns and knapsacks, with all their provisions and ammunition.

* Tradition by Jonathan Eastman, Esq. For further notice of Stilson Eastman, see Biographical Chapter.

† This account was taken down from Mr. Shute's lips, by Samuel A. Kimball, Esq., about the year 1829.

After reconnoitering, and finding no traces of the enemy, they called to the others to come over, warning them to attempt the passage higher up the stream; but, not sufficiently regarding this caution, their raft was suffered to enter the current, where it soon became unmanageable. Finding that they must go over the falls, they threw down their poles and cried for mercy. Shute and Eastman told them to throw off their clothes and sit down, which they did; and the raft went down the rapids. From a tree which overlooked the stream, Shute and his companion watched their descent, as they alternately appeared and disappeared, passing through a rapid of nearly an eighth of a mile in extent. They then ran down to the foot of the fall, when they found Beverly climbing up the bank, and Goodwin clinging to a press of driftwood, whom they extricated from his perilous situation. By this disaster, two of the party had lost their arms, clothing, and provisions, together with all the letters. Shute and Eastman here divided their clothing and provisions with the other two, and the whole party again consulted as to the expediency of going forward, or returning. They considered that if they should fall into the enemy's hands without their papers, they would be in danger of being hanged as spies; and if they went back Rogers would call them cowards, and traitors, who had made up a false and improbable account, to excuse their own imbecility. They concluded rather to take their chance of the cruelty of the enemy, than meet the reproaches of Rogers, and proceeded on their journey. From this place they proceeded through a wet, swampy country, with scarcely any provisions for several days, until one Sunday morning, when they heard the sound of a bell. They followed the sound, and came in sight of people going to a Catholic Chapel. Concealing themselves until the services had commenced, and all was quiet, they entered a house whose occupants were at church, helped themselves to provisions and clothing, and retired.

From this they followed a foot path into the woods, which, at a quarter of a mile's distance, brought them to a log house, against the gable end of which a ladder rested, leading to a door fastened with a padlock, which, breaking open with their hatchets, they discovered a large chest, filled with female clothing of the richest quality.
Helping themselves to a share of the plunder,* they pursued their march in the woods, avoiding all roads, until nearly night, when they ventured again to approach the settlements. After the village people had retired to rest, they entered a barn in quest of a hog for provision. As they opened the door, a calf ran out, which they killed and divided into four parts. Then proceeding to the garden of a gentleman's house, they rifled it of what vegetables they had occasion for, and after doing all the mischief they could in the garden, it being part of the rangers' creed to do their enemies all the damage in their power, retreated. Retiring with their booty about four miles into the woods, they kindled a fire, refreshed themselves with part of their provision, dried the remainder in the smoke, and made moccasins of the skin.

Pursuing their march three or four days, they ascended a high hill, the top of which exhibited memorials of an Indian encampment the winter before.

From this eminence they saw, for the first time, the river St. Lawrence, and a large encampment of regular troops upon the bank. This was about twenty miles above Quebec. The party were here in doubt whether the troops were French or English; but sergeant Beverly determined, against the consent of the others, that he would ascertain whether they were friends or foes; and, if foes, would make a signal, that they might take care of themselves. His companions watched his progress, saw him stopped by the sentinel, and after a moment's pause, enter the camp, where several officers shook hands with him; upon this, they all followed and were received with open arms by the English. After stating their business to the commander, he put them on board a boat, to proceed to head quarters at Quebec, where they arrived at midnight, and were conducted to General Murray's kitchen. There they slept upon the floor until morning, when they were severally conducted into a large hall, lined with mirrors, in which were about one hundred officers. There, says Mr. Shute, "each man received a glass of liquor, such as I have never tasted before nor since, nor have I ever drank any thing so good in my life." After this they were directed to tell their several stories, which, as they had previously agreed upon a statement of facts, coincided very well, although they were separately examined. The General and the soldiers made them welcome, and invited them to remain as long as they pleased. After resting a few days they applied to the General for leave to return, who told them to wait a few days longer, and they should move with the army toward Montreal, and that he would give them four guineas each, extra pay. They did so, and joined their own corps at Montreal, in September. Rogers arriving soon after there, they witnessed the surrender of Canada, September 8, 1760.

General Murray is represented by Mr. Shute as a small, active old gentleman, prompt and decisive in all his movements, and a great favorite with the soldiers. While he commanded the garrison at Quebec, after the surrender of that city to the English, some time before his advance to Montreal, Monsieur Levi made an attempt to recapture Quebec. Gen. Murray advanced to meet him at Sillery, with three thousand men; a severe action took place, and the English were driven back to the city, which they defended against the subsequent siege of the French General; who, after several attacks and ineffectual cannonade, drew off his troops, and retired toward Montreal.

After the war, Mr. Shute was accustomed to go on hunting excursions to the northern parts of New-Hampshire and Maine, accompanied only by his dog. One day,* when the snow was on the ground, he discovered that a catamount was on his track; and knowing, from the habits of the animal, that he would be likely to have an encounter, he went immediately to his camp and built a large fire, so that the catamount could not reach him without passing through the fire. Shute and his dog then lay down in the camp. The catamount soon made his appearance before the camp, and walked forward and back several times, growling frightfully. At length he stood up on his hind legs, and screamed terribly; (as Mr. Shute expressed it, "yelled like a sarpent;") jumped through the fire into the camp, seized the dog, and turned to jump out. At that instant Mr. Shute discharged his gun into the bowels of the beast, which fell dead upon the fire. The dog was so injured by the teeth of the catamount and the fire, that he could do but little service afterward. At one time Mr. Shute brought home furs from a hunting excursion, sufficient, with the additional value of a heifer, to build him a barn. One of the double-spring steel traps which he used in hunting beaver is now in the possession of his nephew, Moses Shute, Esq. A sword which he owned was also preserved for many years by the same gentleman, but was taken from his house by some person unknown, and all trace of it lost.†

"BILL PHILLIPS."

One of Rogers’ rangers, who spent several years of his life in Concord, was William Phillips, called lieutenant, and familiarly known as "Bill Phillips." He was part Indian — his father being of French or Dutch extraction. He came from the region of Albany, and enlisted in Rogers' company in 1755; soon after became a sergeant, and after the battle on Lake Champlain, January 21, 1757, he received a lieutenant's commission, which was signed by the Earl of Loudon.* In the bloody fight at Lake George, March 13, 1758, when Phillips and his company of about twenty men were nearly surrounded by about three hundred Indians, he said to Rogers, "if the enemy would give good quarters, he thought it best to surrender; otherwise he would fight while he had one man left to fire a gun!" He and his party were all taken, and then fastened to trees by the Indians, for the purpose of being shot or hewn to pieces. Phillips got one hand loose, took a knife from his pocket, which he opened with his teeth, cut the strings that bound him, and escaped.† He was in the fight at St. Francis, in 1759. On retreating from that place, he had command of a small party, which, one tradition says, separated from Lieut. Benjamin Bradley, at the "Upper Coös;" Phillips following the Connecticut river down as far as Haverhill, or "Lower Coös;"—thence he and his party struck across till they reached the Merrimack river, which they followed, and arrived safely at Rumford. But, on the other hand, the late Mr. Isaac Shute says: "My father, John Shute, always said that Lieut. Phillips led a party from St. Francis to Crown Point, and that he afterwards came to Concord." This agrees with what Rogers says in a note to his journal, (p. 94,) after the fight at St. Francis: "Upon our separation on the shores of Memphremagog lake, some of the parties were ordered to make Crown Point, that being the best route for hunting. One party, conducted by Phillips, an Indian, * * * reached home without the loss of a man — returning by the route which I went to St. Francis." On the way, however, the party subsisted on bark and buds of trees; chewed the straps of their knapsacks, powder-horns and pouches, and some fed upon lumps of tallow. They were reduced to such extremity that they determined to kill and eat a captive boy they had brought from St. Francis, but fortunately shot a muskrat, which, cooked and divided among them, appeared for a time the gnawings of hunger.*

After the French war, Phillips lived for some time in Rumford; formed an acquaintance with Miss Eleanor Eastman, daughter of Ebenezer Eastman, jr., whom he married on a forged license. Tradition says that the marriage took place in Lieut. John Chandler's tavern, which is the identical building now occupied by Mr. Cyrus Farrar, as a silk dye-shop in the East Village. Instead of the parish minister, the marriage service was performed by a justice of the peace — Samuel Fowler, Esq., of Boscawen.† Phillips and his wife lived together a while in a small house which stood on the corner opposite Mr. John M. Dearborn's store. They had one son. About the year 1784 Phillips' wife left him and joined the Shakers at Canterbury, who had held meetings or "dances," as they were called, at Phillips' house, in which his wife joined; but Phillips said he "couldn't dance, and would not join." He afterward led a roving, unsettled life — fishing, hunting and stealing; sometimes working at the blacksmith's trade, of which he knew a little, and at other times working at days' labor. He lived a while with his wife's brother, Stilson Eastman, but at length became a pauper, and, according to usage of the times, was "bid off," to be supported at the town charge. He lived several years in the family of Richard Potter, of Anthony Potter, of Joseph Potter, and of Ebenezer Tenney, on the Loudon road. At length it was discovered by the selectmen that Phillips had once resided in Northfield, as a blacksmith, where he had gained "a residence;" and he was put upon that town, where he died about the year 1819, supposed to be nearly a hundred years of age. Phillips' wife, Eleanor Eastman, died at the Shaker settlement in Canterbury, November 17, 1816, aged seventy.‡

† This Esq. Fowler was a Quaker. In 1750 he entered his protest against paying the minister of Boscawen, "not from personal dislike, but for conscience sake."

Eleanor Eastman died of consumption, November 17, 1816, aged seventy years. She lived in Concord, near the fort, and was once married to a man by the name of Phillips. She resumed her maiden name after she united with the society of Shakers.

Miriam Eastman, sister of Eleanor, died of dropsy, June 1, 1813, aged fifty-seven years. She was never married.

Daniel Abbot, son of Dea. George, enlisted in March, 1759, then not quite twenty-one years of age. He was breaking flax in his father's barn, in the forenoon, when a recruiting officer came along, and he enlisted, unknown to his parents, and went away to the rendezvous at one of the garrisons at the north end of Main street. Being soon missed, his friends feared he had been taken off by the Indians; but, as he returned at night, their fears were allayed. Soon after, he marched with his corps to join the army at Quebec. Arriving at or near the Canada line, they judged from the appearance of the country that a large body of Indians was in the vicinity. The company to which he belonged was sent out on a scout, and stopped for the night; but the commander ordered every man to stand upon his feet with his gun in his hands, ready for action in case of necessity. "About noon, next day," Mr. Abbot used to relate, "on our way back to the army, the captain, not perceiving any danger, gave orders to have us form into two ranks and lie down to rest about an hour. We soon fell into a sound sleep; and, while quietly reposing, the captain hallooed, and waking up, we saw two Indians and two Frenchmen standing in about the middle of the two ranks, with their tomahawks and knives ready to commence the work of death; but we sprung upon our feet and made prisoners of them. They were surly and stubborn, and the captain gave orders to shoot them through if either of them stepped out of the ranks."

One day Daniel's turn came to go on a scout with another man. The night before he dreamed that he saw the Indians roasting meat and dancing and whooping around him. In the morning he told the man who was to accompany him that, according to his dream and the dream-book, he should be taken by the Indians that day. "Well," said the man, "if you are taken I shall not be taken." When ready to start the man drank health to Daniel. About noon, as pigeons were flying very plenty, the man said — "Come, let us sit down and rest, and shoot a few pigeons for our dinner." In about five minutes afterward, the Indians fired and hallooed. Daniel ran for an old wind-fall, where he thought he might hide and then ran back to the army; but, as he jumped over it, four Indians seized him and led him back to his comrade, who was shot in the thigh. The poor fellow cried and begged for his life, but the Indians killed, scalped, stripped him, and left the body naked on the ground. Daniel was taken to the Indian village, where he met several of his acquaintances, prisoners, who said—"Daniel, we are glad to see you, but not to see you here." The old Indian chief, who had lost a son, adopted Daniel and treated him well. Sometimes he would be sent out to work; but he pretended not to know how to work—saying "he was a minister's son and never learned how to work." At one time they told him to cut down a large tree that shaded the corn. He hacked it down after a long while, but it fell into the corn-field. When hoeing corn he hoed up corn and weeds together.

While a prisoner he was a witness to the savage barbarity of the Indians. Several English prisoners were killed by torture. The Indians dug holes in the earth about three feet deep, put their victims in, pressing them down, and then filled up the holes with dirt till they were suffocated. Some they stuck full of splinters of pitch-wood and set them on fire. Others had logs piled up near them and set on fire, and were roasted to death. Some were jointed, as they called it—that is, they begun at one of the little toes, and cut off one joint a day until all the toes were cut off—something being put on to stop the blood. Next, the fingers were cut off in like manner; then the wrists, &c., till the poor victim died. An old Indian warrior that was taken from the English was put to death by being roasted alive on a large rock, which was heated for the purpose.

Young Abbot remained in captivity about a year; was then sold, with six or eight others, to the French, and exchanged for French prisoners that had been taken by the English. On their way to the English army they killed a heifer and cut off pieces of meat, but were afraid to stop to cook it until night. Kindling fire at night they placed their meat around it to roast, but they were so overcome by fatigue that they fell asleep, and on awaking found the meat all burnt up. When they reached the English army the doctor told them "it was a good hit to them that their meat did burn up; for, having been without meat or salt so long, you would eat enough to have killed the whole of you."
Daniel soon afterward returned to his friends in Concord. He settled on a farm on the west side of Long Pond, where his youngest son, Nathan K. Abbot, now lives."

A Mr. Nutter, a soldier in the French war, in returning, came very near starving to death. When he came to Contoocook river, at the Mast Yard, he was so weak that he was unable to walk. He got a few old sticks of what is called drift-wood, and succeeding in getting upon them, he floated down the river. When he got below Broad Cove, he crawled from his raft to shore, and then crept perhaps one fourth of a mile, and became exhausted, and laid down by the side of a small bank, and expected to die there; but some person came along and discovered him, and had him carried to Mr. Enoch Webster's, where he soon after died. The Nutter brook, so called, is upon the farm formerly owned and occupied by Lieut. Ezra Abbot. Mr. Enoch Webster lived near where Capt. Samuel Knowlton's blacksmith shop now stands. Mr. Webster's house was afterward destroyed by fire.

Extract of a letter from an officer in Charlestown, otherwise called Number Four, in the Province of New-Hampshire, dated October 4, 1756:

"This day arrived here one Enoch Byshop, an English captive from Canada, who was taken from Contoocook about two years since. He left Canada twenty-six days ago, in company with two other English captives, viz.: William Hair, late of Brookfield, entered into General Shirley's regiment, and taken at Oswego; the other, (name unknown,) taken from Pennsylvania. They came away from Canada without gun, hatchet, or fire-works, and with no more than three loaves of bread and four pounds of pork. As they suffered much for want of provisions, his companions were not able to travel any further than a little on this side Cowass, where he was obliged to leave them last Lord's day, without any sustenance but a few berries. Six men were this evening sent out to look for them, but it is to be feared they perished in the wilderness."†

CHAPTER VII.

CONTROVERSY WITH BOW.

In giving the history of the controversy between the proprietors of Rumford and of Bow, in regard to the title to their lands, I shall aim to make an impartial statement of facts, with reference to such official documents as are on hand. Long, expensive and vexatious as was the litigation at the time, yet, since the settlement of it by the proper judicial authority, there is no further occasion for acrimony on either side. The present inhabitants of both towns — for the most part ignorant of the nature of the contest — are living in good neighborhood, which we trust will never more be interrupted.

The reader will bear in mind that Penacook was granted by Massachusetts, January 17, 1725, on the ground of her claim to the lands "lying three miles north of the Merrimack river, from its mouth to the sources thereof." This claim was disputed by New-Hampshire; and when the surveyors from Haverhill, in May, 1726, came to lay off the lands in Penacook, they were met and warned to desist by a committee from the government of New-Hampshire. May 20, 1727, a grant of a township was made by New-Hampshire to one hundred and seven proprietors and "their associates," bounded as follows: "Beginning on the south-east side of the town of Chichester, and running nine miles by Chichester and Canterbury, and carrying that breadth of nine miles from each of the aforesaid towns, south-west, until the full complement of eighty-one square miles are fully made up, and that the same be a town corporate, by the name of Bow, to the persons aforesaid and their associates forever."* This grant, as will be seen by the annexed Plan,† covered about three fourths of the township of Penacook, and also the greater part of Suncook, or Pembroke, and extended even into Hopkinton.‡

The Associates composed the government of New-Hampshire, viz.: His Excellency and Honorable Samuel Shute, Esq., and John Wentworth, Esq., each of them five hundred acres of land and a home lot; Col. Mark Hunking, Col. Walton, George Jaff-

† EXPLANATION OF THE ANNEXED PLAN.

1 Rumford—laid out by Massachusetts, seven miles square and one hundred rods on the south, is represented by thick black lines.
2. Suncook—laid out also by Massachusetts, south of Rumford, is on both sides of the river.
3. Bow—laid out by New-Hampshire, represented by double lines—nine miles square, and is apparent on the plan—covering, like a wide sheet, nearly the whole territory, both of Rumford and Suncook.
4. The dotted line on the east represents the "three miles north of the Merrimack river" claimed by Massachusetts.
5. Canterbury, Chichester, Epsom and Bow, were all granted by New-Hampshire, May 29, 1737, as is believed, without previous actual survey.
§§ The Plan—although not drawn with perfect accuracy—is sufficiently clear to show the grounds of the long controversy.

‡ The parsamulation of the Lines of the Town of Bow as Surveyed by me, the subscriber, on or about the year 1749.

I began at the Reputed Bound of the Town of Chichester, at the head of Nottingham, and from thence run north-west four miles to the head of Epsom; then there marked a maple tree with the word Bow and sundry Letters, and from said tree, which I called the East Corer of said Bow, I run north-west, four miles, to the West Corner of Chichester; ye northeast, one mile, to Canterbury South Corner; then north-west, five miles, on said Canterbury; ye south-west, nine miles, which runs to north-west of Rattlesnake Hill and most of the Pond that lays on the north-west side of said hill; and said Line crosses Hopkintown Road, so called, and takes part of said Town in; then we marked a tree and run south-east, five miles, and marked a tree; ye one mile south-west; then south-east, four miles; ye northeast, nine miles, to where we began.

inhabitation to the south of Canterbury and east of Merrimack which are in Rumford to be

PLAN OF RUMFORD AND BOW.
these, sixteen others were added by order of the lieutenant governor and council—making in all, one hundred and forty-four.

In 1733 Penacook was incorporated by Massachusetts into a township by the name of Rumford. In 1737 the king determined the boundary line between Massachusetts and New-Hampshire, so that Rumford fell under the jurisdiction of the latter. After the expiration of the District act, (1748,) a petition was presented by Benjamin Rolfe, Esq., January 24, 1749, to the Governor and Council of New-Hampshire for the incorporation of Rumford by its original bounds. To this a counter petition was presented by the selectmen of Bow, February 7, 1749.

In November, (14,) 1750, a suit was commenced against Dea. John Merrill "by the proprietors of the common and undivided lands lying and being in the town of Bow," in an action of ejectment, wherein they demand against the said John Merrill eight acres of land, more or less, with the edifices and appurtenances thereof, lying and being in Bow aforesaid. This seems to have been the beginning of the litigation—the test of the right of the proprietors of Bow to the lands claimed by them, and included in the original grant of Penacook. Many other suits, it appears, were afterwards instituted; but this against Merrill involved the principle on which all the cases were finally settled.

In defending the title to their lands the proprietors of Rumford had to contend, not so much with individual inhabitants of Bow as with the government of New-Hampshire; for most of the original "proprietors" of Bow had forfeited their rights by non-fulfilment of the conditions, and the township had fallen into the hands of the "associates," who, as before observed, constituted the civil authority of the Province. Hence it was that an impartial trial seemed impossible; for the government was itself, for the most part, the tribunal before which the case was tried—judges, jurors, counsellors, and all, were in the New-Hampshire interest.

Happily the proprietors of Rumford were united in their purpose to maintain and defend their rights, and to "stand by" each other at whatever cost and sacrifice through the contest. Hence,

*Doc. No. 2, A. †Doc. No. 2, B. ‡Doc. No. 3.
April 23, 1750, they Voted, "That the proprietors will be at the cost of defending John Merrill, one of said proprietors, in the action brought against the said John by the proprietors of Bow, for the recovery of part of said John's homestead: provided, said John Merrill shall pursue and defend said action agreeable to the orders of said proprietors." Also, Voted, "That the proprietors will be at the cost and charge of supporting and defending the just right and claim of any of said Proprietors or their grantees, to any and every part of said township of Rumford, against any person or persons that shall bring a writ of trespass and ejectment for the recovery of any of said lands: provided the said proprietors or grantees that shall be trespassed upon, or that shall be sued, shall pursue and defend their rights or claims agreeable to the orders of said proprietors of Rumford."

At the same time, Capt. John Chandler, Col. Benjamin Rolfe, Lieut. Jeremiah Stickney, Mr. Ebenezer Virgin, and Dr. Ezra Carter, or the major part of them, were appointed a committee for said proprietors, "to advise and order Dea. John Merrill how he shall pursue and defend the action brought against said Merrill by the proprietors of Bow; also, to advise and order any other person or persons that shall be sued or shall sue in order to support and defend their rights or claims, what method they shall pursue for the purposes aforesaid." *

In order to meet the expenses incurred on these suits, in subsequent years, till the settlement of the controversy, the proprietors, from time to time, ordered the sale of "so much of their common and undivided lands" as would be necessary for the purpose.†

In 1760 sundry of the proprietors gave their notes, for £15

* Proprietors' Records.
† At a meeting of the proprietors, June 28, 1759, Capt. John Chandler, Ezra Carter, Esq., Mr. Ebenezer Virgin, and Mr. Joseph Hall, were appointed a committee "to lay out and sell so much of the common and undivided lands as shall be sufficient to raise a sum of fifteen hundred Spanish dollars, over and above the cost and charge of laying out, selling and recording said lands — said sum to be applied for the defence of the said proprietors' title to their township, against the claims which any person or persons shall or may lay to the same or any part thereof, either in any of His Majesty's courts of justice in this Province, or in forwarding of an appeal to His Majesty in Council, according to such directions as said proprietors have or may give."

March 13, 1758, Mr. Joseph Hall, Mr. Ebenezer Eastman and Mr. Peter Coffin, were appointed "a committee to dispose of so much Iron Ore belonging to the proprietors as they shall think proper for the benefit of said proprietors."
each, as security or indemnity for expense of agents employed by them; which, however, were afterwards recovered. And in 1766, before the final adjustment of the controversy, they agreed and voted to raise £400 sterling, and a committee was appointed "to apportion said sum on the proprietors and their grantees."

In the course of the trial various depositions were obtained, showing the preoccupancy of the lands by inhabitants of Rumford, even before the grant of Bow was made. Richard Hazen deposed, December 14, 1752, that he surveyed the house and home-lots in Penacook in May, 1726; and again another division of lands in May, 1727; and "that there were near fifty of the proprietors at work there, or persons whom they hired, during the time he was laying out said lands." Edward Abbot deposed, "that on 8th of May, 1727, he, with many others, set out from Andover on their journey to a new township called Penacook, in order to erect a house which had been some time before begun, which was designed by the settlers for a meeting-house for the public worship of God; that about the same time, in said month, a considerable number of settlers — about forty — went up to the said place, and that John Merrill, one of the said settlers, moved his family up to the said plantation in June, 1730, having made considerable improvements there the three preceding years." Mr. Abbot also deposed and said, that "he had been well acquainted with the circumstances of the plantation of Penacook from its first settlement to this day, and that he never knew any of the proprietors of Bow, as such, their agents or delegates, settle upon, manure, or occupy any part of the said township or plantation." Jacob Shute deposed, "that in the fall of the year 1727 he assisted in moving up the first family that settled at Penacook; that he then found a meeting-house built, considerable hay cut and cured, and corn planted, and that in the month of June, 1730, John Merrill moved his family up to the said plantation, having made considerable improvements there in the three preceding years." Joseph Abbot deposed, "that some time in the month of April, 1727, he went to Penacook, and assisted in felling and hewing timber for a meeting-house; that there were then eighteen persons assisting in said business; and that during their stay there they turned their horses to some stacks of hay said to be cut there by some of the admitted settlers the year before; and that John Merrill, one of the admitted settlers, was at Penacook in the month of May, and worked some on said house, and some at clearing of land." The deponent further saith, that he is well knowing that from this time the plantation increased so fast, that in the fall of the year 1730 there was a church gathered and a minister ordained. Jeremiah Kimball made a similar deposition.

While the trial of this case was going on, a warrant was issued by the government of New-Hampshire, May 30, 1753, for raising an assessment of sixty pounds on all polls and estates ratable by law within the township of Bow; and another warrant, July 28, 1753, for raising thirty-one pounds, four shillings, to be collected and paid in on or before the 25th of December next ensuing.* The persons on whom these taxes were to be assessed, were, with perhaps three or four exceptions, inhabitants of Rumford.

Up to this time a town-meeting had never been held by the inhabitants of Bow proper; and on the 30th of June, 1753, a special act was passed, appointing Daniel Pierce, Esq., to warn

*The tax was to be paid "in bills of credit, according to their several denominations, or in coined silver at six shillings, eight pence per ounce, Troy weight, of sterling alloy, or in coined gold at four pounds, eighteen shillings per ounce; or in the following sorts and species of goods, being of the produce or manufactures of said Province, at the price to each sort and species herein respectively affixed, namely:"

and call a meeting of the inhabitants of Bow—the preamble to said act setting forth that "the inhabitants had never held a meeting as a town."† The meeting was accordingly notified and held, July 25, 1753. But unexpected difficulties were here encountered, properly set forth in the following petition, October 26, 1753.

PROVINCE OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

To His Excellency Benning Wentworth, Esq., Captain General, Governor, &c.,

We, the subscribers, humbly beg leave to inform your Excellency and Honors, that at a meeting of the freeholders and inhabitants of the town of Bow, in said Province, held the 25th day of July last past, pursuant to a special act of this General Assembly for the calling said meeting, we were chosen selectmen for said town for this current year; and that since that time we have received two several warrants from this Province treasurer — the first dated May 30th, 1753, and the other dated the 26th day of July, 1753 — by the first of which we are commanded in His Majesty's name to assess the sum of sixty pounds on said inhabitants, and by the other the sum of thirty-one pounds, four shillings; — and though we are ready, [and that with cheerfulness,] to obey every order of government, yet that we are at a loss as to the boundaries of said Bow, and consequently do not know who the inhabitants are that we are to assess said sums upon. That the proprietors of Bow, in running out the bounds of said town, have, as we conceive, altered their bounds several times; and further, that one of those gentlemen that purchased Capt. Tuf- ton Mason's right to the lands in said Province, has given it as his opinion that said proprietors have not as yet run out the bounds of said town agreeable to their charter, but that their southeast side line should be carried up about three quarters of a mile further toward the northwest; and there is lately [by his order,] a fence erected along some miles near about said place, designed, [as we suppose,] as a division fence between said Bow and land yet claimed by said purchasers.

And that, on the other hand, the inhabitants of Pennycook, formerly erected into a district by a special act of the General Assembly of this Province, [though they object nothing against submitting to order of Government,] refuse to give us an invoice of their estates, [that is, such of them as we have asked for the same,] alleging that they do not lay in Bow, and that this said Assembly did as good as declare in said district act.

So that, upon the whole, we humbly conceive, [unless the pleasure of this court is first made known relating to the aforesaid affairs,] that should we proceed to assess the aforesaid sums on such as we may have conceived are the inhabitants of said Bow, that many would refuse to pay the sums that should be so assessed on them, and consequently that we should be thrown into so many law suits, as would, in all probability, ruin us as to our estates. Therefore we humbly chore that your Excellency and Honors would take the aforesaid affairs under your wise and mature consideration, and fix the boundaries of said Bow, or otherwise give us such directions as you shall think proper. And so submitting the whole affair to your Excellency and Honors to do as you in your great wisdom shall think fit, not doubting that you will give us such directions as, if followed by us, we may obey the commands laid on us by this court without the least detriment to ourselves.

And your petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

[The House granted a hearing on the 31st of January, and on petition deferred it till the Friday after the 20th, 1754.]

The next step, February 12, 1753, on the part of the inhabitants of Rumford, was to appoint Rev. Timothy Walker and Benjamin Rolfe, Esq., to represent "to the King’s most Excellent Majesty in Council, the manifold grievances they labored under,* by reason of the law suits commenced against them by the proprietors of Bow, and by being for several years past deprived of all corporation privileges:" in August following, a petition was preferred to the Massachusetts government, representing their grievances and asking "such relief as in their great wisdom they should see fit to grant." In answer to which latter petition one hundred pounds were granted.

Deputed as an agent for the proprietors of Rumford, Rev. Mr.
Walker sailed for England in the fall of 1753;† and presented † "Whereas the Rev. Mr. Timothy Walker, of Rumford, one of our brethren, has informed us that he has some thoughts of going to England, and has desired a recommendation from us, we do hereby signify and declare that he is not only a gentleman of a liberal education, but a worthy and regular minister of ye gospel, and a member of this convention; and we do hereby freely and heartily recommend him to the charity and good esteem of all our Christian friends and brethren in England.

“to the King’s most Excellent Majesty in Council,” the following petition, drawn up, as appears, by himself, every word of which should be read.

A PETITION OF TIMOTHY WALKER AND COL. ROLFE TO THEIR MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty in Council:

The petition of Benjamin Rolfe, Esq., and Timothy Walker, clerk, inhabitants of a town called Rumford, in the Province of New-Hampshire, in New-England, for themselves, and in behalf and at the request of the other inhabitants of said town, most humbly sheweth —

That the lands contained in said town of Rumford were granted by the government of the Province of the Massachusetts Bay, in the year 1725, and were suppos’d, according to the construction of the Massachusetts Charter and the determination of His Majesty King Charles the Second, in 1677, to lay wholly within the said Province, though bounded on New-Hampshire, seeing no part of said lands extended more than three miles from the river Merrimack towards New-Hampshire. Your petitioners and their predecessors very soon engaged in bringing forward the settlement of the above granted lands, though in the midst of the Indian country, and near thirty miles beyond any English plantation, and have defended themselves more at their own cost than at the charge of the public, through the late war with ye French and Indians; and from a perfect wilderness, where not one acre of land had ever been improved, they have made a considerable town, consisting of more than eighty houses, and as many good farms; and your humble petitioner, Timothy Walker, was regularly ordained the minister of the church and parish in said town in the year 1730, and has continued there ever since.

Your petitioners beg leave further to represent to your Majesty, that at the time of the aforesaid grant they had no apprehension that their bounds would ever be controverted by the Province of New-Hampshire; but it has so happened that by your Majesty’s late determination of ye boundary line between ye two Provinces, the whole of the aforesaid township falls within the province of New-Hampshire. Soon after the aforesaid determination, your petitioners made their humble application to your Majesty in Council, that they might be restored to your Province of the Massachusetts Bay, which your Majesty was pleased to disallow; but your humble petitioners have dutifully submitted to the government of your Majesty’s Province of New-Hampshire ever since they have been under it, and with so much the greater cheerfulness because they were well informed your Majesty had been graciously pleased to declare that however the jurisdiction of the two governments might be altered, yet that the private property should not be affected thereby.

But notwithstanding this your Majesty’s most gracious declaration, your poor petitioners have for several years past been grievously harassed by divers persons under color of a grant made by the government and council of New-Hampshire in the year 1727, to sundry persons and their successors, now called the Proprietors of Bow.

Your petitioners further humbly represent, that the said grant of Bow was not only posterior to that of Rumford, but is likewise extremely vague and uncertain as to its bounds, and its being very doubtful whether it was the intent of the Governor and Council of New-Hampshire that it should infringe upon the Massachusetts grant of Rumford; and notwithstanding the grant of Bow has now been made so many years, there are but three or four families settled upon it, and those since the end of the late French war; the proprietors choosing rather to distress your petitioners by forcing them out of the valuable improvements they and their predecessors have made at the expense of their blood and treasure, than to be at the charge of making any themselves. But your petitioners' greatest misfortune is, that they cannot have a fair, impartial trial, for that the Governor and most of ye Council are proprietors of Bow, and by them not only ye judges are appointed, but also ye officers that impannels ye jury, and the people also are generally disaffected to your petitioners on account of their deriving their titles from the Massachusetts; and all the actions that have hitherto been brought are of so small value, and, as your petitioners apprehend, designed so that by a law of the Province there can be no appeal from the judgments of the courts to your Majesty in Council; and if it were otherwise the charges that would attend such appeals would be greater than the value of the land, or than the party defending his title would be able to pay; and without your Majesty's gracious interposition your petitioners must be compelled to give up their estates, contrary to your Majesty's favorable interposition in their behalf.

Your petitioners further beg leave humbly to represent, that, while they were under the government of Massachusetts Bay, they enjoyed town privileges by an act specially made for that purpose in the year 1733, and expressly approved of by your Majesty in the year 1757; but the utmost they could obtain since their being under New-Hampshire has been the erecting them into a district for a short term only; which term, having expired near four years ago, they have been without any town privileges over since, notwithstanding their repeated applications to the Governor and Council; and they are not able to raise any moneys for the support of their minister, and the necessary charges of their school and poor, and other purposes; nor have they had any town officers for the upholding government and order, as all other towns in both the Provinces of New-Hampshire and the Massachusetts Bay usually have. Under these our distresses we make our most humble application to your Majesty, the common father of your subjects, however remote, entreating your gracious interposition in our behalf; and that your Majesty would be pleased to appoint disinterested, judicious persons to hear and determine our cause, that so we may have a fair and impartial trial, and that the expense which otherwise must attend the multiplied law suits, as they are now managed, may be prevented, or that your Majesty would be pleased to grant us such other relief as to your great wisdom and goodness shall seem meet; and your most humble petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

[Within presented in 1753.]

While in England the first time, Mr. Walker succeeded so far as to obtain a hearing of the case before His Majesty, which should take place the ensuing winter. He engaged Sir William Murray, afterward Lord Chief Justice Mansfield, as his counselor and advocate, with whom, it is said, he formed a particular acquaintance. But it was necessary for him to go again. Accordingly, in October, 1754, Benjamin Rolfe, Esq., presented a petition to the General Court of Massachusetts, in which he acknowledges the receipt of one hundred pounds sterling, the previous year, and asks for still further aid. He says, "That the prosecution of the affair thus far has not only exhausted the said grant of this government, but brought your petitioners considerably into debt; that they are so impoverished by ye accumulated charges occasioned by these lawsuits as they have been managed in ye courts of New-Hampshire, as also by ye troubles from the Indians, which have drove many of them from their habitations, and taken all of them from their husbandry in ye most busie season of ye year, and employed them in building garrisons for ye defence of themselves and families, and also being at great cost during ye absence of their minister to procure a meet person to administer ye word and ordinances among them; that they are very unable to furnish their agent with ye monies necessary to enable him effectually to proceed in the said affair."

While the proprietors of Rumford sought pecuniary aid from the government of Massachusetts, the proprietors of Bow also applied for the same purpose to that of New-Hampshire, and obtained a grant of £100 to aid them in carrying on the suit.*

In the spring of 1755 Jona. Lovewell was appointed by the General Court of New-Hampshire to warn a town meeting in Bow, 22d of April, for the choice of officers, &c., which he accordingly did, and subsequently made return that he warned the meeting and attended as moderator, at the place and time appointed; "but that there was but one inhabitant of said Bow that attended." This apparent disregard of their authority seems to have been resented by the government; for, at the very next session they passed what was called the "Bow Act," for assessing and collecting taxes in the refractory town; in which they set forth "that in contempt of the law, and in defiance of the government, the said town of Bow refused to meet at the time and place appointed," &c. As a remedy for this it was enacted, "That Ezra Carter and Moses Foster, Esqs., and John Chandler, gentleman—all of said Bow—be assessors to assess the polls and estates within the said town of Bow, * * the sum of five hundred and eighty pounds and sixteen shillings, new tenor bills of public credit. They were required to give ten days' notice before making the assessment, that all persons may have opportunity to give in a true list of their polls and ratable estates. Those who refused so to do were to be "doomed" to pay an additional sum to meet costs. Timothy Walker* and John Noyes were appointed collectors, to collect and pay in the sums on their respective lists, "on penalty of forfeiting and paying" the said sums themselves; and if the assessors should fail or refuse to do their duty, the Province treasurer was authorized and required "to issue his warrant of distress, directed to the sheriff," to levy the said sum of £580 16s. on their goods and chattels and lands;" and "in want thereof, on their body!" As an encouragement and stimulant to assessors and collectors to do their duty, the former were "entitled to receive, each, £7 10s. new tenor, and the latter £15 new tenor, each."†

In February, 1756, the inhabitants of Rumford, feeling themselves oppressed by this act, and "doomed" beyond just measure, petitioned for forbearance and redress of grievances. The petition, drawn up by Ezra Carter and John Chandler, set forth:

"That one half of the time was elapsed before we had sight of the act, and it was then the most bussie season in the whole year, and the cattle on which part of the taxes was to be laid, were out in the woods, and not known whether living or killed by the enemy, which rendered it almost impracticable for us to comply with the letter of the act. For the remedying of these inconveniences, and also in hopes of obtaining some alterations beneficial to us and the people

* I suppose, brother of Isaac—not son of the minister. † See Act in Secretary's office.
we were to tax, we should have addressed the General Assembly long before now, but our distance is such that we seldom hear of the adjournment and prorogations thereof before it is too late; several times were pitched upon for said purpose, but before they arrived the Assembly was adjourned. And now, having an opportunity to lay the affair before your Excellency and Honours, we humbly hope that you will take our case into your consideration, and in your wisdom and goodness compassionate our circumstances. As to our paying our part of publick charges of the government, we can uprightly answer for ourselves, and have reason to believe that we speak the united sense of the people of Rumford, that we ought to do it, but humbly pray we may have the priviledges of a town or district, viz., to raise money for the maintenance of our minister, school and poor; the repair of highways, &c., for the want of which for several years past the inhabitants there have been great sufferers.

That we apprehend we are doomed much beyond our just proportion of the public charge, which has happened as we conceive for want of a true list of our poles and estates, which we believe was never laid before the Assembly.

That we have been unavoidably subjected to great loss of time almost every year for several years past by disturbances from the Indians, and particularly for the two last years past. About a quarter of our inhabitants have been drove from their settlements during the busie season of the year, and the whole of them obliged to desist from their husbandry, in order to repair their garrisons and provide for the safety of their families.

Wherefore your petitioners most humbly pray that their circumstances may be considered, that they and the inhabitants aforesaid may be relieved against the penalties and rigour of said act; that a proper method may be prescribed to have a true list of the poles and estates aforesaid laid before the General Assembly, so that they may pay no more than their proportion, considering their situation; that they may be incorporated to all the purposes of a town, and that the assessors aforesaid may have a further time allowed to perform the business assigned in assessing and the collectors in levying the sum that shall be finally determined must be paid by said inhabitants.

And your petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

Ezra Carter,
John Chandler.

While the inhabitants of Rumford were thus complaining of grievances and struggling with their difficulties, the proprietors of Bow proper became sensible that the controversy in which they were involved was detrimental to their interest, and, to "save the great expense which inevitably attends contention,"

*This petition was unsuccessful, and was followed by another from Dr. Ezra Carter, July 12, 1757, which may be seen in the Secretary's office.
they proposed terms of "accommodation and agreement," having respect, however, chiefly to settlers of Suncook.*

In 1761 an order was issued for taking "an inventory of the polls and ratable estates in the Province," which order, "for Bow," was delivered to Col. Jeremiah Stickney, of Rumford. On the 19th of March, 1761, Col. Stickney addressed a letter to Capt. Thomas Parker, of Litchfield, then a member of the General Court, excusing himself, and apologizing for not taking the inventory — saying, "We never understood we had power to act to ordinary purposes under the incorporation of Bow, in which, if we were mistaken, it was our unhappiness."†

In April, the same year, Ezekiel Morrill and Thomas Clough, selectmen of Canterbury, were appointed to take an inventory of the "polls, stocks and improved lands in the township of Bow," which they accordingly did, and made the following return thereof to the General Court of New-Hampshire. It will be borne in mind that nearly the whole of their invoice related to the inhabitants of Rumford, who, at this time, were comprehended in Bow. The document is valuable as exhibiting the state of the settlement at that time, and the amount of the assessment.

Selectmen for Canterbury.

We suppose the above assessment was never collected. But happily, the controversy which had been so long waged was now drawing to a close. In the courts of New-Hampshire every case brought to trial, touching the title to their lands, had been decided against the proprietors of Rumford; but the Rev. Mr. Walker and Benjamin Rolfe, Esq.—the men to whom the proprietors had entrusted their cause—confident of its justice, were neither baffled nor discouraged. With a firmness of purpose worthy of all praise, and sustained by the unanimous will of the people, the Rev. Mr. Walker persevered in his agency. In the fall of 1762 he visited England for the third time, to attend the trial of the cause, which was still pending. He had formed valuable acquaintances among ministers of religion, members of Parliament, and members of His Majesty's Council. Sir William Murray, his learned counselor and advocate in the first trial, was now Lord Mansfield, chief justice of the King’s Bench. After long and anxious suspense the trial came on, and Mr. Walker announced the result in the following letter, dated—

London, December 23, 1762.

Dear Sir:

Last Friday, ye 17th inst., we had our Tryal; have obtained judgment in our favour, viz.: that the judgment against us shall be reversed; and the particulars whereof I now send you, so far as my memory serves. Mr. DeGrey, my Council, had proceeded but little way in opening the cause, when Ld Mansfield interrupted him by saying we had in our printed cases prepared a large field for argumentation; that it would take two days to goe thro' ye whole — but he had a mind to narrow the case; that there were but two points worth insisting on, viz.: ye false laying out of Bow, which he called a nonsuit, and the order of the King respecting private property. He began with the former, on which he said our former case turned, when [by the way] he observed it was not as the Reppnts had alleged in their printed case, that we were drove from every other point, &c., for, in truth, there was no other point considered; that the Ld, not being clear as to the other point urged — merely out of tenderness to possession and cultivation, which, they said, in America was almost every thing — they laid hold of that and determined as they did, but came to no determination upon the other, viz.: the order of the King in Council, &c., which he called the great point. The first he determined roundly against us. I suspected by the manner of his treating it that he determined it should have no weight in the present decision, and, therefore, would hardly allow it the force it deserved. I was, therefore, not much concerned at my Council's submitting the point. Ld Mansfield then said he was now come to the main point, viz.: the order respecting private property, which, he said, must mean, in cases like ours, where both sides claimed and made grants. Whoever settled under a grant from either side, if he happened to beon the wrong side of the line when it came to be settled — as he was precluded from defending himself by his grant — his possession should be his title; and, in this case, he said that possession with a grant from the Mass'rs Bay was as good as possession with a grant from New-Hampshire. —— Mr. Yorke, ye Reppnts Council, allowed ye, but alleged ours was not a bona fide possession; that we had been warned, &c. Ld Mansfield said he had read those depositions as they were printed, where it appeared Bow had chose Committees to warn people from trespassing, &c., [which he seemed to speak with a sneer;] but he said the sum was this: Mass'rs people were strong went on and settled, and Bow claimed. As to what is possession, Ld Mansfield distinguished between possession and property. With respect to the Royal order, he said the words were not private pos- session, but private property. His design most certainly was to carry ye idea of property further than actual improvement. The sum of what he said was to this effect, viz.: What a man claimed under a certain title, part whereof he actually improved, was his property. What is done, and what was said in the case, if truly represented by any body whom Bow will believe, will, I am persuaded, effectually discourage them from any further attempts, even against Suncook — much more against Rumford; yet I suspect their lawyers will urge them on to further tryals — with what success time must discover.

Yours, &c., T. W.

The following is the decision of His Majesty in Council, upon the several cases which were then on trial—all involving the same principle.

At the Court of St. James, the 29th day of December, 1762.

PRESENT,

The King's Most Excellent Majesty:

Earl of Huntington, Viscount Falmouth,
Earl of Halifax, Mr. Vice Chamberlain,
Earl of Northumberland, George Grenville, Esq.,
Earl of Egremont, Henry Fox, Esq.,
Earl of Delaware, Welbore Ellis, Esq.

Upon reading at the Board a Report from the Right Honorable the Lords of the Committee of Council for hearing appeals from the Plantations, dated the 17th of this instant, in the words following, viz.:

Your Majesty, having been pleased by your order in Council of the 15th of February, 17—, to refer unto this Committee the humble petition and appeal of Benjamin Rolfe, Esq., Daniel Carter, Timothy Simonds, John Evans, John Chandler, Abraham Colby and Abraham Kimball, setting forth, amongst other things, that, in 1721, Benjamin Stevens and others petitioned the General Court or Assembly of the Massachusetts Bay for a grant of land at Pennicook, upon the river Merrimack, which petition, having been referred to a committee of both Houses, and they reported in favor of the application, that it would be for the advantage of the Province that part of the land petitioned for should be assigned and set apart for a township, to contain seven miles square, and to begin where Contoocook river falls into Merrimack river. And they appointed a committee to bring forward the said settlement, and laid down several special directions with regard thereto. And, amongst others, that the lands should be divided into one hundred and three lots or shares; and that one hundred persons or families, able to make their settlement, should be admitted, and each settler to pay for his lot five pounds for the use of the Province, and be obliged to build a good house for his family within three years, and break up and fence in a certain quantity of land, and the houses and lots to be on each side the river; and that a meeting-house should be erected and finished, which was to be assigned for the use of the minister and for the school, and the charge of the committee was to be borne by the settlers; which Report was agreed to by both Houses of the Council and Assembly of that Province, and concurred in by the Governor. That, in 1726, the town of Pennicook was laid out and divided into lots amongst the proprietors, who began and carried on a settlement there with great difficulty and cost, it being above twenty miles up into the Indian country beyond any English settlement then made, and being a perfect wilderness, having not the least sign that human foot had ever trod the ground there, and notwithstanding the difficulties they were under in establishing a new town in so remote a desert, they pursued their undertaking with such industry and pains, clearing the land, building houses, sowing corn, &c., that, within a few years, a town was erected, and the place capable of receiving their families, who were then removed up there.

That, on the 6th of August, 1728, in consideration that five hundred acres of land, which had, prior to the aforesaid Pennicook grant, been granted to Gov. Endicott, fell within the Pennicook boundaries, the Assembly of the Massachusetts Bay came to a resolution, which was concurred in by the Governor and Council, that the Pennicook settlers should be allowed and empowered, by a surveyor and chainmen upon oath, to extend the south bounds of their township one hundred and thirty rods the breadth of their town, and the same was accordingly granted and confirmed to them as an equivalent for the said five hundred acres of land; and in a few years they had so far erected and settled a town that, in 1733, the Governor, Council and Assembly of the Massachusetts Bay passed an act for erecting the said plantation of Pennicook into a township by the name of Rumford; which act was confirmed by his late Majesty in council; and the settlers having ever since, at great costs and labor, gone on improving the lands within the said township of Rumford, by building, cultivation, and otherwise, and having been in continual possession thereof for above thirty years past, and the same is now become a frontier town on that part of New-Hampshire.

That, on the 6th of August, 1728, David Melvin and William Ayer petitioned the General Court or Assembly of the Massachusetts Bay, for themselves and others, who had served as volunteers under Capt. John Lovewell, praying a part of the Province land might be granted to them for a township, in consideration of the service they had done, and the great difficulties they had undergone in the war; which petition being read in the House of Representatives, it was resolved that six miles square of land, lying on each side of Merrimack river, of the same breadth from Merrimack river as the township of Pennicook, and to begin where Pennicook new grant determines, and from thence to extend the lines of the east and the west bounds on right angles, until the six miles square should be completed, be, and it is thereby granted to the forty-seven soldiers, and the legal representatives of such of them as were deceased, who marched with Capt. Lovewell, (himself included,) when he engaged the enemy at Pigwacket. That on the 9th of July, 1729, the said David Melvin and others petitioned the Assembly of the Massachusetts Bay, setting forth that they had caused the said tract of land to be surveyed and platted, and praying a confirmation thereof; and that the grantees might be empowered to assemble and choose a clerk, pass votes, and be empowered to admit the persons in Capt. Lovewell's first march, to be associated with him; and the survey or plan of the said tract, which is annexed to the petition, and mentions it to begin at the south-east corner of the said other town of Pennicook, and from thence to run out according to the grant. It was ordered that the land described in the plan should be confirmed to the petitioners and their associates, and their heirs and assigns forever, provided it exceeded not six miles square, nor interfered with any former grant. And the Assembly, on the 23d of September following, ordered a preference to be given to those soldiers who were actually with the captain in the engagement when he killed several of the Indians, and the said resolutions of the Assembly were concurred in by the Governor and Council.

That the Suncook proprietors carried on their said settlement which adjoined to Pennicook, otherwise Rumford, in like manner as the Pennicook or Rumford settlers had done; and, in 1737, had a minister settled there, and by their industry, labor and charges, it became a good parish, filled with inhabitants.

That some years since, upon a dispute about the boundary line between the provinces of the Massachusetts Bay and New-Hampshire, his Majesty was pleased to issue a commission to mark out the dividing line between the said Province of New-Hampshire and Massachusetts Bay, but with an express declaration that private property should not be affected thereby. And upon hearing the report of the commissioners appointed to settle the said boundary, His Majesty was pleased, by his order in Council, made in 1740, to adjudge and order that the northern boundary of the said Province of the Massachusetts Bay are and be a similar curve line, pursuing the course of Merrimack river at three miles distance on the north side thereof, beginning at the Atlantic ocean, and ending at a point due north of a place called Pautucket Falls, and a straight line drawn from thence due west, cross the said river, till it meets with His Majesty's other governments; by which determination two third parts at least of the said river Merrimack, with the lands and settlements thereon, and among the rest the said towns of Pennicook, or Rumford, and Suncook, would lay upon the said river considerably above the said Pautucket falls, were excluded out of the said Province of Massachusetts Bay, in which they had before been thought and reputed to be, and thrown into the said other Province of New-Hampshire. That notwithstanding His Majesty had been pleased, at the time of issuing the said commission, to fix the said boundary, to declare the same was not to affect private property: yet, certain persons in New-Hampshire, desirous to make the labors of others an advantage to themselves, and to possess themselves of the towns of Pennicook, otherwise Rumford, and Suncook, as now improved by the industry of the appellants and the said first settlers thereof, whom they seek to despoil of the benefit of all their labors, did, on the 1st of November, 1759, by the name of the proprietors of the common and undivided lands, lying and being within the township of Bow, bring an ejectment in the inferior court of common pleas, holden at Portsmouth, in New-Hampshire, against the appellants, by which ejectment the respondents, under the general denomination aforesaid of the proprietors of Bow, demand against the appellants the possession of about one thousand acres of land, alleging the same to lie in Bow aforesaid, and to be described and bounded as therein mentioned and set forth in the ejectment, their grant of the town of Bow, dated the 20th of May, 1727, from John Wentworth, Esq., Lieutenant Governor of New-Hampshire; and that by force thereof they were seized in fee of the lands thereby granted, to the extent of eighty-one square miles, and they had afterwards entered thereon, pursuant to their grant, and were seized thereof, and alleged they were entitled to the one thousand acres of land sued for, as part of the said eighty-one miles square of land, and that the same lay within the said town of Bow; but that the appellants had entered therein and ejected the respondents, and withheld the same from them. To which action the appellants severally pleaded not guilty, as to so much of the lands sued for as were in their respective possessions.

That, on the 2d of September, 1760, the cause was brought on to trial in the said inferior court, when the jury gave a verdict for the respondents, and judgment was entered up accordingly, with costs, from which the appellants prayed, and were allowed an appeal to the next superior court. And on the second Tuesday in November, 1760, the cause was brought on again to trial in the superior court, when the jury gave their verdict for the respondents, and the judgment was thereupon entered up, affirming the said judgment of the inferior court, with costs. That the appellants, conceiving themselves to be thereby greatly aggrieved, prayed, and were allowed an appeal therefrom to your Majesty in council, and humbly pray that both the said verdicts and judgments may be reversed, and that they may be otherwise relieved in the premises.

The Lords of the committee, in obedience to your Majesty's said order of reference, this day took the said petition and appeal into their consideration, and heard all parties therein concerned, by their council, learned in the law, and do agree humbly to report as their opinion to your Majesty, that the said judgment of the inferior court of common pleas of the Province of New-Hampshire, of the 2d of September, 1760, and also the judgment of the superior court of judicature of the 2d Tuesday in November, 1760, affirming the same, should be both of them reversed, and that the appellants should be restored to what they have lost by means of said judgments.

His Majesty this day took the said report into consideration, and was pleased, with the advice of his privy council, to approve thereof, and to order, as it is hereby ordered, that the said judgment of the inferior court of common pleas of the province of New-Hampshire, of the 2d of September, 1760, and also the judgment of the superior court of judicature, of the 2d Tuesday in November, affirming the same, be both of them reversed, and that the appellants be restored to what they may have lost by means of the said judgments, whereof the Governor or Commander-in-chief of His Majesty's Province of New-Hampshire, for the time being, and all others whom it may concern, are to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.
But notwithstanding His Majesty's decision, the controversy had become so complicated, and involved so much personal interest and feeling, that many years elapsed before its final settlement. The difficulty with the government of the Province in respect of taxes, was terminated by a charter of incorporation—as the next chapter will show—but conflicting personal interests had to be compromised. The prudence, decision, and readiness for reconciliation on just principles, which distinguished the proprietors in all their subsequent proceedings, appear from their records. The controversy was finally terminated in 1772. The common lands which had been reserved were divided and laid off to the respective proprietors and grantees.*

SETTLEMENT OF CANTERBURY BOUNDS.

While the controversy was pending between Rumford and Bow, an attempt was made on the part of Canterbury to have the gore of land lying on "the southwesterly side of Canterbury," and between the Canterbury and Bow line, (as claimed,) annexed to the former township. This gore included the north-

* At a meeting of the proprietors, October 8, 1771, Capt. John Chandler, Mr. Philip Eastman and Mr. Abiel Chandler were chosen a committee to take a plan, and survey the common and undivided land, and lay out the same to each proprietor his or their equal proportion in a just and equitable manner. That the said committee "in the first place lay out as much common land as to make whole Mr. Phillips' two eighty acre lots; and likewise Mr. James Farnum's, which was given away to complete the settlement with Bow."

"N. B. Mr. Philip Kimball entered his dissent against the vote passed to lay out the common land."

July 27, 1772. Andrew McMillan was chosen "agent to petition the General Court to empower the proprietors to raise six hundred pounds, lawful money, by an equal assessment on all the lands within the township of Rumford, in order to complete a settlement between said proprietors and the proprietors of Bow, Mason's Patent and Canterbury."

"Voted, That Mr. Benjamin Emery, Ensign Reuben Kimball and Mr. Daniel Gale, be a committee "to examine and see how much land has been sold by their former committees towards paying fifteen hundred dollars voted at a former meeting."

"N. B. Voted, by way of direction to the committee, that "the late Benjamin Rolfe, Esq., his estate be chargeable with all the lands recovered within the bounds of the township formerly called Suncook."

By examination of the Plan of the town, it will at once be seen that the original south line of Rumford run across the Merrimack and Soucook rivers, and took in a considerable section of land that was afterwards laid off to Pembroke. Several lots lying in that section were laid off to the settlers of Rumford, of which by the foregoing it appears some "were recovered." See Proprietors' Records, April 22, 1773. The case was referred to Matthew Thornton, Esq., Londonderry; Capt. Moses Little, of Newbury, and Mr. Moses Gerrish, of Canterbury, "finally to determine what sum of money the estate of Benjamin Rolfe, Esq., deceased, shall pay towards carrying the case of the Bend of the River (so called) to Great Britain."

In a "notification" for a meeting, November 21, 1772, the proprietors say that "the trouble-east part of Rumford, and seems to have extended up the Merrimack river so as to take in the interval farm of Stephen Gerrish."

At a legal meeting, held at Canterbury August 16, 1750,

Voted, That Capt. Miles refer a petition to the Grate and General Corte, and prosecute the same in order to have that gore of land lying between Canterbury and Bow annext to Canterbury aforesaid.

A true copy — attest,

EZEKIEL MERRILL, Town Clerk.

In pursuance of the above, Capt. Josiah Miles presented a petition to the General Assembly of the Province, February 7, 1760, setting forth "that there is a gore of land lying on the south-westerly side of said township, between that and Bow, on which several of the home lots of said Canterbury are laid out by mistake of the boundary on that side, on which there are sundry families settled, and when an invoice was returned to regulate the proportions of the towns to the Province tax, those families were returned, supposing they were within said township; but upon running the line afterwards they were found without: * * since which they have refused to pay any tax to said town; that the people are willing to be annexed to Canterbury, as it would be more convenient for them than to be joined to any other township, and there is no prospect or rather possibility that it should ever make a township, considering the situation, the shape, the quantity — by estimation about fifteen hundred acres — and the quality of the land."

On this petition a hearing was ordered at the February session, some and expensive controversy which has so long subsisted between them and other claimers of their land, we rejoice to find now happily closed."

At a meeting, March 15, 1773, Mr. William Coffin was chosen proprietors' treasurer, "to pay the money as he receives it to the committee formerly chosen to make a settlement with the proprietors of Bow." Voted, "That Sewall's Farm, (so called,) be assessed to pay an equal proportion for quantity and quality with the rest of the town towards the settlement with the proprietors of Bow," &c., and "that the estate of Benjamin Rolfe, Esq., deceased, rethurned towards defraying the charges of carrying the cause to England, wherein the bend of the river, (so called,) was sued for, not being within Rumford claims."

"N. B. That Mr. Peter Green wait upon Mr. Benjamin Thompson to Portsmouth, to represent the above case to the judge in behalf of the proprietors."

Benjamin Thompson, afterwards Count Rumford, married the widow of Benjamin Rolfe, Esq., Mrs. Sarah, daughter of Rev. Timothy Walker. Hence we infer he was married previous to this date.

The "Bend in the River?" is understood to be that on the southern line of the town, embracing part of the Interval Farm of the late Col. John Carter. The "Bend" is so great that a strip of land north of the river now falls within the line of Bow.

* A Plan of the land claimed is now in the archives of the N. H. Hist. Soc., which see.
1761. In the mean time remonstrances to said petition were presented from various quarters. (1.) A remonstrance from inhabitants of Rumford, authorizing Dea. Joseph Hall "to repair to Portsmouth as soon as may be, and do what he can to hinder the prayer of said petition being granted;" stating among other reasons their hope that the township would soon be incorporated, pursuant to a petition before the Assembly, then on file; and that "we hope and expect that the validity of our title to our said township, which is soon to be decided by His Majesty, will issue in our favor, and therefore that the matter may be at least suspended whilst that event is known." This was signed by John Chandler, Jeremiah Stickney, Timothy Walker, jun., Benjamin Osgood, Jacob Shute, Daniel Chase, Moses Merrill, Nath'l Abbott, Richard Hasseltin, George Abbott, John Merrill, Benjamin Abbott, and Ebenezer Hall. (2.) From John Webster and Samuel Osgood, February 16, 1761, stating that "they had lately purchased the farm commonly called Kent's farm, contiguous to Rumford, of the claimers of the right of John Tufton Mason, Esq.," and that it would be more convenient for them to be annexed to Boscawen than to Canterbury, on account of the distance from the meeting-house, and the badness of the road, and "not agreeable to their interest, connexions or inclination," to be annexed to Canterbury. This farm contained three hundred acres, and lay north of Rumford line, on the east side of the Merrimack river. (3.) A remonstrance from Stephen Gerrish, February 14, 1761, whose farm was still further north on the Merrimack — stating, among other reasons, that "the meeting-house in Boscawen is within a mile of my house; that my interest is in several respects closely connected with that of Boscawen; that I largely contributed to the settlement and support of their late minister, Mr. Stevens, as long as he lived; as also towards procuring what occasional preaching they have had since his death." But the two strongest remonstrances came from "Joseph Man" and "Will. Gault," of which the following are exact copies:

To his Excellency the Governor and House of Assembly:

These are to inform you that I live on the Common Lands Near Canterbury, and that Capt'n Miles is trying to have me Corporated to them, which I have no Desire to, be Cause they Intirely Refused me of all town Privileges altogether: Whereupon I would humbly pray your honors to set me of to Some other Christian People, for if I am Set over to them I expect Nothing but oppression.

Will. Gault.

These are to Inform His Excellency the Governor and the honorable Assembly of Portsmouth,

That I Live in The Common land and Near to the town of Canterbury, and the Select men of the town has rated me every year, & I have paid Rates this five years past to them, Which I think Very hard of; Whereas they have a grate Entrevail that they have the Cheif of their liveing Every year, & Never pays no Rates for it, Which makes me think they use no Conscience, or they would Rate their own Common land as Smart as they doe others. Seeing that Mr. Parsons laid out and Incroached on Severall Eacers of my land, and has taken it into his farm, I Requested of them to lay out my land in Canterbury, as they Reserved a tract of land to make good the home lots that fell out of the town in the Commons. But it was Said y' I should have no other land than I had Gotten: for my Part I am afraid to be Corporated to Canterbury for fear of oppression, and for these reasons I would pray his Excellency and the Honorable Assembly of Portsmouth, that they would be pleased to Corporate me to Some other Christian people.

Joseph man.

Finally, on the 13th of June, 1765, after the bounds of Concord were determined by the new incorporation, the Canterbury petition was, in part, granted—that is, a strip of land lying north of the original Rumford line, and extending up the Merrimack river, was annexed to Canterbury. The bounds were as follows: “Beginning on the easterly side of Merrimack river, on a course north, seventy-three degrees east, from the mouth of the Contoocook river; from thence, continuing the same course about six hundred and six rods, to Canterbury south-west side line; from thence, north-west, by said Canterbury side line, to Merrimack river; from thence, down the said river, to the place begun at; and all the lands, polls and estates taken by said boundaries are hereby added to said Canterbury and made a part thereof.”

Hence it appears that the original west side line of Canterbury was six hundred and six rods from the river, and that it run along on the upland without taking in the interval. The interval between the river and Canterbury line belonged to what was called "Mason's Patent," and the farms of Stephen Gerrish and Richard Kent, on the east side of the river, were included in the strip of land annexed to Canterbury, while none of that asked for between Canterbury and the Bow line, which belonged to Rumford, was granted.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS AND ANECDOTES RELATIVE TO THE PERIOD BETWEEN 1750 AND 1765.

NEW MEETING-HOUSE.

The "garrison-house, forty feet in length and twenty-five in breadth," built in 1727, near West's brook, had served the inhabitants for a meeting-house about twenty-four years; but the increase of population and decay of the old house rendered it necessary to build a new one for public worship. Not being in a capacity to act as a town, the work was undertaken by a number of individuals, called "Proprietors of the Meeting-house." A new location was chosen, and the main body of the house was erected in 1751, on the spot where it still stands* —now the "Methodist Biblical Institute." Its timbers were of the best white oak. According to tradition there was a large gathering of people at the "raising," which commenced the 12th of June and took three days. But while the men were so laudably employed, the women of the parish afforded material "aid and comfort" by cooking and providing victuals for them on the spot. The meeting-house was sixty feet long, forty-six wide, and two stories high. It was without porches or gallery. The only entrance was at the door in front, on the south side. The seats were coarse benches, arranged on each side of the broad-aisle, and east and west of the pulpit, which was on the north side. The men sat on the west, and the women on the east side. The minister had a pew near the pulpit, and the deacons sat together directly in front of the pulpit, facing the congregation. Thus unfinished the house remained till after the Revolutionary War.

A LETTER FROM REV. MR. WALKER TO HIS DAUGHTER.

While in London, on his first visit, Rev. Mr. Walker wrote as follows to his youngest daughter, Judith, then about nine years of age:

"London, March 13th, 1754.

"While I am addressing myself to each of my children, Judith surely must not be forgotten, which, altho' the youngest, yet is none the less dear to her tender hearted Father upon that account. My dear, I hope you have not forgotten your prayers and pretty verses which I used to hear you say over when you went to bed; but as you grow in years, you will advance in every endowment, both natural and spiritual; for I can have no greater joy than to hear that my children walk in ye truth. Fear God and keep his commandments, which is the whole duty of man. Honour your Father and Mother, which is the first commandment with promise. Be courteous and affable to your brother and sisters; let there be no family strife or contention, but remember that where envy and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work.

I remain your loving Father,

TIMOTHY WALKER."

In 1755, on his second visit, Mr. Walker wrote to his brother-in-law, Mr. Joseph Burbeen, of Woburn, a letter, which has been preserved, in which he says: "The fate of Europe, as to peace or war, as yet remains doubtful. Vigorous preparations have been and still are making; but many are confident matters will subside: but I expect, at least, that the poor frontiers in New-England will have a troublesome summer. I am in pain for my family as well as other friends exposed."

THE FIRST IRON CRANE.

The first iron crane used in a chimney fire-place in Rumford was put up by Stephen Farrington, in 1757. Mr. Farrington built and lived in the house where Mr. David G. Fuller now lives—recently owned by the late Widow Huldah Evans. The occasion was as follows: Heating water one day to scald hogs, the lug-pole, upon which the kettles were suspended, was burnt off and the hot water was spilt, seriously endangering the children who were playing on the floor. This so alarmed the family that Mr. Farrington determined to have an iron crane; and, having business at Portsmouth, he there purchased a bar of iron and brought it to Rumford on horse-back, where he had it made into a crane. The date (1757) is marked on it. Before putting it into the chimney they made a trial of its strength by chaining it to a tree and suspending on it a barrel of water—a wager being laid that the crane would not bear it. It stood the test, and it was afterwards used in the family for more than ninety years. This crane was deposited in the rooms of the New-Hampshire Historical Society in June, 1853, by Mr. Samuel Farrington, it having been used a long time previously by the descendants of Stephen Farrington for a boot-jack—a part of the brace being taken out.*

ANDREW McMILLAN'S STORE.

The principal store in Rumford, at this time, was kept by Andrew McMillan, Esq.† The following charges, found in his old ledger, will serve to illustrate the state of the currency at that time, and also, somewhat, the habits of the people. They show what was the price of articles then in common use, and hence enable us to compare the same with prices as they are now. We may be surprised to observe how large a portion of family expenses was for spirituous liquors; and, in this regard at least, we may mark an improvement in our favor. The charges, it will be seen, are carried out in pounds, shillings and pence; yet it is not strictly either "old tenor" or "new," but the pounds are put for shillings, and shillings for pence. Thus, as will appear, £6 means six shillings, or one dollar; £3 are three shillings, or half a dollar; £12, 10s., are twelve shillings and ten pence, or two dollars and nearly fourteen cents. As specimens of this book account I transcribe the following:

   " 11.  " 1 gallon of rum, at 6s., . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . 6 00 00

The foregoing are fair specimens of the charges in the "old ledger" against various persons. It must be noticed that in the account against Dr. Ezra Carter, the price of "half a gallon of rum" is "half a dollar," which is carried out three pounds—and this explains all the charges. The "pounds" were so many "shillings," and "six shillings" made a dollar. We must in charity suppose that the kind-hearted Dr. Carter bought his brandy for medicine; but whether the same will apply to the others we presume not to say. Unquestionably the custom of the times allowed a greater liberty in that regard then, than would be thought consistent with temperance now.

Eunice Chase, mother of Mrs. Abigail, widow of the late Benjamin Kimball, of Sugar Ball, when a girl was gathering berries on a hill on the east side of the river, when she discovered a young fawn asleep under the shade of some bushes. Taking off her apron, she threw it over the fawn, and, clasping it in her arms, carried it home. She sold it to Andrew McMillan for six pounds of sheep's wool.*

WOLVES.

Jerry Farrington, son of Stephen Farrington, when a mere lad was one day out near his father's house and heard the geese making an unusual noise. He caught his gun and started to ascertain the cause. He found the geese in a small brook near where Capt. Philip Watson's house now stands, and judging from appearances that some enemy had been among them, he went on in pursuit as far as what is called the "Whale's Back,"* where he saw a large wolf facing him. His gun was loaded with fine shot. He therefore took aim directly between the wolf’s eyes, fired, and put them both out. The wolf thus wounded raised a tremendous yell and ran confusedly about until other persons came to Jerry’s help, and the wolf was killed.†

Benjamin Rolfe, who came to this town at the age of sixteen, (about 1758,) and who lived on the Rolfe farm, so called, (now Fisherville,) often told his children how the wolves would come down at night to the high sand-banks south of his residence, and set up a terrible howling. The cattle, conscious of danger, would collect together in some corner of the field, and when they lay down the young cattle would lie in the middle and the old and strong ones outside, for defence.

RATTLE-SNAKES.

In the early settlement of the township particular sections of it were greatly infested with snakes of various kinds, and especially with rattle-snakes. These latter were most numerous on and in the vicinity of “Rattle-snake,” or, as it is now called, Granite Hill, and along the shores of Long Pond. A reward was offered, and paid by the town for many years, for killing these snakes, and some, it is said, even made it a profitable business — being able thereby to pay all their town taxes. Tradition says that the inhabitants used to go “snake hunting” on “good snake days,” as still, sunny days in the spring and autumn were called. Their weapon consisted of a white oak or white ash stick, from six to eight feet long and about an inch round, with a hook fastened in one end, to be used in drawing the snakes from their holes and from cracks in the ledges. Thus armed, they repaired to the “snake ground,” treading slowly and softly, to prevent the snakes from hearing them. Generally the snakes were found lying in the sunshine, near their dens, asleep. Sometimes they were so numerous as to form a large heap. If they heard any noise, the snakes gave the alarm by shaking their rattles, which made a fine buzzing noise; then they run into holes or under rocks for safety. The rattle-snake was easily killed — a well directed blow with the stick above described was sufficient for the purpose. Their motion was slow, and they would usually retreat from the presence of a man; yet "the hunting" of them was dangerous, for, if overtaken and provoked, they were very ferocious. Coiling up in a small ring, and emitting a fine buzzing noise with their rattles — their bodies rising and falling like a bellows — their parti-colored skin rough and sparkling — the upper jaw thrown nearly back upon the neck, and their eyes, like a fiery flame, which would suddenly change to a greenish color — they would suddenly dart on their foe, strike their fang, and, at the same instant, emit a poison in the wound, which usually proved fatal.

Many traditionary stories are related of rattle-snake hunting. The late Amos Abbot — father of John and Simeon — with his cousin Reuben, one afternoon killed forty-nine snakes with sticks and hooks; but such an effluvia proceeded from the slaughtered snakes as to sicken them. Commonly the faces of the hunters would be swollen with inflammation, caused, as was supposed, by poisonous effluvia.

There is a tradition that a Penacook Indian undertook to revenge himself on the nation of rattle-snakes for having bitten one of his family. He made a large fish-pot and set it at the mouth of a den of rattle-snakes. As they came out they filled the pot, which, in the joy of his success, he rolled away from the den, and then piled around it a large quantity of brush, which he set on fire, dancing and singing to see the contortions and struggles of his conquered foe; but his joy was short. Whether from the effluvia inhaled, or some other cause, he soon sickened and died.

One person undertook to "blow up" a den of snakes. Having caught and fastened a large rattle-snake, he tied to his tail a powder-horn filled with powder — putting in for a stopple a piece of punk, which he set on fire and let the snake go. Returning to his snaky companions, unsuspicuous of the fate that awaited them, soon the powder-horn exploded, when the whole den of snakes was blown "sky high."
Another mode of destroying these reptiles, if not equally singular, was as effectual—that is, the letting the hogs run at large where the snakes were abundant. In the autumn of the year, being fat and lazy, the snakes made a delicious morsel for swinish appetites. The hogs would often kill them before they had time to coil and dart their poison.*

The oil from rattle-snarles was found very useful, and was used for sprains, stiff joints, rheumatism, &c.

George Abbot, Esq., relates that his father, when a young man, killed an enormous fat rattle-snake, which he afterwards stretched out on a flat rock, in the sun, and that the oil which came from it penetrated the rock so deeply that the marks of it remain even till this time.

So thorough was the war of extermination carried on by our fathers against the rattle-snake tribe, that it is said not one has been seen on Rattle-snake Hill for the last forty years.

* A writer in Harper's Magazine for March, 1855, says: "Of all enemies with which the rattle-snake has to contend, except man, the hog is the most formidable. An old sow, with a litter of pigs to provide food for, will hunt for the reptile with a perseverance and sagacity truly astonishing, tracing them to their hiding-places, and never letting them escape." CHAPTER VIII.

FROM 1765 TO 1775 — INCORPORATION AS A PARISH IN BOW BY THE NAME OF CONCORD.

As the greater part of the inhabitants of Rumford were at this time comprehended in the township of Bow, to which the former were unanimously opposed, vexations difficulties were experienced in conducting town affairs, and particularly in assessing and collecting taxes. Even some of the inhabitants of Bow proper felt themselves as much oppressed as those of Rumford. Hence petitions were presented to the General Assembly of the Province, setting forth their respective grievances.*

On the 11th of April, 1764, Rev. Mr. Walker presented a petition,* setting forth that the "affairs of the inhabitants [of Rumford] have been in great confusion since 1749;" that they have "felt themselves greatly aggrieved" by the imposition of heavy taxes; and, as a remedy for the evils complained of, prays that they may be "incorporated by their former known bounds." In answer to this petition the House of Representatives reaffirmed by a vote, that "what the town of Bow is now in arrears for the Province tax shall be collected," and that "all the inhabitants settled on lands between said Bow, Canterbury and New-Hopkinton, except such as are already polled off to Pembroke and New-Hopkinton, shall be taxed and pay their proportion" of the same; that "the inhabitants of Bow [including, of course, all in Rumford] should meet in Bow for the choice of officers, &c.,

and on these conditions "the petitioner shall have liberty to bring in a bill!"

It hence appears that the government tenaciously clung to their original purpose of giving Bow the preëminence, and of disallowing all the claims and rights of Rumford as incorporated by Massachusetts.

Finally, however, on the 25th of May, 1765, an act of incorporation was obtained, the conditions of which were humiliating to the inhabitants of Rumford; but it was the best they could get, and this was preferred to the abhorred embrace in which they had been held for more than fifteen years. For the whole act I must refer the reader to the documentary chapter;* but the title is in the words following: "An act for setting off a part of the Town of Bow, together with some lands adjoining thereto, with the inhabitants thereon, and making them a Parish; investing them with such privileges and immunities as Towns in this Province have and do enjoy." To this "parish" in the town of Bow was given the name of Concord. The "parish" comprised the inhabitants who are settled on the lands herein described, viz.: "Beginning at the mouth of Contoocook river, so called, which is the south-east corner of Boscawen; from thence, south, seventy-three degrees west, by said Boscawen, four miles; from thence, running south, seventeen degrees east, seven miles and one hundred rods; from thence, running north, seventy-three degrees east, about four miles, to Merrimack river; then crossing the said river, and still continuing the same course to Soucook river; then, beginning again at the mouth of Contoocook river aforesaid, from thence, running north, seventy-three degrees east, six hundred and six rods from the easterly bank of Merrimack river, or till it shall come to the south-west line of Canterbury; from thence, south-east, on said line, two miles and eighty rods; from thence, south, seventeen degrees east, to Soucook river aforesaid; from thence, down the said river, till it comes to where the line from Merrimack river strikes Soucook river."

The inhabitants included within the abovesaid bounds were granted all the ordinary powers and privileges of towns, "excepting that when any of the inhabitants of the aforesaid parish shall have occasion to lay out any road through any of the lands that are already laid out and divided by the said town of Bow, application shall be for the same to the Court of General Quarter Sessions of the Peace for the said Province, as in other cases.” Provision was also made in the act for collecting “all arrearages of taxes,” and for assessing and collecting the taxes which should be due in 1765 and 1766. To secure all these ends more effectually, John Noyes and Edward Russell, of Bow proper, were to be united with the selectmen of the new parish, to assess the polls and estates of all the inhabitants who were subjected to pay the taxes.

It will be perceived that by this incorporation the bounds of the township are considerably varied from the original.* The north line of Concord, on the west side, was changed from “the middle” of the Contoocook, to the “southerly side thereof.” The north bound, on the east side, was run straight to the Can-

*The original grant of Penacook was seven miles square and one hundred rods, commencing “where Contoocook river falls into Merrimack river, and thence to extend, upon a course east, seventeen degrees north, three miles, and upon a course west, seventeen degrees south, four miles — to be the northerly bounds of the said township; and from the extreme parts of that line, to be set off southerly at right angles, until seven miles shall be accomplished from the said north bounds.” This original grant does not determine the precise point “where Contoocook river falls into Merrimack river” — where the north line shall be run — whether it shall be in the middle of the Contoocook, or on the northerly or southerly side. It seems, however, to have been understood to run from the middle; for when Contoocook (now Boscawen) was granted by Massachusetts, in December, 1732, it was bounded as follows, viz.: “Beginning at the middle of Contoocook river, where it empties into Merrimack, where it joins on Penacook plantation; thence, running west, fifteen degrees south, adjoining Penacook line, four miles, to a white pine tree, marked for Penacook corner-bounds;” and thence, further on the same line, three miles and eight poles,” &c. [See original grant in Price’s History of Boscawen, p. 211.] The difference of two degrees in the line was probably owing to the variation of the compass; for it is manifest that the Contoocook line west, which commences “at the middle” of the Contoocook river, “where it joins on Penacook plantation,” ran on the Penacook line four miles to its westerly corner bounds. But when Boscawen was newly incorporated by New-Hampshire, in 1760, the bounds were described as follows, viz.: “Beginning at the southerly side of Contoocook river’s mouth, where the same falls into Merrimack river; running thence, on a course west, seventeen degrees south, seven miles and one hundred rods,” &c. Why this change in the starting point of the line between Concord and Boscawen — from “the middle of the Contoocook” to the “southerly side thereof” — there are various conjectures. [See statement in Document No. 4, Chapter VIII.]

But the variation and change from the original bounds were far greater on the east side. Originally the line ran straight from the mouth of the Contoocook, “east, seventeen degrees north, three miles;”* but by the new incorporation it was to run east, seventeen degrees north, only “six hundred and six rods from the easterly bank of Merrimack river till it shall come to the south-west line of Canterbury; from thence, south-east, on said line, two miles and eighty rods; from thence, south, seventeen degrees east, to Soucook river; from thence, down the said river till it comes to where the line” from the west of Merrimack river running across strikes the Soucook river.

terbury line six hundred and six rods; then, south-east, on the Canterbury line, two miles and eighty rods; thence, south, seventeen degrees east, to meet the Soucook river, which was made the remainder of the eastern bound. The southern boundary, also, instead of being seven miles, according to the original grant, was limited on the east side by the Soucook, at the point where the line from the west across the Merrimack river struck it. This line struck the Soucook river about twenty rods above what were called Head’s Mills, in Pembroke. The old bounds are still visible.*

In consequence of this change in the original boundaries on the east side, there were two gores of land, called the northerly and southerly Bow Gores. The northerly gore, containing about one thousand three hundred and seventy-nine acres can be distinguished on the map of the town accompanying this volume, lying on the east side of the township, between the Soucook river on the east and the original straight line, which formed the eastern boundary of Rumford. This gore came to a point on the high land north-west of the dwelling-house of Mr. John Clough, on the Loudon road. The house of Mr. Clough was formerly owned by Mr. Benjamin Thompson, who lived in "Bow Gore," and who used to be complained of by his neighbors "because he didn’t pay taxes any where." Near Mr. Thompson’s, within the Gore, was a school-house, where the children of the Potter families, and others in Concord, attended school. This state of things continued until both Gores were annexed to Concord by an act of the Legislature, December 13, 1804.†

In regard to the name — CONCORD — given to the township in the new incorporation, the uniform tradition is, that it was designed to express the entire unanimity in purpose and action which had characterized the inhabitants of Rumford during the period of their controversy with the proprietors of Bow, and, indeed, from the first settlement of Penacook.‡

By the act of incorporation, Samuel Emerson, Esq.,§ of Consequently, at the next meeting of the General Court, November 27, 1765, a special resolve and vote were passed, authorizing the said Emerson to call a meeting for the aforesaid purpose, on the third Tuesday of January, 1766."

Accordingly, the first "legal meeting of the freeholders and inhabitants of the Parish of Concord" was held on the 21st day of January, 1766. At this meeting it was voted that "Lieut. Richard Hasseltine be moderator, and Peter Coffin parish clerk."

"Voted, That Joseph Farnum, Lot Colby and John Chandler, jun., be selectmen.

"Voted, That Lieut. Richard Hasseltine and Amos Abbot be tythingmen.

"Voted, That Dea. George Abbot be sealer of leather.

"Voted, That Lieut. Nathaniel Abbot be sealer of weights and measures."

The foregoing is the whole record of the first "meeting of the Parish of Concord." The persons above chosen held office till the ensuing first Tuesday in March, when the first annual meeting was held.†

†The manner of notifying parish meetings was as follows: 1. The selectmen issued an order to the constable of the parish to notify a meeting at a specified time and place, and for specified purposes. 2. The constable issued his notice "by setting up a notification," agreeably to the order from the selectmen, at the meeting-house door, — days before the meeting. 3. A meeting held pursuant to such a notification was a "legal meeting." From the first meeting in January, 1766, till 1784, the "notice" for legal meetings was given "to the inhabitants and freeholders of the Parish of Concord"—subsequently, upon petition, in 1784, as will appear from the records, the word "parish," which was always offensive to the inhabitants, was dropped, and "town" substituted therefor.

Mr. Walker’s salary from the 26th of May, 1765, to the 26th of May, 1766, together with the other necessary charges of the parish, and a committee appointed to reckon with the collectors and constable that have been chosen.”*

On the 25th of March it was “Voted, That the school shall be kept on the easterly side of the river such part of the year as their rates for the school shall come to of the polls and estates that lay to the northward of Sugar Ball; also, at a place that will best accommodate those persons that live upon Contoocook road, northward of Nathan Colby’s — and those persons that live westward of said road, such part of the year as their rates will pay; also, at a place that will best accommodate those persons that live upon Hopkinton road, westerly of Theodore Stevens’ and westerly of Turkey river, such a part of the year as their rates will pay; and the remainder of the year it shall be kept in the town street, about the middle way from Capt. Chandler’s to Lot Colby’s.”

Capt. Chandler, referred to in the above vote, lived in a house on the road which runs west by Richard Bradley’s, on the spot where a new house is just erected by Hamilton Perkins, Esq. An apple tree is now growing where the old cellar was. Here his son Daniel lived, who was father of Abiel, the distinguished benefactor of Dartmouth College. Abiel Walker, Esq., well remembered the old Chandler house. Daniel Chandler erected a frame in addition to his father’s house, on the same spot, but not being able to finish it, it fell first into the hands of John Stevens, trader, and was sold by him to Capt. Robert Davis, and moved on to the Davis lot, north side of Franklin street, on the rise of ground about ten rods from Main street. In this house lived Capt. David Davis, father of Gen. Davis. Lot Colby lived at the other extreme of the main settlement, at the “Eleven Lots,” and on the spot where the venerable Joseph Abbot died, January 20, 1832, aged ninety. Mr. Joseph S. Lund now lives on the same spot. The school-house was a few rods north of Gass’ tavern. The late Richard Herbert and Abiel Walker, when boys, went to school there to a Master Hogg, from Dunbarton.

Another meeting of the Parish of Concord was held November 10th, this year, at which Mr. Phinehas Virgin was chosen surveyor of highways "in the room of Lt. Ebenezer Virgin, deceased." Phinehas was the eldest son of Lt. Ebenezer—born November 21, 1733. The father was an original proprietor—a man of enterprise, and highly useful as a citizen. He probably came from Salisbury, Massachusetts, and built and lived in the house still standing on the Mill Brook Interval, so called, on the east side of the Merrimack, a few rods in rear of the house of Mr. John Jarvis. Mr. Virgin was the man who first came in possession of the "Peeorawarah gun," before described. He was the father of seven children, and his descendants are numerous and respectable.*

About this time the inhabitants of Bow, who, according to the charter of "the Parish of Concord," were rated with the latter, feeling themselves "greatly abused," presented the following petition to the General Assembly for relief:

"To His Excellency John Wentworth, Esquire;" &c.:
The Petition of the Selectmen of Bow, in behalf of themselves and inhabitants of said Bow, exclusive of such as are set off into Parishes—

HUMBLY SHEWETH, "That your petitioners have been and are now greatly abused by being rated with Concord; for their Selectmen are your major part of the Assessors, and they make the rates as they see fit: Wherefore the petitioners humbly and earnestly prays your Excellency and Honours to take their distressed circumstances under consideration, and relieve them from being rated any longer with Concord, in such manner as your Excellency and Honours shall in your great wisdom and clemency see fit, and your petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

At a meeting January 2, 1769, Capt. Chandler was "chosen and desired to notify all persons that owe any rates in this parish, and use his best endeavors with them to get them to settle with the Rev. Mr. Timothy Walker, and to pay what rates they owe before Concord was incorporated."

Mr. Timothy Walker, Jr., "was chosen, March 7, town clerk, in place of Benjamin Rolfe," who appears to have been in feeble health; and the parish clerk was "desired to purchase two sufficient books for the use of the parish." Messrs. Benjamin Emery, John Kimball and Robert Davis were appointed a committee "to treat with the proprietors of the meeting-house, in order to purchase said house for the use of the parish." The purchase was not made till 1782.

The parish agreed to "give forty shillings, lawful money, per acre for land" through Joseph Farnum's field, for a road, and "to pay Mrs. Osgood the first cost for the burying-cloth;" to "pay ten shillings for every wolf, and six pence for every crow killed within the parish the present year." The following year, 1771, the bounty for killing a wolf was raised to "twenty shillings," and "for every crow caught in the parish, nine pence."

COMPENSATION OF JURORS.

On the 21st of December, 1771, Benjamin Rolfe, Esq., deceased.*

Heretofore nothing has appeared in the records respecting courts or jurors, or even the county to which Concord belonged. But a "warrant" was issued for a special town meeting, to be held August 24, 1772, "to choose one man of those duly qualified to serve at His Majesty's Superior Court of Judicature, to be held at Exeter, in and for the county of Rockingham, as a petit juror, the first Tuesday in September next;" also, "to see what said parish will allow those who have served as jurors for said parish, and what said parish will allow jurors for the future."

Accordingly, at the meeting held for the above purpose, "Mr. Lot Colby was drawn out of the box for a juror." "Three shillings" were allowed "Messrs. Ebenezer Hall and Joshua Abbot for each day they have served the parish as jurors;" and "three shillings to be paid each juror per day, who shall serve the parish as jurors for the future."

November 21st, this year, Andrew McMillan, Esq., was appointed to present a petition to the Honorable General Court, "that the inhabitants of Concord may have the same power and privilege of laying out roads which any other town or parish in this Province have or do enjoy; and that the boundaries of said parish may be made as extensive as the township of Rumford (so called) formerly was;"† and the next year, 1773, Mr. Mc-

He held the office till October 18, 1774, when he was succeeded by Timothy Walker, Jr. November 7, 1774—Voted, That the proprietors' books be delivered by Mr. John Kimball to Timothy Walker, Jr.; "that a just and equal division of all the common land be made, and that Messrs. D. 1753."

The division of common lands above ordered was duly made and laid off in one hundred and three shares. A record of the same is found in the third volume of the Proprietors' Records, pp. 456–505.

Millan was appointed to present a petition that the parish of Concord may be annexed to the county of Hillsborough, provided that there might be an inferior and superior court held annually in said parish.

Previous to presenting the petition for the purpose just named, the inhabitants of the town made an expression of their respect to the Governor in the following address, which tradition ascribes to the pen of the then young but aspiring Benjamin Thompson, afterward Count Rumford:

ADDRESS OF THE INHABITANTS OF CONCORD TO GOV. JOHN WENTWORTH, 1773.

The Humble Address of the Inhabitants of Concord, in the Province of New-Hampshire, to His Excellency John Wentworth, Esq., Captain General, Governor, and Commander-in-Chief in and over said Province.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY:

As good Will and Affection between Rulers and Ruled are the happy source of all well ordered Government, it gives us pleasure to observe the great Harmony and Unanimity that subsist between your Excellency and the People of this Province, while those of the Neighboring Colonies are daily seeking Redress, and still complaining of grievances and oppression. Notwithstanding the great Difficulties which have attended your Excellency ever since you came to the Chair of this Government, and the many disadvantages this Province in particular has, and still labors under; yet, from the best Observations we have been able to make, we find no Colony on the Continent in which good Order, Peace, and good Government, have more prevailed than in this, or in which Officers of every kind have discharged the duties of their respective Offices with more Prudence, Moderation and Firmness.

Through your Excellency's great care and Wisdom, we find the unsettled Lands improving and settling with rapid progress, and that your Excellency is pleased to give every necessary encouragement to promote and facilitate the same, and that even by your Excellency's own Example.*

And if your Excellency's wise Administration should be continued, we make no doubt in a few Years of seeing this Province not unequal to those of its Neighbors, in numbers of People and Opulence.

Whatever Aspersions your Excellency's Character may have injuriously met with in England, from prejudiced and designing Men, with regard to your Excellency's governing this Province, we are assured, and believe every disinterested person will join with us, that they are urged without any just foundation — and, were those Matters represented in a True point of Light, we are fully satisfied that your Excellency would receive the Approbation of His Majesty, and the Applause of the People of this Province in general.

At a meeting of the said Inhabitants of Concord, on Thursday, the 1st day of April, A. D. 1773 —

Voted, That the foregoing Address be immediately presented to His Excellency John Wentworth, Esq., Captain General, Governor, and Commander-in-Chief in and over the said Province of New-Hampshire.

Attest: Timo. Walker, Jr., Town Clerk.

During the year 1774 the settlement of the long controversy between the proprietors of Bow and Rumford "was completed." Immediately thereupon, and even in anticipation of it, a petition was presented by Timothy Walker, Jr., "in behalf of himself and his associates," to the General Court of Massachusetts, setting forth the great expense they had been at, and losses incurred by the controversy with Bow, and praying that, as a remuneration, "a tract of land may be granted them on the Ammoscoggin river," in the Province of Maine. Through the politeness of Timothy Walker, Esq., of Rumford, Maine, youngest son of the late Charles Walker, Esq., and grandson of the Hon. Timothy Walker, of Concord, I have been furnished with a copy of the said petition, and the proceedings of the General Court in relation to it, with the names of the original grantees of the new township; also, a copy of the record of their early proceedings—all of which must be interesting to the descendants of the original settlers, both of Concord and of Rumford, in Maine.*

† Benjamin Osgood was a brother of McMillan's wife.
‡ That slaves were bought and sold like cattle and horses, previous to the Revolution, appears from the following, taken from the Essex Journal, (Newburyport,) March 2, 1774: "To be sold,
A HEALTHY NEGRO GIRL, about twenty-three years old — born in this country.
Likewise,
A SERVICEABLE MARE,
which goes well in a carriage.
Enquire of the Printers."
MISCELLANEOUS FACTS AND ANECDOTES.

Of the subsequent history of the "Negro Garl Dinah" but little is now known, except that on the removal of her master to Conway, in 1774, she was left, probably, in the family of Mrs. McMillan's mother, ("Mother Osgood,"?) and that she married and settled in the neighboring town of Canterbury, where she lived to an advanced age, familiarly known as "Old Dinah," where several families of her descendants now reside and are frequently seen in the streets of Concord selling baskets.

The "Boy Cæsar" accompanied his master to Conway, but was roving and unsteady in his habits, and finally absented himself from the family entirely. He married twice, and died in 1847 or 1848, in the ninety-second year of his age. His eldest daughter, Lois, is now living, in good health, in the family of Daniel Eastman, of Conway.*

Aaron Stevens, commonly called "crowner"—that is, Coroner Stevens—had a negro man who was the town "dog-whipper"—it being his office to scourge dogs out of the meeting-house on the Sabbath, for which he received a few pennies from such as were disposed to pay him. The faithful discharge of his office afforded fine amusement for the children during Sabbath hours.

Capt. John Roach, who lived in the old "Rogers house," east of the late Gov. Hill's residence, owned a negro woman. She had a child, who was taken care of and supported by the town.

Dea. Joseph Hall, senior, had a slave woman who had two children, one named Lois and the other John Brown. John was given to Dea. Jonathan Wilkins, who married a grand-daughter of Dea. Hall. John was non compos, and gave the deacon so much trouble that at last he threw him on the town for support. At one time John was put to hoeing potatoes alone; but it was found he skipped over every other hill. Being asked what he did it for, said—"So as to keep up." He was once sent to turn out calves from the stall, but, not succeeding in unfastening their yokes, the deacon's hired man turned the calves out and yoked John up.

Of other slaves in Concord about this time, tradition has preserved some interesting reminiscences. Ephraim Farnum, grandfather of Moses H. Farnum, and living on the same spot, owned a black boy named Cesar. Mr. Farnum had a pen for small pigs near his kitchen door. On looking into it early one morning, he discovered a bundle closely pinned together, which, on opening, he found contained an infant negro child. Pitying the little foundling, he took it from the pig-pen into his house, and took care of it. Some ten years afterwards a gentleman from Massachusetts called very privately on Mr. Farnum, inquired for the boy, and made a suitable compensation for the good care that had been taken of him. Cesar was a favorite among the white boys of about his age. Capt. Samuel Herbert says he “used to think it quite a treat to go up and have a good play with Cesar Farnum.”

* Information from Dr. Chadbourne.

Abraham Bradley had a negro slave named Pompey—commonly called “Pomp”—for whom he paid thirty bushels of corn. “Pomp” was quite a favorite in the family. He was the attendant and sort of life-guard of John Bradley in his boyhood. In his last will Mr. Bradley gave Pomp to his grandson John, and ordered his executor “to take especial care that my said negro be not wronged by my aforesaid grandson in any ways; and if he should wrong him, I give him power to do him justice.” Mr. Bradley also gave Pomp “the use and improvement of one half acre of land,” near his dwelling-house, during his natural life.*

Col. Benjamin Rolfe owned a negro who, in 1772, when the inventory of Col. Rolfe’s property was taken, was valued at £55, lawful money.

William Coffin, the grandfather of Samuel Coffin, Esq., owned a negro woman named “Lucy.” “Sampson,” a negro belonging to Archelaus Moore, of Canterbury, wanted her for his wife; and there was an agreement that Sampson should work one year for Mr. Coffin to pay for her. A man’s wages at that time were about forty dollars a year, or the price of a yoke of oxen. Sampson was a famous fiddler, and for many years afforded fine fun for frolicsome fellows in Concord with his fiddle on election days.

Rev. Timothy Walker had three slaves: a man called Prince, and two women — Luce and Violet. Prince was good natured, much attached to his master, and faithful in taking care of horses and cattle. On the adoption of the State Constitution he had his freedom, and went to Andover, where he lived with Dr. Thomas Kittredge. There he married. At one time he came back to Concord dressed in a red coat, which he displayed with much pride, saying—"I rides in the troop, I do." Prince became very infirm, and was thrown on the town of Woburn for support till he died. Violet married in Dunbarton. Luce died in Concord.

*See biography of John Bradley, and Abraham Bradley’s will.

Lieut. Richard Herbert had a slave named Nancy, who was said to have been born in Boston about 1766, and when nine days old was given to a man resident in Bow, who, wishing to remove from the vicinity, brought her to Rumford, and, in 1768, sold her to Lieut. Herbert for about five dollars. As Nancy is very well remembered by many now living, and was much esteemed, the following notice of her will be interesting:

When bought by Mr. Herbert "she was about eighteen months old, and grew up with the children of the family—attended school a little—learned to read and to recite the catechism. She used to say she 'was treated just the same as the other children, but she supposed she did not expect so much;' and, also, 'that she was never conscious of a wish that she had been born white.' The adoption of the State Constitution, in 1783, was regarded as abolishing slavery within the State. She was about fifteen years of age, and often spoke of the fears she felt lest the Constitution should be adopted. She had been told that she came from Boston, and had a notion that she must return there, and she was constantly inquiring about the city and the road thither. One day she was engaged in washing dishes, when some one came in and told her she was free! She burst into tears, exclaiming, 'What will become of me!' She supposed she must start for Boston. The family gathered round, and she said she never was so rejoiced as when it was decided that she should remain in her old and only home. An arrangement was immediately effected as to compensation, which continued till the death of Mrs. Herbert, senior, who made provision for Nancy in her son's family through life.
"In 1816 she became a member of the church under Dr. McFarland's ministry, and honored her profession. She was faithful, affectionate and cheerful. The anecdotes and incidents of early times, stored in her retentive memory, were a source of infinite pleasure to the children, each of whom had been in turn her favorite. She read much, usually the Bible — was sensible and dignified in manners — none knew but to esteem her. Both Charles and Jonathan Herbert left her bequests by will. In her charities she felt a particular interest in the Education Society, in the cause of Missions, and in all efforts for the elevation of her race. The last two years of her life she was unable to walk much, or attend church often; but death came suddenly and without terror. She died of paralysis, after an illness of two days, October 9, 1845, aged seventy-nine. The following epitaph, written by the late Benjamin Gleason, Esq., of Charlestown, Massachusetts, was received too late for inscription on her tomb-stone:

"'At first unknown — then sold a slave;
Then free, and loved from early youth;
In Christian hope, ripe for the grave:
This tablet but records her worth.'"

BEAR STORIES.

Soon after moving to his place, west of Long Pond, Mr. Reuben Abbot heard one of his hogs squeal, which was running at large in the woods. Presuming that a bear had caught it, he hastily seized his gun and went in pursuit. He came in sight of the bear, which was devouring the hog, in the field east of Mr. Jerry Abbot's house. He leveled his gun at the bear, but it missed fire three times. The bear then turned and ran towards Mr. Abbot, who, to escape, sprung upon a small tree, which the bear couldn't climb. In relating the circumstance, Mr. Abbot used to say "that the old paw of the bear just touched his leather breeches." The flint of his gun being out of order, Mr. Abbot hallooed for his brother James, who came, and the bear was killed.

Oliver Hoit was the first settler, about 1772, on Horse Hill. It was then a wilderness, and the bears and wolves were very troublesome — devouring his sheep when they were but a small distance from his house. He used to kill bears, some by shooting and others by trapping. The trap was formed of heavy logs in the shape of the figure 4 — the upper log falling when the bear entered to take the bait. One trap was set at a distance of nearly three miles from his house. On a warm day in May he rode his old mare to the trap, and found a large bear in it, dead. How to get it home he was at a loss, but soon contrived a way which proved successful. He took off his vest, and buttoned it tight round the old mare’s head to blind her eyes, to prevent her being frightened at the bear; next, he took the throat-latch from the bridle, and buckled it tight round the old mare’s tail; then cut a hole through the bear’s nose, and put in a withe and fastened the other end to the strap on the mare’s tail — mounting, he rode home, dragging the bear after him, much amused at the success of his contrivance.*

Mr. Zebediah Farnum, who lived where Samuel Ames now lives, proposed to Ephraim, son of Deacon Farnum, to go over Rattle-snake Hill, to the east side of Long Pond, and see if they could shoot a bear. They crossed the brook at the outlet of the pond, and in a few moments their dogs began to bark. When they came to them, they found the dogs had treed a large bear. Zebediah shot at it. The bear fell to the ground, and he supposed it was dead; but when the dogs came, and began to smell of the bear, the creature began to kick, and snarl, and fight the dogs. Zebediah, who was very resolute and courageous, thinking that the dogs would get beaten, sprung astride the bear, and took it by the ears, while Ephraim thrust the butt of his gun into the bear’s mouth. In this position the bear was held until it was exhausted; when Zeb. let go of one ear, and, taking his jackknife from his pocket, and opening it with his teeth, cut the bear’s throat, which bled to death in a few moments.

At another time Zebediah Farnum killed a bear with a large pitch-pine knot. He heard the bear squeal or grunt, and started in the direction of the sound, near where Isaac Ferrin now lives. Coming near he found bruin in the act of robbing a wasp’s nest

* Tradition, by George Abbot, Esq.
in the ground; — sticking his head in, the wasps would sting, and he squeal. Zeb., creeping up unseen, and watching his chance, when the bear's head was in the hole, struck him across the back with his club, and killed him.*

Stephen Farnum, and John, his cousin, killed a bear at Horse Hill. While the bear was engaged in defending himself against the dog, Stephen clenched him by the ears, and John knocked his brains out with a pitch-pine knot.*

Rev. Ephraim Abbot, now of Westford, Massachusetts, relates, "That his uncle, Isaac Abbot, told him that he and his brother Ephraim went to the Dark Plains to get a load of candle wood, and came to a large wind-fall tree; that one of them struck upon it with an axe, and a large bear came out of it, and was about to make an attack upon them; but that they defended themselves and killed the bear with the axe and a lever. The flesh weighed about four hundred pounds."

The late Moses Abbot and Richard Flanders, who lived near Hopkinton line, west of Long Pond, employed Mr. Asa Herrick, surveyor, to perambulate the line between them. While at work they were attracted to an old root, by the barking of their dog. There they found a bear. Herrick says, "Let it out;" Abbot says, "Keep it in," and struck at the bear with the head of his axe. But as bruin attempted to come out, he turned the edge of his axe, and with a well aimed blow struck it into the bear's head, and soon killed it. After drawing the bear out, Lieut. Herrick seeing its huge paws, was greatly terrified — being more afraid of a dead bear than of a live one.*

The late Richard Potter used to relate that soon after settling on his place,— where Mr. Thomas D. Potter now lives,— he one night heard an unusual commotion among his hogs, in a pen near the house. He got up and looked about, but saw nothing. After carefully covering the pen with boards, he went to bed, but was soon after roused again by the squealing of his hogs. On going out, he found one of them missing — being borne off by a bear, which carried it on to the hill west of his house, and there devoured it. The bristles of the swine thus devoured were afterwards gathered up, and preserved many years in the family.

* Tradition, by George Abbot, Esq.
At another time, (soon after his settlement,) Mr. Potter heard a noise at the lower end of "Pine Hill," southeast of his house. Proceeding thither, he found a bear. Bruin had mistaken a wasp's nest in the roots of a tree for a honey-bee's nest, and was attacking it fiercely for its supposed sweets! But the attack proved a bitter sweet—for the wasps, stirred up at so unprovoked an attack, had gone at him with waspish fury! The bear would rush up to the tree, thrust both paws into the nest, and then, covered with wasps—paws, head and ears—he would retreat a rod or two, uttering the most painful shrieks! Mr. Potter furnished himself with a stout pitch-wood knot, and when the bear rushed up to the tree to attack the wasps, he rushed up behind him, and dealt him a blow that staggered him; and, repeating them with a will, he brought bruin to the ground, and despatched him.*

CHAPTER IX.

PERIOD OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION—FROM 1775 TO 1785.

At the commencement of the Revolution the inhabitants of Concord partook largely of the spirit of liberty, and of hatred to the oppressive measures of the British government, that pervaded other portions of the country.

Early in 1775 the popular feeling was manifested against Major Benjamin Thompson, afterwards Count Rumford. Mr. Thompson, then about twenty-two years of age, was a native of Woburn, Massachusetts; had been employed as a school teacher in Concord for about three years previous. Having married Mrs. Sarah, widow of Benjamin Rolfe, Esq., and daughter of Rev. Mr. Walker, he had visited Exeter and Portsmouth, became acquainted with leading men in the Province, and attracted the attention of Governor John Wentworth, from whom, in 1774, he received the commission of major in the New-Hampshire militia. But as Gov. Wentworth was known to favor the cause of the crown rather than of the colonies, the people were suspicious of their young townsman, because he consented to hold a commission under him. Another circumstance that more inflamed them, was, that two British officers, of Gen. Gage's army in Boston, had visited Concord on furlough, and been entertained at Major Thompson's house. These circumstances, added to the fact that Mr. Thompson spoke doubtfully of the American cause, were the occasion of popular indignation against him. Tradition says that measures were concerted by a number of the more zealous patriots to surround his house on a given evening, to seize his person, and then to treat him according to their judgment of his merits; but, being timely admonished, Major Thompson withdrew to his native town, where he found himself equally insecure. It is said that he in vain sought for service in the American cause previous to the battle at Bunker Hill. Being everywhere suspected of toryism, he finally placed himself under the protection of Gen. Gage, in Boston."

As soon as the news of the battle at Lexington, April 19th, 1775, reached Concord, Capt. Abiel Chandler raised a volunteer company of thirty-six men, and marched to Cambridge, where they remained a fortnight. The names of this patriotic band, and of others from Concord who hastened to the scene of blood, cannot now be ascertained.† But at a meeting, December 5th, it was voted, "That Capt. Abiel Chandler and those that went under him to Cambridge, upon the alarm in April last, be paid by the parish, at the same rate that other troops in this colony are paid."

In May, 1775, a circular was received from a committee appointed by the Congress at Exeter, calling for a Convention of Deputies from the several towns in the Province, to meet at Exeter, May 17th, "fully empowered and authorized to adopt and pursue such measures as may be judged most expedient to preserve the rights of this and the other Colonies:" — which deputies should hold their seats, if necessary, six months. Pursuant to this, a town-meeting was immediately called, (May 11th,) and Timothy Walker, jr., elected "to represent the inhabitants of Concord at the proposed General Convention for the term of six months." This Convention was composed of one hundred and fifty-one delegates, and was styled the First Provincial Congress.‡

* See Biographical Sketch of Count Rumford.
† Judge Patten, of Bedford, in his journal of April 21, 1775, speaking of the fight at Lexington — the news of which he received on the 30th — says:

"Our John and John Dobbins and my bro't Samuels two oldest sons, seet off and joined Derryfield men, and about six from Goffstown, and two or three more from this town, under the command of Capt. John Mores, of Derryfield; they amounted to the No. of 45 in all. Suncook men and two or three others that joined them marched in about an hour after. They amounted to 35. There was nine more went along after them, belonging to Pennykook, or there about, and I went to McGregor's, and I got a pound of coffee on credit."
‡ See N. H. Register, 1853, p. 40. Previous to this time both the Rev. Mr. Walker and Timothy Walker, jr., had attended a Convention at Exeter. See preceding "Accounts;" &c.
In vain did the Governor, John Wentworth, attempt to repress or control the spirit of liberty everywhere awakened.

In a private letter written by him about this time he says: “Our hemisphere threatens a hurricane. I have in vain strove, almost to death, to prevent it. If I can at last bring out of it safety to my country and honor to my sovereign, my labors will be joyful.” But he could do neither; despairing of his efforts, and deeming his authority lost, and himself insulted by the proceedings of the Provincial Assembly, in the month of September following he entirely withdrew from the government of the Province.*

The fight at Lexington had kindled a patriotic flame all over the country. Companies were immediately formed, who hastened to the scene of danger in the vicinity of Boston. Among these, in the regiment commanded by Col. John Stark, were three companies from Concord and neighboring towns, under the command of Capt. Gordon Hutchins, Capt. Joshua Abbitt and Capt. Aaron Kinsman. These all shared in the glory of the battle at Bunker Hill, on the 17th of June, 1775.†

Tradition says that in the battle Capt. Abbitt’s company was stationed on the extreme left, without even the slight protection afforded by the rail-fence, or heaps of hay, enjoyed by most of the regiment.

The losses sustained by the several companies from Concord, according to returns made, were estimated as follows:

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

Timothy Walker, jr., was again chosen, December 5, to represent the parish of Concord in General Congress, to be held at Exeter the 21st day of December, 1775, for the term of one year, and "was empowered to pursue such measures as he shall judge necessary for the public good; and in case there should be a recommendation from the Continental Congress that this colony assume government in any particular form which will require a House of Representatives, that they resolve themselves into such a House as the said Continental Congress shall recommend."*

1776.

At this General Congress New-Hampshire stood foremost among the sister Colonies in opposition to the oppressions of the British government. Agreeably to the trust reposed in them by their constituents, having assumed the name and authority of a House of Representatives, they proceeded to choose twelve persons to be a distinct branch of the Legislature, by the name of a Council, and adopted in fact a constitution, which, it is said, was the first adopted by any of the colonies, after the Revolution commenced.† On the 11th of June, 1776, "a committee was chosen to make a draught of a Declaration of the General Assembly for the Independence of the United Colonies on Great Britain, to be transmitted to our delegates in Congress." This committee consisted of Samuel Cutts, of Portsmouth, Timothy Walker, of Concord, and John Dudley, who represented Raymond and Poplin.

On the 15th of June the committee reported a draught of a Declaration of Independence, which was unanimously adopted, and a copy forwarded to the Delegates from New-Hampshire in Congress. Which of the committee had the honor of drawing up this Declaration, we are not informed, but we claim a share of the honor for our own representative.

The New-Hampshire Declaration is as follows:

"Whereas it now appears an undoubted fact that notwithstanding all the dutiful petitions and decent remonstrances from the American colonies, and the utmost exertions of their best friends in England on their behalf, the British ministry, arbitrary and vindictive, are yet determined to reduce by fire and sword our bleeding county, to their absolute obedience; and for this purpose, in addition to their own forces, have engaged great numbers of foreign mercenaries, who may now be on their passage here, accompanied by a formidable fleet to ravish and plunder the sea-coast; from all which we may reasonably expect the most dismal scenes of distress the ensuing year, unless we exert ourselves by every means and precaution possible; and whereas we of this colony of New-Hampshire have the example of several of the most respectable of our sister colonies before us for entering upon that most important step of disunion from Great Britain, and declaring ourselves free and independent of the crown thereof, being impelled thereto by the most violent and injurious treatment; and it appearing absolutely necessary in this most critical juncture of our public affairs, that the Honorable the Continental Congress, who have this important object under immediate consideration, should be also informed of our resolutions thereon without loss of time, we do hereby declare that it is the opinion of this Assembly that our delegates at the Continental Congress should be instructed, and they are hereby instructed, to join with the other colonies in declaring the thirteen united colonies a free and independent State — solemnly pledging our faith and honor that we will on our parts support the measure with our lives and fortunes — and that in consequence thereof they, the Continental Congress, on whose wisdom, fidelity and integrity we rely, may enter into and form such alliances as they may judge most conducive to the present safety and future advantage of these American Colonies: Provided, the regulation of our own internal police be under the direction of our own Assembly.

You are desired to see that the said gentlemen are provided with good lodgings in your town, where they can be well accommodated, and if they are unable to pay the expense, this State will be answerable therefor, at a sum not exceeding twelve shillings per week each.

In behalf of the Council and Assembly,

I am, gentlemen, your very humble serv't,

M. WEARE, President.

Selectmen of Concord.

At the meeting in March, 1776, "Philip Eastman, Col. Thomas Stickney, Timothy Walker, Jr., Joseph Hall, Jr., and Richard Harbut, were chosen a committee of safety for the parish of Concord, for the year 1776."

The duty of this committee was "to transmit to the Congress, or Committee of Safety for the Colony, the names and places of abode of all such persons as they suspect to be any ways inimical to this country, with the causes and evidence of such suspicions." But the better to secure the detection of all persons "disaffected to the cause of America," a test was recommended by the Continental Congress, which was adopted by the Provincial Congress of New-Hampshire, and sent out to the several towns and parishes for signatures. Of this, directed to the selectmen of Concord, the following is a copy:

To the Select Men of Concord:

ENLISTMENT IN THE SERVICE.

Not a single name was returned as "disaffected;" still, as will appear from the proceedings next year, some were "suspected," and, whether justly or not, were severely dealt with on that account.

Many of the soldiers in service at Bunker Hill enlisted for eight months, and marched this year to join the Continental Army in New-York. Capt. Joshua Abbot and Capt. Benjamin Emery had command of companies.* Capt. Gordon Hutchins was promoted to lieutenant-colonel in Col. Nahum Baldwin's regiment. On their march to New-York many of his soldiers were taken sick, and no medicines being provided in the public stores, Col. Hutchins purchased a quantity for the use of his soldiers at his own expense—being moved, as he said afterward, in a petition to the General Assembly for remuneration, with "pity and humanity towards the unhappy sufferers, and, also, actuated from zeal for the public service."†

This year, March 4th, Messrs. John Kimball, Thomas Stickney, Reuben Kimball, Benjamin Emery and Richard Harbut, were appointed a "committee of safety." Col. Gordon Hutchins was chosen representative; and a vote was passed "to reconsider the former vote of the parish, passed March 7, 1775, for leasing the eighty acre lot belonging to the school right, to Oliver Hoyt for nine hundred years—he paying the parish six dollars annually;" and it was voted, "that instead of said Hoyt paying six dollars annually, the selectmen are directed to receive of him one hundred dollars, in full consideration for said lot;" and "that the selectmen be directed to lay out the one hundred dollars which they shall receive of Oliver Hoyt for the eighty acre lot, for a town stock of ammunition."

About this time certain prominent individuals were suspected of disaffection to the American cause, notwithstanding they had signed the "Association Test." Hence the following votes were passed March 4th:

"Voted, That this Parish will break off all dealings with Peter Green, Esq., Mr. John Stevens, Mr. Nathaniel Green and Dr. Philip Caragain, until they give satisfaction to the Parish for their past conduct; and that they be advertised in the Public Prints as Enemies to the United States of America, unless said Persons give said satisfaction within thirty days from this date; and that the above Persons be disarmed by the Committee of Safety until they give satisfaction to the Public.

"Voted, That the Committee be directed to instruct Col. Gordon Hutchins to apply to the Courts of Judicature of this State to dismiss Peter Green, Esq., from all Business henceforth and forever.

"Voted, That if any Persons have any Dealings with Peter Green, Esq., Mr. John Stevens, Mr. Nathaniel Green and Dr. Philip Caragain, before they give satisfaction to the Public, that they be looked upon as Enemies to their Country by this Parish.

"Voted, That the Committee of Safety be directed to instruct Col. Gordon Hutchins to apply to Capt. Parker, the Sheriff for the County of Rockingham, to dismiss Mr. Jacob Green from the office of Deputy Sheriff.

A true copy—

Examined by TIMOTHY WALKER, Jr., Clerk."

In accordance with the spirit of the above votes, some of the zealous liberty men of the west part of the town meditated something a little more personal. About nine o'clock, one morning, Col. Timothy Walker had just mounted his horse to ride away on business, when he observed a considerable number of West Parish men walking with quick steps by the meeting-
ARRESTS FOR TORYISM.

...house, towards Main street; and behind them, at some distance, John Bradley, Esq., with a more deliberate step, and apparently in deep thought. Meeting at the corner, by Mr. Hanniford's house, Col. Walker said—"Good morning, Esq. Bradley; what's going on?" "I thought I would walk down and see," said Mr. Bradley. They followed on, and found the West Parish men at "Mother Osgood's" tavern, in high excitement, threatening to go at once and pull down Esq. Peter Green's house. On the arrival of Col. Walker and Mr. Bradley, they entered into a discussion with the West Parish men on the merits of the case, and detained them from executing their purpose till near sundown. Then, inviting them all into "Mother Osgood's" tavern, they called for bowls of punch, and treated the company liberally. All being by this time in a better mood, Col. Walker made a brief speech, which he closed by saying—"Every man to his tent, O Israel!" and they quietly dispersed without tearing down Esq. Green's house!

However, soon after this, Peter Green, Esq., John Stevens, and others, were arrested, carried to Exeter, and confined in jail.* Liberty was granted them to take the oath of allegiance, as a condition of release, which all did except John Stevens. He swore he was as good a friend to his country as any who had caused his arrest, and he never would take the oath required. He was finally discharged from jail, by special order of the Legislature, in 1778. The town also voted, March 4, 1783, to "reconsider the vote formerly passed to break off all dealings with Mr. John Stevens, and that said vote be made null and void."†

May 22d, a committee was chosen to carry into execution an "act for regulating prices of sundry articles."‡

July 5th, Lieut. Col. Gerrish, of Boscawen, raised a company in Concord and adjacent towns, for the relief of the garrison at Ticonderoga. News of the evacuation of the fort soon arrived, and the company was disbanded.

The year 1777 is memorable on account of the battle of Bennington, in which Gen. John Stark, with his New-Hampshire volunteers, defeated Col. Baum, and thus ultimately led to the defeat and capture of Gen. Burgoyne.

Never did men enter more heartily into any service than did the soldiers from Concord, who joined Gen. Stark's regiment for the purpose of cutting off Burgoyne in his march from Canada through Vermont to New-York. When the news of Burgoyne's expedition reached New-Hampshire, the General Assembly, which had closed its spring session, was immediately recalled. John Langdon was Speaker of the House. Col. Hutchins was representative from Concord. The highest enthusiasm prevailed. It was understood that Gen. John Stark, who had retired to his farm in affront, because he had been superseded in the continental service, would take command of any volunteers that New-Hampshire would raise, and march at once to the scene of danger. Accordingly he received a commission of brigadier-general from the New-Hampshire government. John Langdon, in the ardor of his patriotism, said—"I have £3000 in money, and fifty hogsheads of rum; and I will pawn my house and plate for all they are worth, if Gen. Stark will take command of the New-Hampshire troops to cut off Burgoyne;"—adding, "If we gain our independence I shall be repaid; if not, it matters not what becomes of my property." As soon as it was decided to raise volunteer companies and place them under command of Gen. Stark, Col. Hutchins mounted his horse, and traveling all night, with all possible haste, reached Concord on Sabbath afternoon, before the close of public service. Dismounting at the meeting-house door, he walked up the aisle of the church while Mr. Walker was preaching. Mr. Walker paused in his sermon, and said—"Col. Hutchins, are you the bearer of any message?" "Yes," replied the Colonel: "Gen. Burgoyne, with his army, is on his march to Albany. Gen. Stark has offered to take the command of New-Hampshire men; and, if we all turn out, we can cut off Burgoyne's march." Whereupon Rev. Mr. Walker said—"My hearers, those of you who are willing to go, better leave at once." At which word all the men in the meeting-house rose and went out. Many immediately enlisted. The whole night was spent in preparation, and a company was ready to march next day. Phinehas Virgin said—"I can't go, for I have no shoes:" to which Samuel Thompson, a shoemaker, replied—"Do n't be troubled about that, for you shall have a pair before morning," which was done. The late Jonathan Eastman, senior, Esq., was in similar want of shoes, and a new pair was also made for him before morning.*

Belonging to Stark's brigade at Bennington were twenty-eight men from Concord. They did not, however, all arrive in season for the fight, which issued in so glorious a victory. Col. Thomas Stickney, Lieut. Richard Herbert, Jesse Abbot, John Abbot, Elias Abbot, Abner Flanders, Samuel Kinkson; John Peters and Timothy Johnson were in the battle. Col. Stickney particularly distinguished himself. His regiment was ordered to attack the breast-work which the Tories had thrown up. Gen. Stark thus speaks of him in his official dispatch to the Legislature of New-Hampshire, August 18th: "The 16th, I was joined by this State's militia, and those of Berkshire county. I divided my army into three divisions, and sent Col. Nichols, with two hundred and fifty men, on the rear of their left wing. Col. Kendrick, on the rear of their right, with three hundred men, was ordered, when joined, to attack the same. In the mean time I sent three hundred more to oppose the enemy's front, to draw the attention that way. Soon after I detached the Colonels, Hubbard and Stickney, on their right wing, with two hundred men, to attack that part, all which plans had their desired effect.

Our people behaved with the greatest spirit and bravery imaginable: had they been Alexanders or Charleses of Sweden, they could not have behaved better.''

Col. Gordon Hutchins, who raised a volunteer company of about thirty men, in Concord, hastened as fast as possible towards Bennington, but did not arrive in time to share in the battle. The names of the volunteers in his company cannot be definitely ascertained.

Capt. Joshua Abbot had command of a company in Col. Ger-

*Tradition related by Jacob Hoyt, Esq.
rish's regiment, "which company marched from Concord and towns adjacent, to reinforce the Northern Continental Army at Saratoga, September, 1777."

Among the men enrolled in Capt. Abbot's company was William Clement, from Bradford, who was also in the Bennington battle, in Col. Stickney's regiment, which attacked the tory breast-work. As he rushed up to the works, a tory thrust a bayonet at him; he struck it aside, and drove his own through his opponent's eye and head with such force, that the bayonet came off, and remained in the tory's head. When they buried the slain, the soldiers told Clement to take his bayonet out of the man's head; but he declared he would never touch it again, and the body was buried in that condition.*

The tories who were taken captives in the Bennington battle "were ordered to be tied in pairs, and these pairs connected by a rope, to which a horse was harnessed with a postillion mounted to lead them away. The ladies of Bennington dismantled their beds to furnish cords for the purpose, and rendered other services equally patriotic."†

On the 8th of September, this year, the selectmen, together with Lieut. Joseph Hall, Timothy Walker, jr., and Ezekiel Dimond, were appointed a committee "to settle with all persons who have done service in the army." It was voted, "that the expense of the Continental soldiers raised by the Parish of Concord shall be paid by the Parish;" and that "the sum of four hundred and sixty pounds, lawful money, be raised upon the ratable polls and estate" of the inhabitants for that purpose.

CONVENTION TO FORM A PLAN OF GOVERNMENT.

At a meeting, January 26, 1778, Col. Thomas Stickney, Representative in the General Assembly, was instructed "to use his influence in order that a full and free representation of the people be called as soon as conveniently may be, for the sole purpose of laying a permanent plan or system for the future government of the State." A convention was agreed upon, to be held at Concord the following June.

Preparatory to the convention, Messrs. James Walker, John Bradley and Amos Abbot, were appointed a committee " to repair the meeting-house so far as is necessary." On the 10th of June following, a convention of seventy-three delegates assembled in it to form a new constitution. Timothy Walker, jr., was the delegate from Concord. Among other distinguished members were John Langdon, of Portsmouth, Matthew Thornton and John Bell, from Londonderry; Josiah Bartlett, of Kingston, Joseph Badger, of Gilmanton, Timothy Farrar, of New-Ipswich, and Samuel Emerson, of Chester. This convention did not complete its labors till the 5th of June, 1779. The constitution was then sent out to the people and was totally rejected! In Concord the vote was twenty-six for, and twenty-five against it.

THE CURRENCY.

At this time great difficulty was experienced from the depreciation of the continental money, which was a paper currency, in the form of bills of credit. As these bills sunk in value, the nominal sum necessary to be raised for current expenses increased. As a remedy for the evil, in September, 1779, a convention was held in Concord, "pursuant to a request from the town of Portsmouth, recommending such a convention, for the purpose of appreciating the currency, by regulating the prices," &c. Major Jonathan Hale and Timothy Walker, Esq., were chosen delegates to attend this convention. The convention was probably held in the room fitted up in the store of John Stevens, Esq. On the 18th of October the town chose for a committee "to regulate prices," &c., Messrs. Jonathan Hale, Thomas Wilson, Aaron Kinsman, Jonathan West, David Hall, Reuben Kimball, Joseph Hall, jr., and James Walker; but whether this committee did any thing in addition to what was done by the committee appointed in 1777, does not appear from any thing on record.*

In 1780, £9,000 were voted to be raised to pay Mr. Walker's

* See Prices, &c., in Document No. 1, Chap. IX.
salary for the current year, and what was due for the last two years. "Laboring men, that worked on the highways," were allowed six pounds per day. Not finding £9,000 sufficient to pay their minister, the parish voted to raise £30,000 in addition; and next year, 1781, they voted to raise £50,000!

Continental paper money was at this time estimated, by the New-Hampshire Legislature, as follows:

In Jan'y, 1780, £2934 "continental money," equal to £100 silver.
In July, " 6000 " " " 100 "
In Dec., " 7300 " " " 100 "
In Jan'y, 1781, 7500 " " " 100 "
In June, " 7800 " " " 100 "

From this period till the close of the Revolution all the measures recommended by the Continental Congress, or by the Council of Safety of New-Hampshire, to carry on the war, were promptly responded to. In 1778, Lieut. Joseph Hall, Capt. Joshua Abbot, John Kimball, James Walker and Lieut. John Chandler were the Committee of Safety. It was voted, "that an average be made in hiring the continental soldiers;" and a committee was appointed "to examine into what every man has done in the war." In 1779 Lieut. John Chandler, Col. Thomas Stickney, and Capt. Aaron Kinsman, were chosen a committee of Safety; and a committee appointed to procure eight soldiers, as the proportion which Concord was required to raise, to fill up the continental army. On the 4th of July, 1780, it was voted "to give the soldiers that have lately engaged to serve six months in the continental army, ten bushels of Indian corn per month, or money equal thereto." A committee was also chosen, "to procure fifteen soldiers for the army."

In January, 1781, sixteen more soldiers were called for, and a committee appointed, to whom discretionary power was given in procuring said soldiers. In exercising their discretion, committees appointed by towns sometimes hired men belonging to other places; and hence among the men returned for Concord we find the names of some who never had a residence among us." On the 6th of February it was voted "to raise one thousand Spanish milled dollars, in order to enable the parish to procure the soldiers that are now called for to fill up the continental army.

In 1781 another convention was called, to be held in Concord, for the purpose of forming a plan of government. Col. Timothy Walker was chosen delegate. Concord seems to have been chosen for the place of meeting, as mid-way between the towns on the coast and those along the Connecticut river, which were then rising into importance, and respecting which a controversy was then pending between Vermont and New-Hampshire. Tradition says that the sessions of the convention were mostly held in the hall over the store of John Stevens, Esq., and that the members found the tavern of "Mother Osgood" in very convenient proximity. However that may be, they made slow progress in their labor, and met with poor success when they submitted the draft of their "new Constitution" to the people. The convention first met on the 5th of June, and after a session of a few days, they appointed a committee of seven to draft the form of a constitution, and then adjourned to September 14th, next. At the adjourned meeting the committee made their report, and a form of Constitution was agreed upon; seven hundred copies ordered to be printed, and distributed to each town and place throughout the State, with the request that when acted upon by the people, if rejected in whole or in part, reasons might be assigned therefor, and the same returned with the state of the votes. The convention then adjourned to the fourth Wednesday in January, 1782. When the convention met in January it was found that the constitution was rejected.

The meeting to act on the proposed constitution was held in Concord January 21st, 1782; "then it was put to vote to see if the parish would accept the plan of government, as it now stands, and there appeared forty-eight against said plan, and none for it!"

"Voted, To have a town representation.

"Voted, To have a Governor at the head of the Legislative body.

"Voted, That the Governor shall not have a Privy Council.
"Voted, That the people at large shall appoint their militia officers."

The convention next adjourned to the third Wednesday in August following, when they again met and agreed upon another form of constitution, which, upon being submitted to the people, was also rejected!

This constitution was acted upon by the people of Concord, December 16, 1782. "Col. Thomas Stickney was chosen moderator. Then the question was put to receive the plan of government as it now stands, (there being fifty-two voters present,) and it was rejected by the whole!"

"Then some amendments were proposed, which are as followeth, viz.:

"That the Governor and Privy Council be left out, and that there be a President, a Legislative Council and a House of Representatives; and that the powers which are vested in a Governor and Council be vested in the Council and House of Representatives."

Then the question was put to receive the plan of government with the above amendments, "and it was received by thirty."

The convention met again, according to adjournment, on the last Tuesday in December, and finding their second constitution rejected,—still not disheartened,—adjourned to meet again in June, 1783, when, after due deliberation, they agreed upon a third form of a constitution, had it printed and sent out to the people for their approval or rejection. Then the convention adjourned to October 31, 1783. On assembling and counting the votes as returned, they found the constitution was accepted by the people; and on the same day, the form was declared to be the civil constitution of the State of New-Hampshire.

At the meeting in Concord, September 29, 1783, to act on the proposed constitution, Voted, "To receive the constitution of government as altered by the convention in June last." Twenty in favor of it and ten against it."

Thus the convention, which commenced its labors June 5th, 1781, held, as appears by the records, at least seven different sessions, and succeeded at the third trial, after a period of two years, four months and twenty-six days, in forming a constitution which the people approved and adopted, and which was established October 31, 1788.*

In the warrant for the town-meeting, September 29, 1782, was an article, "To see if the parish will vote to alter the eighth article of the confederation of the United States, agreeable to the recommendation of Congress."

Upon which, "Voted, Not to alter the eighth article of the confederation of the United States, agreeable to the recommendation of Congress."

The article referred to was as follows:

Art. VIII. "All charges of war, and all other expenses that shall be incurred for the common defence or general warfare, and allowed by the United States in Congress assembled, shall be defrayed out of a common treasury, which shall be supplied by the several States, in proportion to the value of all land within each State, granted to or surveyed for any person, as such land and the buildings and improvements thereon shall be estimated according to such mode as the United States in Congress assembled, shall from time to time direct and appoint. The taxes for paying that proportion shall be laid and levied by the authority and direction of the Legislatures of the several States within the time agreed upon by the United States in Congress assembled."

In 1783 the Revolutionary War was brought to a close and our National Independence established. Peace was proclaimed in the army on the 19th of April. The soldiers who survived the conflicts in which they had valiantly fought for the rights of their country, returned home to enjoy the blessings which had been purchased at so dear a price.† Some of our men, as we have seen, marched at the first sound of war, to Lexington; they faced the enemy on the heights of Bunker Hill; experienced great privations and sufferings in the Northern Army, at Ticonderoga, and under Arnold at Quebec; met and conquered the enemy, under the gallant Stark, at Bennington; were at the capture of Burgoyne at Saratoga;—some had the honor of suffering with Washington at Valley Forge, and of sharing in his victories at Princeton and Trenton; some were at the scene of blood in Wyoming, and in short had participated in all the dangers, sufferings and glory incident to the war.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS AND INTERESTING INCIDENTS DURING THE PERIOD OF THE REVOLUTION.

SMALL-POX.

In July, 1775, Dr. Philip Carrigain visited a patient in a neighboring town, who, as it proved, had the small-pox. The doctor took it in the natural way. The nature of the disease was not discovered until John, son of Mr. Nathaniel West, who lived on the opposite side of the street from Dr. C., also took the disease. The doctor inoculated his own family, consisting of five members, who all recovered. Mr. West's family consisted of nine; six of whom had the disease in the natural way, the others escaped. Mr. West died, aged fifty-eight. It was first known on Saturday that the small-pox was in town. So great was the alarm, that the next morning, Sunday, the inhabitants assembled en masse, and commenced the erection of a pest-house, in a grove west of the late residence of Capt. Benjamin Emery — now of Ebenezer S. Towle; and such was the zeal with which they applied themselves to the work, that by night the timber for a convenient house, to consist of four rooms, had been felled, hewed, framed and raised; the boards for covering, and brick for the chimney, were drawn to the ground. Dr. Carrigain and his family remained at their own house. Fences were run across the street to cut off all communication, and a road was opened through the fields. Mr. West's family was conveyed to the pest house. The expense of building the house was paid by the town, amounting to forty pounds, lawful money.

ANDREW STONE.

In the warrant for the annual meeting, March 7, 1780, was an article "to see if the parish will choose an agent to prosecute those persons who pulled down the house of Andrew Stone, and see what provision they will make for the support of his wife." Andrew Stone was a soldier from Concord, in the Continental Army; his house was in the southwest part of the town, on the road southeast of Mr. Ira Abbot's. Tradition says that during his absence in the army, one of Mr. Stone's daughters did not behave so well as the neighbors thought a fair and chaste maiden should do, and they undertook to correct her manners — at least to testify their virtuous disapproval — by pulling the house down. Whether the girl behaved any better afterwards, tradition saith not. But the "law and order" people of Concord chose Capt. Benjamin Emery an agent "to prosecute those persons that pulled down Andrew Stone's house."

LOTTERY—CURRENCY.

In 1781 Col. Timothy Walker was chosen agent to petition the General Court for liberty to make a lottery for building a bridge over Merrimack river. This petition was not granted; but about three years afterwards, on petition of Henry Gerrish and others, a lottery was granted "for raising the sum of sixteen hundred dollars, to be laid out on the falls in Merrimack river, for the more easy conveyance of timber down the same." Timothy Walker, Esq., Gen. John Stark, Robert McGregor, Esq., Capt. Reuben Kimball, and Peter Green, Esq., were appointed managers, and laid under oath for the faithful discharge of their trust.*

In 1782 the currency became better regulated. Four hundred pounds lawful silver money were raised to defray parish expenses. Owing to delinquency in paying the minister's salary in former years, Col. Timothy Walker, Capt. Benj. Emery and Peter Green, Esq., were appointed a committee "to request the Rev. Mr. Walker to sue those persons who have been delinquent in paying his salary from the year 1749 to the year 1765." It does not appear that the parson ever complied with the request.

RICHARD POTTER—DR. CARRIGAIN.

Mr. Richard Potter was this year exempted from paying taxes. The reason of this is understood to have been the loss of one of his legs. Mr. P. was logging in Loudon, three or four miles from home. A large log which his team was drawing on a side-hill, suddenly slid and caught his leg between it and a small tree. The bruise was so severe as to endanger his life. A council of physicians was called, a majority of whom concluded that Mr. Potter must die, and it was of no use to cut his leg off. But, after the other doctors had left, Dr. Carrigain said, "Potter might be saved, and the leg should be cut off." Accordingly, cutting round the flesh, just below the knee, the doctor took a saw, which he brought with him, and commenced operating; but finding the saw very dull, he stopped and requested Benjamin Thompson, a neighbor, to run home, about a quarter of a mile, and get a sharper saw. With this the operation was finished. Mr. Potter was insensible at the time, but the next night after the operation he knew the watchers. His leg was cut off close to the knee. The bone was left bare and smooth. In order to make the skin heal over, Dr. C. ordered New-England rum to be heated and poured slowly on, while the bone was picked and roughened with an awl!

Mr. Potter, after a long confinement, was able to get about; and, being somewhat of a mechanical genius, he constructed for himself a wooden leg, with which he could not only walk comfortably, but could even run and wrestle. Mr. Potter lived many years afterwards in good health. He died July 6, 1828, aged eighty-four years.*

DEATH OF REV. MR. WALKER.

The venerable pastor, who, more than fifty years before had come, with his flock, into the wilderness, was now released from his charge. He died suddenly on the first of September, 1782, in the seventy-eighth year of his age and fifty-second of his ministry.† His funeral, conducted by a committee of the parish, was attended by the great body of the people, who mourned as for a father! Neighboring ministers attended as pall-bearers, and a funeral discourse was preached by Rev. Mr. Woodman, of Sanbornton.

* See "Potter Family." † See Biographical Notice of Rev. Mr. Walker.
The "funeral charges" were defrayed by the parish, and were as follows:

The first business of the parish, October 21, after the funeral of Mr. Walker, was to choose a "committee to supply the pulpit," viz.: Col. Timothy Walker, John Kimball and Capt. Reuben Kimball.

THE MEETING-HOUSE.

Measures had been some time in progress for the repair and finishing of the meeting-house. In 1779 the parish offered "to give up the pew ground to any number of persons who will finish the meeting-house, and add a porch, and the value of another porch;" and also agreed "to be at the expense of building a steeple." In 1782 a committee was appointed "to treat with the proprietors of the meeting-house, and see upon what terms they will relinquish the same to the parish." In July, of this year, the purchase was made, and the meeting-house conveyed to the parish.*

* Know all Men by These Presents, That we, Timothy Bradley, Gentleman, Moses Eastman, Gentleman, Nathaniel Eastman, Yeoman, Lot Colby, Husbandman, and Jonathan Eastman, Gentleman, and Joseph Eastman, Gentleman, all of Concord, in the County of Rockingham, and State of New-Hampshire—For and in consideration of Ten pounds, Lawful money, paid us by Peter Green, Esq., David Hall, Cordwainer, Benjamin Emery, Gentleman, John Kimball, Joiner, and Benjamin Hanniford, Joiner, a Committee Legally Chosen by the Parish of Concord to purchase of said Bradley, Moses Eastman, and Nathaniel Eastman, Lot Colby, and Jonathan Eastman, and Joseph Eastman, all their Right and property in a certain Meeting-House in said Concord, and a Lot of Land, containing One Acre and half, upon which the greatest part of said Meeting-House Standeth, Laid out to the Original Right of Zachariah Chandler, Alias Nathan Fisk, for the Sole use and benefit of said Parish forever; have given, granted, sold and released, and by these presents do give,
The next year (1783) the meeting-house was finished. The steeple, built by Mr. Ephraim Potter, was framed and finished inside of the porch, and then raised by means of tackling of Mr. Potter's contrivance. One object in putting the meeting-house in order at this time was to accommodate the General Court, which had begun to hold its sessions in Concord. The first session was held here March 13, 1782. At first they convened in the meeting-house, but, "on account of the inclemency of the weather, adjourned to a building which had been prepared for their reception." This is understood to have been in the north room of the store built by Judge Walker, two or three rods south of his dwelling-house.

The following table, carefully drawn from the original records of the House of Representatives, will show at what times the General Court met in Concord previous to 1816, when it became the permanent seat of government and capital of the State:

The meeting-house was finished in what was considered a superior style. The entrances were at a door in the middle, on the south side, and at two porches, one at the east with a steeple, and the other at the west. The pulpit was about twelve feet high, with a window back of it, and over head a large sounding-board. On the lower floor, aisles extended from the south door to the pulpit—from one porch to the other—and side-aisles separated the wall pews from those in the body of the house. At the base of the pulpit, on a platform about two feet high, was a seat for aged men; and in front of that, less elevated, was the deacons’ seat. Suspended from the front of the deacons’ seat by hinges, was a circular board, which served for a table on sacramental occasions. The pulpit stairs were on the west side, and underneath the pulpit on the east was a closet. The wall and body pews were square, with seats hung on hinges, to be raised when the congregation stood in prayer. Near the middle of the house were five slips or “seats” on each side, reserved for persons who did not own “pews”—the men sitting on the west side, and women on the east. The gallery was also fitted up with pews, considerably elevated, around the wall. A large square pew opposite the pulpit was built for the singers, with a circular table, on which to lay their books. Two large pews were finished, contiguous to the singers’ seat—one on the east and the other on the west side. The other space in the gallery was laid off into slips for common use; reserving—according to the custom of the times—one slip for negroes, near the east door of the gallery!

The pews were sold at “public vendue,” and numbered and recorded, by order of the parish.∗

On the 10th of September, 1783, the parish voted “to lease to Timothy Walker, Esq., for the term of nine hundred and ninety-nine years, three acres of bog-meadow, in said Concord, which was laid out to the parsonage right for emendation—he, the said Walker, giving said parish a full discharge for all arrearages due on account of his late father’s salary.” Peter Green, Esq., Lieut. John Chandler and Mr. William Coffin were appointed a committee for the purpose.

An act was passed January 2, 1784, “to annex a part of Canterbury and Loudon to the parish of Concord.” This was done upon the petition of John Hoit and others, setting forth "that they live upon a gore of land formerly claimed by the proprietors of Rumford and Canterbury; that when said Rumford was incorporated, in the year 1765, by the name of Concord, they were left to said Canterbury, since which time said proprietors of Rumford and Canterbury have amicably settled said dispute;* that by the late division of Canterbury they were all, except one, set off to the parish of Loudon," &c.—praying "that said gore of land, containing about one thousand and fifty acres, lying at the north-easterly corner of said Rumford, with the inhabitants thereon, may be dissevered from said Canterbury and Loudon and annexed to the parish of Concord." The petition was granted, and the gore of land, with the inhabitants thereon, annexed to Concord.

At the same time, by the same act, it was "enacted that the parish of Concord be henceforth called the town of Concord, any law, usage or custom to the contrary notwithstanding."†

THE NEW CONSTITUTION.

On the second of June, 1784, the new Constitution, established October 31, 1783, was carried into effect. The occasion was one of great interest and importance, and attended with imposing ceremonies. The venerable Meshech Weare was first President of the State under the new Constitution. A procession was formed, composed of members of the Legislature and civil authorities of the State, together with other persons of office and dignity; also, of ministers of the gospel of various denominations, and a large body of citizens, who marched at the sound of music to the meeting-house. The Rev. Samuel McClintock, D.D., of Greenland, preached on the occasion,‡ and a public dinner was given at the expense of the State.

CHAPTER X.

HISTORY FROM 1785 TO 1795.

In the period from 1785 to 1795 the affairs of the town were conducted with great regularity. Having with their fellow-citizens gained independence, and established an excellent Constitution for the State, the inhabitants of the town now devoted themselves to the quiet pursuits of industry—cultivating their farms, improving their dwelling-houses, laying out new roads, establishing ferries, clearing the river of obstructions, and providing accommodations for the General Court, which they already anticipated would hold its annual sessions here.

TUCKER'S FERRY.

In February, 1785, an act was passed by the Legislature, vesting the exclusive privilege of keeping a Ferry over a certain part of Merrimack river, in Lemuel Tucker, of Concord. This ferry was at or near the present location of Federal Bridge, and had been kept many years before, under the name of "Eastman's Ferry." The act secured to Tucker the right of ferrying over the Merrimack "in any place within one mile of his dwelling-house," which stood near the landing on the eastern bank of the river.*

A committee, consisting of Capt. Reuben Kimball, Capt. Aaron Kinsman, and Col. Thomas Stickney, appointed to supply the pulpit,* employed Mr. Daniel Storey a number of Sabbaths; but were directed by the town "to procure a candidate on probation, the first opportunity." Mr. Jonathan Wilkins, accordingly, was engaged to preach as a candidate; and, on the 18th of December, 1786, received a call to settle, with the offer of £100 salary, the use of the parsonage, (excepting the meadow lot,) and £200 towards a settlement. This "call" of the town was preceded by a unanimous call from the church, December 17th, but the call was declined for reasons set forth in Mr. Wilkins's answer, as follows:

"The unexpected harmony of the Church and general concurrence of the Town, are weighty circumstances in your favor, and almost suppress every declining thought; though we must confess it would have been more pleasing had there been no dissensions. Yet, taking into view your local situation with its attendant circumstances, it rather appears the encouragements you offered are, in part, and as they are now stated, will prove deficient to the proposed end; if so, you with me in the event would be disappointed. But some may think this the result of false reasoning. I grant it may be so, as I have had but an unequal opportunity to examine matters relative thereto, since my return. However, in submissive compliance with the time prefixed, its consistent that I result consonant to present persuasion. Hence, in conformity to what appears duty and interest, which are inseparably connected, I think it preferable to decline an acceptance of your invitation, received last December, to take my settled residence with you in the important office. Beloved, though by this reply you meet a present disappointment, in christian firmness abide it; be not discomposed, nor greatly dispirited. We may in present tryals even find occasion to acknowledge the superintendence of His wise providence, who is able to cause unwished for events to operate for the good of his obedient subjects.

"I trust in the government of wisdom your social order and harmony will not only be cherished, but increased in your following attempts to get a man to enter upon the stated ministry of the divine word and ordinances among you. To this end admit the word of life as your approved guide, which discountenances every degree of envying and strife, while it encourages the genuine exercise of the opposite graces, charity, candor, &c. Closed with a passage in Heb. 13: 20, 21.

Jonathan Wilkins."

Mr. Wilkins was a native of Marlborough, Mass.; graduated at Dartmouth College, 1779. Declining the "call" to settle in the ministry, he became a resident in the place, and relinquished preaching. In 1787 he married Miss Sarah Hall, daughter of Jeremiah Hall, and grand-daughter of Dea. Joseph Hall, senior. He owned a farm at "the Eleven Lots," and lived in the house still standing at the crotch of the roads, west side, near the house of the late Countess of Rumford.* In 1797 he was clerk of the church; in 1802, appointed a Justice of the Peace; was one of the selectmen in 1801, 1803, 1804, and 1805; at several times was moderator of the town meetings. On the 6th of September, 1811, he was chosen deacon of the church, which office he held till his death, March 9, 1830, aged seventy-five years.

LAYING OUT MAIN STREET.

June 23, 1785, Capt. Benjamin Emery, Lieut. Joseph Hall, Lieut. John Bradley, Capt. Reuben Kimball, and Mr. Joseph Farnum, were appointed "a committee to lay out Main street." In the original survey of house lots, (on Main street,) space was left for a street ten rods wide; but the tradition is, that liberty was given to the settlers to advance two rods on each side, leaving six rods width for the street: but in using the liberty given, some advanced a few feet, or a few inches over the line, and erected buildings. Hence it became necessary to fix the bounds of Main street, which the above committee did do, by a careful survey, and establishing bounds that remain to this day. The committee, however, did not complete their work and make a final report till 1798. They then presented a plan of Main street, which is found in the second volume of the Town Records, page 238, and of which, on a reduced scale, the annexed engraving is a copy—the explanations being given on the opposite page.

PAPER MONEY.

About this time a great excitement existed in various places through the State on account of the scarcity of money. Some were in favor of paper money; but, at a meeting called agreeable to a recommendation of the General Court, to consider the subject, the town voted "not to make paper money on any plan whatever."

During the June session of the Legislature which met in Concord this year, an attempt was made to call a convention to petition that body in favor of a plan for a paper currency, but the attempt was defeated in the following singular and ludicrous manner:

At the first sitting of the Assembly, in June, when only five members of the proposed convention were in town, some wags, among whom were several young lawyers, pretended to have been chosen by the towns in which they lived, for the same purpose. In conference with the five, they penetrated their views, and persuaded them to post an advertisement, requesting all the members who were in town to assemble immediately, it being of the utmost importance to present their petition as early in the session as possible. By this means, sixteen pretended members, with five real ones, formed themselves into a convention, choosing one of the five their president, and one of the sixteen their clerk. They carried on their debates, and passed votes with much apparent solemnity. Having framed a petition, complaining in the most extravagant terms of their grievances; praying for a loan of three millions of dollars, funded on real estate; for the abolition of inferior courts, and a reduction of the number of lawyers to only two in each county; and for a free trade with all the world; they went in procession to the Assembly, (some of whom had been previously let into the secret,) and with great formality presented their petition, which was suffered to lie on the table. The convention then dissolved—the petition was withdrawn—and when others, who had been really chosen by the towns, arrived, they were exceedingly mortified on finding their views for that time so completely frustrated. The proceedings of this mock convention were for a long time subjects of sport and ridicule.*

The public excitement, however, did not stop here. County conventions were called; petitions presented to the Legislature, and the ferment at last subsided in the arrest and punishment of the rioters at Exeter.†

The following extract of a letter from Hon. Robert Bradley, of Fryeburg, Maine, gives a vivid idea of the extreme scarcity of money at this time:

"The same year that the Legislature was surrounded and held as prisoners at Exeter, [1786,] by a mob demanding paper money, my father was elected a representative; and the next day gave me a letter to carry to Timothy Bradley, living on the mountain, (so called.) On my way in the woods I met Mr.
Bradley, gave him the letter, and was instructed to say to my father that the dollar—the only one on the east side of the river—which he had the promise of, had gone. A case of life and death had made it necessary to send to Andover for Dr.
Kittredge; but there was a rich maiden lady in Canterbury who had a crown, and he would go the next day and see my father about it. He did so, and afterwards obtained the crown piece and an old pistareen of Miss Clough, which was all the money that was to be found. My father then went to Judge Walker, who took care of the honor and interest of Concord, who furnished him with the means to pay his board at Exeter; and he was the only one of fourteen boarders who paid their landlord, (a man by the name of Clifford,) their expenses in full.

"Col. David Page, who represented Conway the same year, told me he left home with two shillings and sixpence in money to pay expense to Exeter by way of Alfred, Maine. He informed me that he had a small sum due him from John Pierce, Esq., of Portsmouth, for which he received a guinea, and paid all of it towards his board, save two shillings and sixpence, to pay for bread and milk on his way home. The representatives offered the whole of their State scrip for their services, to the landlord, who preferred their private securities. About ten or twelve of them returning home, took lodgings at the Gambrel Roof, [Esq. Bradley’s house,] about one half of the number on couches on the floor. My impression is, they had not a dollar amongst the whole of them."

1787–8.

On the 19th of March the town voted “to fence the burying-ground with a post and board fence.” In October, Col. Peter Green, Col. Timothy Walker and Lieut. Joseph Hall, were chosen “to forward to the Secretary’s office a particular account of all bounties, for raising men for the Continental Army, or the militia called into service during the late war.” In January, 1788, Col. Walker was appointed to petition the General Court for a new County, that should include the town of Concord, and any other towns that may petition for the same.

ADOPTION OF THE FEDERAL CONSTITUTION.

Capt. Benjamin Emery was chosen to the convention which was called to meet in Exeter on the second Wednesday of February, 1788, “to take into consideration the proceedings of the late Federal Convention;” in other words, to discuss and act upon the adoption of the Federal Constitution, which had been proposed by a convention of delegates in Philadelphia, from all the States except Rhode-Island, and which had already been adopted by eight States. To give the Constitution effect, or “to set the political machinery in motion,” it was necessary that nine States should adopt it. On the decision of New-Hampshire, therefore, great consequences were depending. The convention for this important purpose first met at the court house in Exeter, February 13. His Excellency, John Sullivan, was chosen President, and John Calfe, Esq., Secretary. The convention continued in session at Exeter ten days, then adjourned to meet in Concord on the 18th of June following. The convention met at the meeting-house, (now the Biblical Institute,) and was composed of a large number of the most respected and honored men in the State — men who, having fought for liberty and independence, were jealous of their rights, yet desirous of securing for themselves and for posterity all the blessings of a National Union."

When the final vote was taken on the Constitution, with certain amendments which had been proposed, there were fifty-seven yeas and forty-seven nays. Our delegate, Capt. Emery, voted in the negative! The Constitution, as amended, was adopted in the name of the people of New-Hampshire, in the following words:

STATE OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

In Convention of the Delegates of the People of the State of New-Hampshire, June 21st, 1788:

The Convention having impartially discussed and fully considered the Constitution for the United States of America, reported to Congress by the Convention of Delegates from the United States of America, and submitted to us by a Resolution of the General Court of said State, passed the fourteenth day of December, last past; and acknowledging with grateful hearts the goodness of the Supreme Ruler of the Universe, in affording the People of the United States, in the course of His providence, an opportunity deliberately and peaceably, without fraud or surprise, of entering into an explicit and solemn compact with each other, by assenting to and ratifying a new Constitution, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, ensure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defence, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of Liberty to themselves and their posterity—do, in the name and in behalf of the people of the State of New-Hampshire, assent to and ratify the said Constitution for the United States of America.

Resolved, That the assent and ratification aforesaid be engrossed on parchment, together with the recommendation and injunction aforesaid, and with this Resolution; and that John Sullivan, Esq., President of the Convention, and John Langdon, Esq., President of the State, transmit the same, countersigned by the Secretary of Convention and the Secretary of the State, under their hands and seals, to the United States in Congress assembled.

John Calfe, Secretary.

The adoption and ratification of the Constitution was the occasion of great joy to all the friends of union throughout the country. It was announced to Gov. John Hancock, of Massachusetts, in a letter, by President Sullivan, as follows:

Concord, June 21, 1788.

Sir: I have the honor to inform your Excellency, by favour of Mr. Reed, who is obliging enough to forward this letter, that the Convention of this State have this moment adopted the New Constitution — yeas, 57; nays, 46, [47.] The amendments recommended, nearly the same as in your State.

With every sentiment of respectful attachment,

I have the honor to be

Your Excellency’s

Most obedient servant,

John Sullivan.

In the "Salem Mercury" of the 24th of June the event was thus announced:

"THE NINTH PILLAR UP!

Laus Deo!"

On the arrival of the news at Salem a procession was immediately formed of the military, the clergy, physicians, merchants, seamen, mechanics, and school-masters with their schools. Salutes were fired in the evening; the front of the court-house was illuminated, and an emblematical painting exhibited, representing Justice, Peace and Liberty, (Fame over the whole sounding her trumpet,) on an arch supported by nine columns — four others lying in the back ground, ready to be introduced into the vacancies left for them. Under the whole were the words,

"FEDERAL CONSTITUTION."

In Portsmouth the celebration of the glorious event was grand and imposing. After the people of that and the neighboring towns had assembled on the parade, about eleven o’clock, of the 27th, "an armed ship was espied from the State House, bearing down under full sail. Being hailed on her approach, she proved to be the ship Union, Thomas Manning, Esq., commander, from Concord, out five days, bound to the Federal City, all well and in good spirits. About a quarter past eleven she dropped anchor, and, having received a pilot on board, got under way and joined the procession."

*Salem Mercury, June 24, 1788.  †See Salem Mercury, July 1, 1788.
The procession was composed of all classes of citizens, with appropriate banners. Among them were the scholars of the schools, with the insignia of their studies; a terrestrial globe, rectified for New-Hampshire, and decorated by young ladies, was carried by two lads in uniform. In the decorations each State was distinguished—New-Hampshire in the zenith, and Rhode-Island in the western horizon, in mourning!

"Where the bright beams of Fed‘ral freedom glow,
The buds of science in full beauty blow."

There is a current tradition that Col. Timothy Walker, who was zealous for the adoption of the Constitution, apprehending that the vote would be a close one, invited certain members of the convention who were opposed to its adoption to dine with him on the day that the question was to be taken; and that he treated them with such liberal entertainment and good cheer, that the vote was taken and decided in the affirmative before they made their appearance in the house.

The Rev. Israel Evans, who had been a chaplain in the army under General Washington, had been employed to preach in Concord as a candidate for settlement; and on the 1st of September, 1788, received a call to settle, with the offer of ninety pounds as a salary annually, "during his performing the work of the ministry in this town," together with the use of the parsonage, and two hundred pounds, (in materials for building a house,) as a settlement. Capt. Reuben Kimball and Capt. Benj. Emery, Mr. Robert Harris, Mr. Henry Martyn and Mr. John Kimball, were appointed a committee "to estimate the pieces of materials that shall be provided for building a house."

At a subsequent meeting it was voted to give Mr. Evans "fifteen pounds annually, in addition to the ninety pounds in lieu of the settlement," to which Lt. John Chandler and Lt. Robert Ambrose entered their dissent.

The terms of the call were in some respects unsatisfactory to Mr. Evans; but, March 17, 1789, he made answer in the affir-
A committee was appointed to "superintend the ordination of Mr. Evans, and to provide entertainment for the ministers and delegates who shall attend;" and it was also voted, "That the town concur with the church in appointing the first Wednesday in July, 1789, as the time for the ordination services."

In 1789 an act was passed "to authorize and empower the proprietors of Rumford, alias Concord, to collect a certain tax." This was in answer to a petition by Thomas Stickney, setting forth, that in settling the controversy between the proprietors of Rumford and of Bow, "in 1771, they came to an agreement, which was that the proprietors of Rumford should have the whole of said township, except one hundred and sixty-two acres of land, which was to be laid out by them in some part of the town; and the proprietors of Rumford were to pay ten pounds to said proprietors of Bow, for each hundred acre lot which was laid out by said Bow in said Rumford;" that thereupon Thomas Stickney, Andrew McMillan, Esq., and Abiel Chandler (since deceased) were appointed a committee by the proprietors of Rumford, "to receive a quitclaim deed from the proprietors of Bow, and give them a bond, upon interest, for the ten pounds for each hundred acre lot." Moreover, "that the proprietors of Rumford, in 1773, voted to raise the sum of £600 by assessment on the several divisions and the common rights in said township of Rumford," which was supposed to be sufficient to pay the proprietors of Bow, and to give £60 to the Masonian proprietors for their pretended right to part of said land."

The above assessment not being all collected, Timothy Walker was appointed and empowered to collect the remainder of said assessment, in order to discharge fully the said bond.

SCHOOL LOT — TOWN HOUSE.

In 1790 the building erected in 1775 on the hill back of Capt. Emery's, for a "pest-house," was removed into the town street, for a school-house, and located near the present hay-scales, at the head of the street. The lot,† belonging to the school right, originally laid out on the south side of the road that runs west-erly by Richard Bradley's, was exchanged by the town for a lot adjoining the burying-ground, owned by Lieut. Robert Davis, containing one acre and one hundred and twenty-eight rods. There was no legal conveyance of the lot thus exchanged at the time; but in 1842 the burying-ground was extended so as to embrace the aforesaid premises; at which time Gen. Robert Davis, having inherited the land, by will of his grandfather, gave a deed of it to the town. Lt. Robert Davis, who deceased in August, 1823, was buried in this field, and his grave was enclosed with a chain fence, which stood alone till 1842.

On the 30th of August this year the town voted to raise "one hundred pounds for building a house for the accommodation of the General Court; and that the house be set on the land of Mr. William Stickney, near Dea. David Hall's." Capt. Reuben Kimball was appointed agent to build the house. The dimensions were eighty feet long, forty feet wide, and fifteen feet post.

This action of the town was preceded by a subscription of $555,00 for the same object. The following is the copy of the original:

CONCORD, June 21, 1790.

We, the subscribers, being desirous of accommodating the General Court with a convenient house, and in order to encourage the same, do hereby engage to pay the several sums annexed to our names in labour or materials for building, provided said house is set near Mr. William Stickney's dwelling-house, in Concord.

*In the warrant for the annual town meeting, 1786, was an article to see if the town will exchange the house-lot belonging to the school right, with Lt. Robert Davis.

On this article the selectmen were appointed a committee, who, in 1790, reported as follows:

In exchange of the school-lot with Lt. Robert Davis, we have the following piece, adjoining the burying-yard, bounded as follows, viz.: Beginning at a stake and stones; at the southwest corner of the burying-yard, running west seventeen degrees south, by Capt. Benjamin Emery's land, twelve rods, to a stake and stones; thence north, twenty degrees west, twenty-four rods, to a stake and stones; thence east, nineteen degrees north, twelve rods, to a stake and stones; it being a bound of James Walker's land; thence by said Walker's land and burying-yard, twenty-four rods, to the bound first mentioned, containing one acre and one hundred and twenty-eight rods.
THE TOWN HOUSE.

The house was built as soon as practicable, and called the Town House. Originally it was one story; stood lengthwise to Main street, and had a door in the middle, with a spacious entry. The interior contained two rooms — one for the House of Representatives, on the north side, and the other for the Senate, on the south — with several small committee rooms on the back side. A stair-way led to a small gallery for spectators. In the centre of the building outside was a cupola, or dome, surmounted by a vane, which was invented by the mechanical genius of Mr. Ephraim Potter, and hence received the name of "old Potter." The land on which the building was erected was given for the purpose by Mr. William Stickney, on condition that if the town shall neglect or refuse to keep a public building on the premises for the space of three years, it should revert to him or his heirs.*

When this building was raised, Benjamin Rolfe, brother of Nathaniel, and father of Mr. Benjamin Rolfe, now living on State Street, had a finger caught in a mortice, in putting on the south plate, and so badly jammed that it was necessary to amputate it. Dr. Carrigain — celebrated for surgical operations — was immediately called, and directed Mr. Rolfe to lay his finger on a block. With a chisel and mallet the doctor cut the finger square off at a single blow; but the stump was a sore trouble to Mr. Rolfe as long as he lived, for the end of the bone was always visible, and in cold weather the flesh about it would recede from the bone and crack.

* See original Deed. A quitclaim Deed of the same land was given to the city in 1854, by Nathan Stickney, Esq., for the erection of a City Hall and County Court House.
The town meetings, which heretofore had been held at the meeting-house, were henceforth held at the town-house. The place was honored by the sittings of the General Court, whenever its sessions were held in Concord, until the completion of the State House in 1819. The building has since undergone many mutations, modifications and enlargements — answering all possible purposes — civil, political, religious, military, judicial, and fanatical; a sort of "Noah's ark," in which have been collected all things, clean and unclean, and the history of which would be well worthy of the pen of "Punch," or "Mrs. Partington," or Jack Downing!

In March, 1791, the town voted that the intermission for the future on the Sabbath — which had been one hour the year round — should be one hour and a half, from the first Sabbath in May till the first Sabbath in November following.

WARNING OUT OF TOWN.

According to a law of the State, persons who came into town without property, and who, on that account, were liable to become a town charge, might be warned to depart. This being done lawfully, such persons could not obtain "a residence," and hence not come upon the town for support.*

CONVENTION TO REVISE THE STATE CONSTITUTION.

On the 7th of September, this year, (1791,) a convention was held in Concord to revise the Constitution of the State, adopted in October, 1783. The convention was held at the meeting-house.

* STATE OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE, } ROCKINGHAM SS. }
  Concord, Oct. 29, 1791.

By virtue of this Warrant I have warned the said McGlafling, and Betty, his wife, Archabald McGlafling, and Mary Abot, immediately to depart out of this Town, who all came into this town, last from London, in May, A.D. 1791, having no estate. Also the said James Delap, and Lydia, his wife, and Richard Delap and Mical Delap, sons of said Delap; also, Martha Elms, who all came into this Town, last from Boscawen, Dec'r, 1790, having no estate. Also, the said Polley Car, who came into this Town, last from Bow, July, 1791, having no estate. Also, Hannah Sleeper, a Minor, who came into this Town, last from London, March, 1791, having no estate. Also, Joseph Hutchins and Jerusha, his wife; also Hannah Hutchins, their daughter, who all came into this town, last from London, March, 1791, having no estate. I have warned all the above mentioned persons immediately to depart out of, and leave this Town.

JOHN BRADLEY, Constable of Concord.
Hon. Timothy Walker was delegate for Concord. The whole number of delegates in attendance was one hundred and eight, of whom eighty were present the first day of the session. The last survivor of this convention was Ex-Governor William Plumer, of Epping, who deceased while the convention of 1850, of which his son William was a member, was in session in Concord, to revise the very Constitution which the convention of 1792 amended and so far perfected that it continued unaltered through a period of sixty years.

Hon. Timothy Walker was chosen chairman of the convention, and sworn; John Calfe, Esq., was elected Secretary, by ballot, and sworn; then the Hon. Samuel Livermore, ofHolderness, was chosen President.

"Rev. Israel Evans was requested to attend and officiate as chaplain to the convention, during their present session." For the important proceedings of this convention, reference must be had to their Journal.* Before their work was completed four sessions were held, all in Concord, occupying thirty-six days. The first session was from September 7, to September 16, 1791. The second, from February 8, 1792, to February 24. The third, from May 30, to June 5. The fourth, from September 5, to September 6. This constitution, as amended and approved by the people, was established, and went into full operation in June, 1793. By this constitution the title of "President" for the chief executive magistrate was changed to Governor.

At a meeting August 4, this year, a committee of five, viz: Messrs. Thomas Wilson, Henry Martin, Capt. Joshua Abbot, Capt. Jonathan Eastman, and Lieut. Joseph Hazeltine, was appointed, "to wait on the Rev. Israel Evans, and inquire of him what the reasons are for his (of late) discovering an uneasiness with the town about the payment of his salary, or any other matter, and receive his answer in writing; and for the town to act thereon in such manner as they may think proper." Mr. Evans had made a written communication and submitted to the town certain propositions, which were acted on September 22. "Voted, That the Selectmen pay the whole that is due to the Rev. Israel Evans immediately, or give said Evans a note upon interest till paid. Voted, To accept of the second proposition of the Rev. Mr. Evans, viz: the money appropriated to the use of the pulpit shall not in future be applied directly or indirectly to any other use. Voted, To accept of the third proposition of the Rev. Mr. Evans, viz: the collectors themselves shall pay to him, as often as can be done conveniently, all the money they collect for the use of the pulpit, and if possible within the year for which the money aforesaid was assessed.*

In the warrant for a town meeting 8th December, this year, was an article “To see what encouragement the town will give for the raising of their quota of minute men;” and it was Voted, “To give, in addition to the continental pay for this town’s quota of minute men, so much as shall make each one’s pay eight dollars per month; and one month’s pay be advanced to each man when they shall be called to march.”

The occasion for raising these minute men is not stated; but at this time the “Pennsylvania Rebellion,” as it was called, was in progress, and the Indians in the western country were in a state of open hostility. It does not appear that the minute men from Concord were ever called for. The “rebellion” was suppressed by Gen. Lee, who by order of Gen. Washington marched into Pennsylvania at the head of fifteen thousand men; and the Indians were conquered by Gen. Wayne, in a well fought battle, August 20, 1794.

In 1785, when news of the birth of the Dauphin of France, Louis XVII.,† reached this country, the people of Concord, at a public gathering, undertook to celebrate the event—France

* August 25 it was Voted, “To vacate the collector’s berth; and the same was struck off to Mr. Paul Rolfe for eight dollars, and he was then chosen a collector to collect the same.”

having been the ally of America in the struggle for independence. The powder, which was purchased with the £100 that Oliver Hoit paid for the school lot on Horse Hill, had not all been used, and for safe keeping had been stored away aloft in the new steeple of the meeting-house. On this occasion, therefore, the powder was called forth, and a grand salute fired in honor of France and the new born dauphin. Hence, afterwards, whenever anything was said in town meetings about selling the public lands, Capt. Benjamin Emery would be sure to oppose it, saying, "Soon it will all go like powder, as the money for Oliver Hoit's school lot went."

The first number of the Concord Herald was issued January 6, 1790, on a sheet fourteen by nine inches, bearing the following title and motto: "The Concord Herald and New-Hampshire Intelligencer. The Press is the Cradle of Science, the Nurse of Genius, and the Shield of Liberty. Printed at Concord, (New-Hampshire,) by George Hough."

On the 7th of December the Herald announced, "No Boston post is arrived; all news we believe is frozen up by the cold weather; we have not even a report with which we can serve up a paragraph for our news-hungry customers."

At this period newspapers and letters were carried through the country by persons who rode on horse-back, called "post-riders." In 1790 Samuel Bean was post-rider from Boston to Concord. His route was through Andover, Haverhill, Atkinson, Kingston, Exeter, Epping, Nottingham, Deerfield, and Pembroke to Concord: returning he passed through Londonderry and Haverhill. He performed the route once a week. John Lathrop was post-rider from Concord through Boscawen and intermediate towns to Hanover; thence up the Connecticut river road as far as Haverhill—returning by way of Plymouth and New-Chester (now Hill.) In the fall of 1791 Lathrop called on subscribers to his papers "to pay up" by the beginning of the next year, saying he will ever be willing to gratify his customers with a reasonable pay-day, but when "the earth yields her increase" in abundance, he views it as a "happy presage" of punctuality among those who have kindly become his debtors. "Cash, wheat, rye, or flax will be received; and for the convenience of every one he has appointed the following places at which the pay may be delivered."

But as the "pay" was not forth coming at the places of deposit, Lathrop notified his customers that "delays are dangerous;" "money, we all know, is always scarce. But, when a grain debt is not paid in the season of it, the creditor says money. That will be disagreeable to the debtor, and the post, while produce is plenty, puts off the harsh expression."

In 1791 four routes were established, by resolve of the Legislature, in New-Hampshire, and one person appointed in each of the following towns, viz: Portsmouth, Exeter, Concord, Amherst, Dover, Keene, Charlestown, Hanover, Haverhill and Plymouth, to take charge of all matters which are conveyed by the posts; to receive as a compensation, two pence, to be advanced on the postage of every private letter which shall pass through the respective offices. Postage on all private single letters six pence for every forty miles, and four pence for every number of miles less than forty. Two of these routes proceeded from Concord, and took in the principal towns west from Concord to Keene, and north from Concord to Haverhill. Mr. George Hough was appointed first post-master in Concord.

March 30, 1791. As an instance of the extraordinary industry of the women of our country, the Herald of March 30 mentioned "that an old lady of this town, who is upwards of seventy years of age, has, in the course of ten months past, spun two hundred and ten runs and three quarters of yarn of different kinds."

"CLOTHES MAKE MEN."

David George, tailor, advertises (March 31, 1791,) that "his price for making a genteel suit of superfine broadcloth is three dollars; for making an ordinary suit of coarse cloth, two dollars."

The first number of "The Mirror" was published in Concord October 29, 1792," "by Elijah Russell, at his office near Mr.

Hannaforcl's tavern, in Concord, N. H. It was printed on a sheet fourteen inches long, eight wide, coarse paper, "price five shillings per annum. One shilling only to be paid yearly in money, on receiving the first paper of every year, and the remainder in country produce, at the market cash price, any time in the course of the year. Of those who cannot pay one shilling in cash, produce will be received for the whole at the end of the year."

"We are informed," says the Mirror of November 19, 1792, "that a number of wealthy gentlemen of respectability have it in contemplation to erect a bridge over Merrimack river, near Mr. Butters' ferry. Our informant says they are to meet this day at Mr. Butters' inn, to consult on the expediency of the measure. We wish them success."

"On Saturday last," (December 8, 1792,) says the Mirror, "that contagious and fatal disease, the small-pox, was discovered in the family of Mr. Daniel Hall. Mr. Hall broke out with it himself, and on Sunday was removed to a proper house and provided with good nurses. His physician reports that he is at present in a very favorable way."

"Last Saturday, sen'night, a child in the house of Lieut. Stickney, dec., died of the small-pox,* and Lieut. Jonathan Stickney died of the small-pox, on Sunday evening, November 18th." Through fear of spreading the infection, Mr. Stickney was buried in a secluded spot, on his own farm, on the north-east side of Stickney's Hill, so called.

In the "Mirror" of January 21, 1793, appeared the following notice:

"TO THE LOVERS OF HARMONY.

"Whereas, a great number of inhabitants, desirous to promote the art and practice of sacred music in this town, have subscribed to pay an able teacher of psalmody, (Mr. McFarland,) Therefore, all persons willing to improve the advantage of a free singing school are requested to leave their names, before the first of February next, with either person of the following

"THE SCHOOL.

"On Thursday last Master Eastman* closed his school, in the Main street, in this town, with an exhibition of various scenes of entertainment, in which each of his pupils, about eighty in number, participated. They performed their various exercises to the general satisfaction of their parents, and the honor of their ingenious preceptor and themselves—by which they gained the applause of a very crowded and respectable audience, which was expressed by frequent clapping of hands and smiles of approbation."—Mirror, April 1, 1793.

"Last week we experienced a severe frost, which destroyed most of the young apples, &c., and killed the flax, so that people have generally sowed their ground a second time. A severe drought prevails. It is now three weeks since we have had rain enough to lay the dust in the streets."—Mirror, May 27, 1793.

"Concord, July 22, 1793. On Tuesday last a tempest arose in this town, accompanied with very heavy thunder and considerable rain. About three miles north of the meeting-house it hailed; the hail-stones were some of them nearly as large as ounce balls. It leveled most of the corn, rye, oats, &c., for a considerable width and distance, its course being from north-west to south-east. One half of the roof of a house, belonging to Lieut. Phinehas Kimball, was taken off by the wind, carried a considerable distance, and dashed to pieces. The chimney was leveled with the chamber floor. There were two women in the house, who happily escaped with only being severely frightened."

"NEW LINE OF STAGES.

expeditious than heretofore. We understand that this stage will commence running early in September next."—Mirror, August 12, 1798.

In July, 1792, there was not a book-binder in the State of New-Hampshire.

In 1788 Timothy Walker, Esq., was a candidate for Representative in Congress, and received in this town thirty-nine votes. In 1791 he was a candidate for President of New-Hampshire, and received sixty votes; in 1792, he received seventy-seven votes for President, and his Excellency Josiah Bartlett received ninety. The same year Mr. Walker had one hundred and eight votes in Concord for Representative to Congress, and twenty-nine votes for Elector of President and Vice President of the United States. In 1793 (after the adoption of the revised constitution,) Mr. Walker had ninety-three votes for Governor, and in 1794 he had one hundred and five votes. He was the democratic candidate, in opposition to John T. Gilman, Esq., who was elected.

CHAPTER XI.

HISTORY OF CONCORD FROM 1795 TO 1805.

In March, 1795, three collectors were appointed, one for each section of the town, viz.: south, west and east. Hanes Farnum agreed to collect for $3\frac{3}{4}d.$, John Batchelder, jr., $4\frac{1}{2}d.$, and Ebenezer Eastman, for $4\frac{1}{2}d$. In 1796 forty dollars were appropriated to fence the burying ground, and to purchase a pall; and Capt. Reuben Kimball was appointed agent to finish the Town House. The Singing Society, formed about this time, was allowed the use of the Town House to sing in—provided "they leave the house in as good repair as it is when they go into the house." In 1797, £150 were raised to supply the school—the largest sum ever raised for that purpose.

RESIGNATION OF REV. MR. EVANS.

April 21, 1797, Rev. Mr. Evans in a written communication signified "his intention of resigning to the town their pulpit, and of finishing his work of the ministry in this place, on the first of July next." The resignation of Mr. Evans was accepted, and he was regularly dismissed, July 5th, by an Ecclesiastical Council, composed of the "Elders and Delegates of the neighboring churches, viz., Gilmanton, Sanbornton, Atkinson, Amherst, Canterbury, Loudon and Pembroke. In their result, after recapitulating the facts in the case, the council voted, unanimously, "that in the opinion of the council it is expedient that the pastoral relations between Mr. Evans and the church and people in this place, should be dissolved, and accordingly it is dissolved. As no charges have been exhibited against the ministerial or Christian character of Mr. Evans, we recommend him to the churches, and to the work of the ministry, wherever God in his providence may open a door, and wish him divine assistance and success."

After his dismissal Rev. Mr. Evans continued to reside in town—living in the house which he owned, where the Hon. Samuel Morrill now lives—until his death, March 9, 1807, in the sixtieth year of his age.*

Soon after the dismissal of Rev. Mr. Evans, Mr. Asa McFarland, who had become favorably known to the people of Concord as a teacher of music, and who had been two years a tutor in Dartmouth College, was employed to preach as a candidate. On the 28th of December the town voted "to give Mr. Asa McFarland a call to settle in the ministry in this town;" "to give him three hundred and fifty dollars salary yearly, and the use of all the improved land belonging to the parsonage right, and liberty to cut wood and timber on the out lands, as much as he may want for his own use during his carrying on the work of the ministry in this town." Jacob Abbot, Esq., Capt. Joshua Abbot, Timothy Walker, Esq., Capt. Jonathan Eastman, and John Bradley, Esq., were appointed a committee to wait on Mr. McFarland with the votes.

The call from the church, which preceded that from the town, was unanimous: but to the latter the following persons entered their dissent to Mr. McFarland's salary, January 4, 1798, viz.: Jeremiah Wheeler, Asa Graham, Robert Ambrose, Jonathan Ambrose, Oliver Flanders, Philbrick Bradley, John Hoit, John Hoit, jr., Jacob Hoit, Chandler Lovejoy, John Lovejoy, Ebenezer Lovejoy, Samuel Goodwin, Edward Philbrick, John Dimond, Reuben Dimond, Jonathan Virgin, Moses Gale, Timothy Bradley, Stilson Eastman, Eliphalet Tucker, Joseph Eastman.

Most of the above named individuals afterwards became not only the supporters of Rev. Mr. McFarland, by paying their annual tax for his salary, but also were personal friends, and some of them members of his church.

* See Result of Council, Town Records, 1797, p. 229, and Biographical Notice of Rev. Mr. Evans.
ORDINATION OF DR. MCFARLAND.

Mr. McFarland gave an affirmative answer to the call, and was ordained March 7, 1798.* A committee of five was appointed to superintend the services, viz.: Capt. Richard Ayer, James Walker, Jonathan Eastman, Jacob Carter and John Batchelder—"with power to make provision for the Council and Delegates that may attend—at the expense of the town."

The ordination of Mr. McFarland was an occasion of great interest. Tradition assures us that people came together from neighboring towns, at the distance of twenty miles and more; that near and around the meeting-house were stands, for the sale of refreshments, and among other necessary articles, spirituous liquors. The procession of the ordaining council, from the town-house to the meeting-house, was attended by a band of music; and, to crown the solemnity of the occasion, there was a splendid ball in the evening, at Stickney's celebrated tavern!†

Just before the settlement of Mr. McFarland the town voted, "that those persons who drive sleighs on Sunday be desired to keep on the east side of the street." At this period there were no side-walks, and travelling on foot was especially inconvenient in the winter.

It was Dr. McFarland's custom, during the greater part of his

* To the Church and People of Concord.

Brethren—As I have received your invitation to settle among you as your minister, it is expedient that I should make known to you the result of my deliberations on that important subject. You are sensible that this is a subject of magnitude, both as it respects you, and as it respects myself. It is a subject which involves the interest of religion, so far as the influence of this transaction shall extend. It is, then, a subject which requires a sober and prayerful deliberation. It would be unnecessary for me to relate to you the anxiety with which my mind has labored, in view of my own inability, and the weight of that object which your invitation involves: and it has been my prayer to God, that he would direct me to those things which will be for the interest of religion. After deliberating respecting the importance of the object, and my own duty, I have thought fit to comply with your invitation, and do therefore comply with it—Praying that God would crown these, our determinations, with his blessing—that he would make me an instrument to promote your spiritual happiness—that he would build us up in faith and love, and finally present us faultless before his throne with exceeding joy, to whom he glory forever, Amen.

Asa McFarland.
Concord, January 27, 1798.

The Churches invited to form the ordaining Council were "that at Dartmouth College, Sanbornton, Gilmanton, Loudon, Canterbury, Chichester, Pembroke, Atkinson, Chester and Hopkinton." The clergymen who officiated were Rev. Stephen Peabody, of Atkinson; Rev. John Smith, of Dartmouth College, who preached the sermon; Rev. Joseph Woodman, of Sanbornton; Rev. Zaccheus Colby, of Pembroke; Rev. Frederick Parker, of Canterbury; Rev. Jedediah Tucker, of Loudon, and Rev. Josiah Carpenter, of Chichester.

ministry, the first sleighing each year, to give notice of the rule here introduced, from the pulpit, in these words: “Persons who drive sleighs will please keep to the right, and let those who are afoot have the middle of the road.” It is related of Capt. Richard Ayer, who was a powerful and fearless man, six feet or more, that being annoyed by loaded sleighs, from other towns, which would not turn out for people going to meeting, he armed himself with a heavy staff, or club, and followed in the steps of a number of women walking in the middle of the road to meeting. They were met by a loaded sleigh with two horses, and compelled to turn out into the snow. When the horses came up to Capt. Ayer he lifted his club and told the driver to turn out. Not heeding the warning, Capt. Ayer struck one of the horses on his forelegs and brought him down on his knees. “There,” said he, “turn out when you meet people on their way to meeting, or I will knock you down.” The custom thus became established of giving foot-travelers the middle of the road, and for many years they enjoyed the privilege unmolested.

THE “OXFORD WAR.”

In the threatened war with France, during the administration of President John Adams, the people of Concord had another opportunity to evince their patriotism. In the warrant for a town meeting, December 28, 1797, was an article to see “what measures the town will take to raise their quota of the eighty thousand men required by Congress.” On this article, Voted, “That the men that enlist shall have ten dollars, with what the Congress give; and if called into service to have one month’s pay in advance.” Also it was Voted, “That the selectmen give those persons that enlist a handsome treat at the expense of the town.”

According to tradition, a few only from Concord entered the service. A company, however, was formed, composed of men from this and neighboring towns, of which Nathaniel Green, of Boscawen, was Captain; Moses Sweat, of Concord, 1st Lieutenant; Israel W. Kelly,* of Salisbury, 2d Lieutenant; and Benjamin Gale, of Concord, Commissary.

This company had their rendezvous a short time at “Mother Osgood's" tavern. They were to march for Oxford, in Massachusetts, and there await orders for further service. Hence, it was called the "Oxford War." Previous to marching, it was found that a pair of saddle-bags, containing valuable jewelry, belonging to a traveler, had been stolen from Mr. Gale's tavern; and that Dr. Thorndike's apothecary shop had been broken open, and ten dollars stolen from that. When the soldiers were paraded, ready to march, Mr. comissary Gale said to Captain Green: "I have reason to believe that some of the soldiers have stolen goods, and request that they may be searched." All laid down their sacks, and the stolen property was found in possession of a soldier from Salisbury. Thus detected, the fellow fell on his knees, with hat in hand, made a humble confession to the Captain, to Dr. Thorndike, Mr. Gale, and to all the soldiers; and humbly begged for mercy! On this, he was permitted to go without punishment.*

SCHOOL DISTRICTS IN 1800.

In the warrant for a town-meeting, March 4th, this year, were articles "to see if the town will choose a committee to district the town into school-districts;" "if the town will raise money to build school-houses in said districts;" and "will authorize the committee to appraise school-houses already built which may answer for district-houses, and allow each person, being a proprietor, his dividend of the money, according to the shares he owns in said house." Also, "to see if the town will choose a number of persons to pursue thieves that may hereafter steal any property from any of the inhabitants of the town, and their expense to be at the town cost." This article does not appear to have been acted on, but the Selectmen were appointed a committee to district the town into school-districts, together "with one man from each district where there is a school-house." Jacob Carter, Isaac Dimond, Samuel Davis, Timothy Dow, Enoch Brown, and Joseph Potter, were added.*

A BELL.

March 31st, Voted, "To accept of a bell if one can be obtained by subscription, and cause the same to be rung at such times as the town may think proper." Also, "That the selectmen repair the town-house, at the expense of the town, not to exceed ten dollars." This was done in order to "make conveniences or accommodations for the General Court in their next session, which is to be held in this town." About this time a clock, constructed by the late Maj. Timothy Chandler, was put up on the south side of the Town Hall, the old face of which remaineth to this day.

ENLARGING THE MEETING-HOUSE.

December 31, 1800, Capt. Richard Ayer and others offered to make an addition to the meeting-house, according to a plan exhibited before the town by a committee of which Jacob Abbot, Esq., was chairman, being a semi-circle, projecting thirty feet in front of the house, and divided into seven angles, "and that the owners of the pews in front of the house below have their choice to remain where they are, or go back to the wall the same distance from the front door; and that the present wall pews be placed on a level with the other body pews: — that the owners of wall pews in the front of the gallery have as good wall pews in the front of the addition.” Capt. Ayer and others gave bonds for the faithful execution of the work, which was completed the following year. At the annual meeting, March 1, 1803, a committee, appointed to inspect the building and finishing the addition to the meeting-house, reported that "it appears to us that the materials made use of for each and every part was suitable and of good quality, and that the work is done in a handsome and workmanlike manner.” Whereupon, Voted, “That the meeting-house be accepted, and the undertakers have their bond given up to them by the committee.” This addition made the meeting-house the most spacious and commodious in the State. It would seat eight hundred persons on the floor and about four hundred in the gallery. For many years the congregation that worshipped in it on the Sabbath averaged about seven hundred. One hundred dollars were added to Mr. McFarland’s salary.*

About this time a petition was presented to annex a part of Bow to Concord: whereupon, March 22, 1803, Voted, “That the town will oppose the prayer of the petition of the selectmen of Bow, to set off a part of said Bow to this town,— now in the General Court.”

In March, 1804, the town voted, “to purchase one acre of land of David Carter for a burying-ground, (near Horse-hill bridge,) and fence the same for that purpose.” Agreeably to a law of the State, the annual town-meeting was fixed on the second Tuesday in March. The selectmen were directed “to straiten the road from the meeting-house to Boscawen line.” The old road to Boscawen was exceedingly crooked. The late Mr. Richard Herbert said — “the old road passed up through the valley, south of Mr. Francis N. Fisk’s new house; between the elm tree and corner of Mr. Coffin’s house; run up by Esq. Bradley’s, then north to Woods’ brook. At West-Parish village it run up by Mr. Levi Hutchins’s; thence north-east by where Mr. Alfred

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS AND ANECDOTES RELATIVE TO THE PERIOD FROM 1795 TO 1805.

CONCORD BRIDGE.

In January, 1795, in answer to a petition, the Legislature of New-Hampshire granted to Peter Green and others the exclusive right to build and support a bridge over Merrimack river, between Butters’s ferry, so called, and Concord south line, and prescribed the rates of toll they should take to reimburse them for the money expended in building and supporting said bridge.†

Pursuant to the provisions of the charter, a meeting was called and held at Mr. Samuel Butters’s inn, on the 23d of February, 1795; at which meeting Samuel Green was chosen clerk, who, at an adjourned meeting, held on the 9th day of March, next following, resigned, and Paul Rolfe was chosen. Capt. Reuben Kimball, Maj. Enoch Gerrish and Capt. David Kimball were chosen directors or overseers.‡

The bridge was originally built with a double track; the piers and abutments were of wood; the estimated cost was $10,000, but the actual cost was over $13,000. It was completed and opened for travel October 29, 1795. The occasion seems to have been one of great interest. A procession was formed, which marched across the bridge in the following order:

1. The building committee.
2. The treasurer and clerk.
3. The Rev. Israel Evans, with Mr. Wood and Mr. Parker, ministers of Boscawen and Canterbury.
4. The proprietors.
5. The workmen, with the master-workmen, [a Mr. Poor,] at their head.
6. The spectators in regular order.

Capt. David Davis was invited by the directors to assist Maj. William Duncan with music, and a guard of four men, and to dine with the proprietors. The dinner was at William Stickney's tavern. "After spending the day in conviviality and mirth, by passing the bridge," &c., the services closed. So saith the records.

FEDERAL BRIDGE.

On the 28th of December, 1795, an act was passed by the Legislature, incorporating Timothy Walker, Benjamin Emery, William Partridge, Jonathan Eastman, Joshua Thompson, and others, their associates, "for the purpose of building a bridge over the river Merrimack, at or near a place called Tucker's Ferry, in Concord." The corporation was known by the name of "Proprietors of Federal Bridge." They were required by the charter to complete the bridge in three years, and to pay the

These conditions were complied with.* The first meeting of the proprietors was held at the house of Ebenezer Eastman, inn-holder, in Concord, January 18, 1796, at which Capt. Benjamin Emery was chosen moderator, and Stephen Ambrose clerk.†

The rates of toll established at first by law, for passing over Federal Bridge were as follows: "For each foot passenger, one cent; for each horse and rider, three cents; for each horse and chaise, chair, sulky, or other riding carriage, drawn by one horse only, ten cents; for each riding sleigh, drawn by one horse, four cents; for each riding sleigh, drawn by more than one horse, six cents; for each coach, chariot, phaeton, or other four-wheeled carriage for passengers, drawn by more than one horse, twenty cents; for each curricile, twelve cents; for each cart or other carriage of burthen, drawn by two beasts, ten cents, and three cents for every additional beast; for each horse or neat creature,

* Eliphalet Tucker conveyed his right and title to "Tucker's Ferry," to the Proprietors of Federal Bridge, July 18, 1788, in consideration of $450. See Proprietors' Records and Deed in Register's office, vol. 35, p. 397.

exclusive of those rode on or in carriages, two cents; for sheep and swine, one half cent each; and to each team one person shall be allowed as a driver to pass free of toll.” But, by a vote of the proprietors, August 1, 1798, all persons going to or returning from public worship, on Sundays, between the hours of nine o’clock in the morning, and five in the afternoon, were allowed to pass the bridge free from paying toll.*

This bridge was first built above its present location, crossing the river nearly opposite the house of Mr. George W. Moulton, where formerly was the toll-house.

On the 9th of August, 1796, Noah Richardson and a negro man named Pomp Chandler, were drowned near Concord Bridge, as they were attempting to cross the river in a canoe, to their labor.

In the first week of July, 1797, there were severe thunder storms, accompanied with hail, which did much damage to corn, grass, &c., and broke some glass in windows in this town and Canterbury. “The wind whirled furiously many a tree,” and “the lightning set Mr. Partridge’s barn on fire, which was immediately extinguished.”

December 7, 1798, an act was passed by the Legislature, incorporating Timothy Walker, John Bradley, Jonathan Eastman and their associates, by the name of “The Proprietors of Concord Library,” authorizing them to raise money by subscription, donations, &c., and to hold property for the benefit of the library, to the amount of one thousand dollars. A library of valuable books was collected, which was sustained and proved highly useful, for about twenty-five years.

On Saturday evening, January 20, 1798, about ten o’clock, the inhabitants of this town were alarmed with the cry of fire! fire! which broke out in the hatter’s shop of Mr. David George, Jr., contiguous to the store of Messrs. P. & O. Carrigain. The anxiety of the citizens, when so much property was exposed, was amazing; and by their assiduous exertions and regular procedure, together with the assistance of some ladies, they happily extinguished the destructive element, with little damage to any thing except the building. Let this, fellow-citizens, excite every one to diligence!

Query? Would it not be a good plan for every man to keep a good ladder, and one or two proper fire-buckets always ready?

—Mirror.

"The Blazing Star Lodge," in this town, was consecrated in ample form, by the Most Worshipful Nathaniel Adams, Grand Master, on Monday, May 6, 1799.

On the 2d of October, 1802, the grist-mill of Ensign Jacob Carter was entirely consumed by fire, together with the carding machine of Mr. Thomas Vesper. The loss is estimated at about $2000. The fire is supposed to have been caused by over-heating some of the gudgeons.

At this period, (1801–3,) letters were sent to the post-office in Concord for persons residing in Canterbury, Northfield, Nenniker, Warner, Hopkinton, Allenstown, New-London, Dunbarton, Rindge, Weare, Pembroke, Loudon, and Bow. Letters remaining in the post-office were advertised in 1801 for persons in Sanbornton, Sutton, Croydon, Newport, and New-Bradford.

CHAPTER XII.

FROM 1805 TO 1815.

By authority of the Legislature, PHILIP CARRIGAIN, Esq., of Concord, was at this time engaged in preparing a new map of the State. To aid in the work, surveys were ordered by towns. The survey of this town "was sold at public vendue," and bid off by Capt. Edmund Leavitt, for one hundred dollars. Capt. Leavitt lived on the east side of the river, possessed a good knowledge of surveying, and executed a handsome map of the town, copies of which are in the hands of Jonathan Eastman, Esq., and William Prescott, M. D.

John Bradley, Jonathan Wilkins and Ebenezer Dustin were appointed a committee, March 27th, to meet the committee of Boscawen in building and supporting a bridge across Contoocook river. The bridge was formerly considerably lower down the river than where it is now located. The committee reported in favor of supporting "one half of the bridge across Contoocook river at the old place;" which report the town accepted, and voted to raise two hundred and fifty dollars to carry the same into effect. Subsequently the bridge became a source of litigation between the towns.*

CONCORD BANK.

By an act of the Legislature, June 18, 1806, "Timothy Walker, Caleb Stark, John Bradley, John Mills, Robert Harris, Ebenezer Peasley, Richard Ayer, William Whittle, William A. Kent,

* See Document No. 2, for Chap. VIII.
Joshua Darling, Thomas W. Thompson, Aquila Davis, John Chandler, Baruch Chase, Joseph Towne and Joseph Clough, and their associates," were incorporated "by the name of the President, Directors and Company of the Concord Bank; for a period of twenty years, with a capital of not less than $50,000 nor more than $200,000, in specie."

In proceeding to organize for the transaction of business under their charter, special difficulties were encountered, growing chiefly, it is said, out of questions of location and management. Already there was a "north end" and a "south end" interest. In the former was Hon. Timothy Walker, and in the latter Col. William A. Kent, with whom, respectively, others took sides, according to their own ideas of interest. The result, however, was, two banks went into operation under the same charter, one called "The Upper Bank," and the other "The Lower Bank," each claiming exclusively to be the "Concord Bank." Of the Upper Bank, Timothy Walker was first president and Samuel Sparhawk, from Portsmouth, cashier. Of the Lower Bank, Joseph Towne, of Hopkinton, was president, and William A. Kent cashier. For several years a disagreeable competition existed between them. On the part of the upper bank a run was made upon the lower, for the payment in specie of their bills. By the lower bank, or by persons interested therein, suits were commenced against the other for issuing bills contrary to law; and hence a litigation as to which was the lawful Concord Bank, was continued for a considerable time. In 1808 one Nehemiah Jones commenced a suit against Timothy Walker, containing more than a hundred counts, which embraced all the questions at issue.* In these suits the late Jeremiah Mason was employed as Jones's counsel. Tradition says that, after a while, Mason, perceiving the difficulties of the subject, and disposed to adjust the matter between the parties, signified to his client "that as he had got into gentlemen's company he must expect to pay a gentleman's price." Soon after, the rival banks came to an agreement, at least so far as to cease from vexing one another; both obtained credit with the public, and continued to do business under one charter till the expiration of twenty years — then the upper bank obtained a new charter, and took the name of Merrimack County Bank. A new brick building was erected for its use, in 1826, on the house-lot owned by the corporation, where the bank has continued to flourish until the present time.

The lower bank obtained a modification and extension of its charter, in 1826; and continued to do business till 1840, when it failed, to the great loss of the stockholders and the detriment of the public.

Agreeably to a law of the State, passed in 1805, the town appointed a committee, April 8, 1807, consisting “of one from each school district where orders have been drawn for school money annually,” together with the selectmen, “to district the town into school districts.” The committee consisted of Eliphalet Emery, Richard Ayer, Paul Rolfe, John Garvin, Levi Abbot, Asa Herrick, Nathan Ballard, jr., Moses Abbot, Samuel Davis, William Eastman, Abel Baker, Nathaniel Rolfe, Stephen Farnum, John Eastman, Nathaniel Ambrose, Jonathan Virgin and Asa Kimball. The selectmen were Ebenezer Dustin, Enoch Coffin and Edmund Leavitt. The residence and number of members of this committee show that schools were at this time kept in at least sixteen places in town; and that the law of the State authorizing towns to lay out districts, only legalized what had already substantially been done. The local school districts, though not exactly defined and bounded, preceded the passage of the law. The committee above appointed chose Ebenezer Dustin, chairman, and John Odlin, clerk, and in May following laid out the town into sixteen school districts, as follows,* viz:

District No. 1. At Horse Hill, so called;
" " 2. The Borough, so called;
" " 3. West Village of Concord;
" " 4. West Parish, where Capt. Samuel Knowlton lives;
" " 5. West of Long Pond;
" " 6. At Little Pond, where Nathan Ballard lives;
" " 7. On Hopkinton road, three miles from Main street;
" " 8. At Millville, so called;
" " 9. South end of Main street;

* For the bounds of these districts, see Town Records, 1807, pp. 310–316.
District No. 10. Middle of Main street;
   " " 11. North end of Main street;
   " " 12. In the East Village, south part;
   " " 13. On the Mountain, so called;
   " " 14. At Snaptown, so called, north-east part of the town;
   " " 15. On Loudon road, where Hon. Jacob A. Potter lives;
   " " 16. At Garvin's Falls, so called.

The districts formed at subsequent periods are:

No. 17. By dividing district No. 8, on the line between Concord and Hopkinton.
   " 18. By dividing district No. 9.
   " 20. By dividing district No. 2, now in Fisherville.
   " 22. On the Dark Plain, so called, towards Chichester.
   " 23. Near the line between Concord and Bow, beyond Mr. James Hall's.

In thus districting the town, the selectmen "determined that the lands owned by persons residing without the limits of Concord shall be taxed in the several school districts, for school purposes."

In March, 1808, thirty dollars were ordered to be raised "to build, of wood, a pound; to be located near the meeting-house." This pound was at first located a few rods north of the meeting-house;—afterwards it was removed to Pond Hill, where it remained till about 1826.

The selectmen were authorised to purchase powder and ball, and other articles that the law requires, for a town stock.

To procure a bell for the meeting-house, it was determined "to sell the ground of two of the front seats on the floor of the meeting-house," which should be made into pews, and the money arising from said sale to be appropriated towards purchasing a bell, when a sufficient sum in addition shall be subscribed for the purpose.

The ground for the pews was sold at "public vendue," at the house of William Stickney, March 27th, and bid off as follows:

October 19th, the selectmen, by request, laid out for a road that part of State street, extending from Pleasant to School street, three rods in width; the land being given for the purpose by Benjamin Gale, George Hough, Thomas G. Stevens, Josiah Rogers and William A. Kent.

THE MEETING-HOUSE.

The meeting-house, which, as mentioned in the preceding chapter, was enlarged in 1802, received this year the addition of a bell—with the sound of which the people appeared to be so much pleased that they provided for ringing it three times a day. At the meeting in March it was voted, "that the bell be rung at seven o'clock in the morning, twelve at noon, and nine at night, except Sundays,—and the selectmen direct the time on Sundays;" "that the ringing of the bell and the care of the meeting-house be set up to the lowest bidder, and that the person bidding off the same give bonds to the selectmen for the faithful performance of the same;" "that twenty-five dollars be raised for ringing the bell, and paid to Sherburn Wiggin—it being bid off by him agreeable to the above vote."

SWINE.

Heretofore swine had had a lawless range in Concord: but this year they were not only to be "yoked and rung," but confined. Hence, Voted, "That for every swine found running at large at any season, in the Main street, between John Bradley's, Esq., and John Colby's, the owner be liable to the same penalty, and to be recovered in the same way, as for swine going at large unyoked and unrung in the season that the law requires them to be yoked and rung."

By request of William A. Kent, Samuel Green, Simeon G. Hall, Benjamin Gale, George Hough, Joshua Abbot, jr., and William Stickney, the selectmen, in September of this year, laid out that part of State street, from the corner where the house of the late James Buswell stands, to what is now called School street, to meet the portion of the street laid out the year previous. As a compensation for the land taken for this road, they awarded to the owners of the land as follows: "to James Buswell, six dollars; to Joshua Abbot, jr., fifty cents; to William Stickney, twenty-five cents; to Simeon G. Hall, twenty-five cents; to Timothy Abbot, thirty dollars; to William A. Kent, twenty-five cents; to Ebenezer Dustin, twenty-five cents; to Richard Ayer, twenty-five cents; to Abel Hutchins, twenty-five cents; to George Connell, ten dollars; and to Peter Robertson, twenty-five cents.

At the same time the selectmen laid out that part of what is now Washington street—two rods wide—from State to Main street.

Benjamin Emery, jr., bid off "the ringing of the bell, taking care of and sweeping the meeting house," at thirty-nine dollars.

The liberty of the swine was still further abridged. March 9th, Voted, "That no swine be allowed to run at large on the road from Concord bridge to Boscawen bridge, under a penalty to the owner of twenty-five cents for each offence."

STATE PRISON.

Before State street was made, the building of the State Prison was commenced. The land, consisting of about two acres, was given by the late Mr. Joshua Abbot. The location was thought to be quite out of the way of business and of population. The superintendant in the building was Stuart J. Park, Esq., who afterwards built the State House. The prison was built entirely of granite, quarried from Rattlesnake Hill. The part which now forms the south wing, originally constructed, was seventy feet in length, thirty-six wide, and walls three feet in thickness: in this the prisoners were confined. There were in all thirty-six cells, the dimensions of which were eight feet by nine, with the exception of six in the upper story, for the accommodation of the sick, &c., which were ten feet by seventeen. The yard was enclosed by a faced wall of granite, fourteen feet high, surrounded by a range of pickets ten feet in length. The first cost of the building to the State, with the appurtenances, was about thirty-seven thousand dollars. It was completed in 1812. The first person committed to the prison was John Drew, of Meredith, Strafford county. He was committed for horse-stealing, November 24, 1812, for five years! The prison has since been greatly enlarged and improved.

Extinction of Fires.

A committee, consisting of Thomas W. Thompson, Charles Walker and Samuel Green, Esqrs., was appointed, March 9th, to report at the next meeting a "by-law for the extinguishment of fires;" and one hundred dollars were voted to purchase "fire-hooks, and make the necessary repairs to the engine." This appears to have been the first step which the town took towards organizing an effective fire department. The committee, composed of able lawyers, drafted a by-law, which was approved and adopted by the town. It provided, (1,) for the appointment of a suitable number of fire-wards, who should have, for a distinguishing badge of their office, a staff, five feet long, painted red, and headed with a bright spire, six inches long—to be purchased at the expense of the town. (2.) They should have authority to require and demand assistance of any inhabitants of the town to extinguish fires; direct their labors, suppress disorders, &c. (3.) To search and inspect houses, and places where danger was apprehended of fires; and to order the removal of combustibles, &c.*

THE WAR OF 1812.

Soon after the declaration of war, by Congress, against England, in 1812, Concord was selected as the place of rendezvous, both for soldiers destined for the defence of the northern frontiers and of the sea-coast. The large house built by Philip Carrigain, near the north end of Main street, about 1799, was occupied for barracks.† Gen. Aquila Davis, of Warner, had command of a regiment of volunteers for the northern army, of which John Carter, of Concord, was lieutenant-colonel. About this time, or early in 1813, Joseph Low, of Amherst, came to Concord, holding a lieutenant’s commission in Capt. Benjamin Bradford’s company, which marched to the frontiers. At the close of the campaign in 1813 Mr. Low had charge of the recruiting service here. He was also pay-master and quarter-master in the regiment to which he belonged. Lieut. Col. Darrington, a recruiting officer for the United States service, had barracks for his soldiers at the lower end of Main street, opposite the house of the late Dea. Willey. The whole number of soldiers who had their rendezvous in Concord in 1812 and 1813 was reckoned at about five hundred.

At the annual town meeting in March, 1813, some of the volunteer soldiers attempted to vote contrary to the decision of the moderator, Col. William A. Kent. The affair, which was attended with great excitement at the time, is thus referred to in the town records:

“Voted, That the conduct of one McCoy, a volunteer in the service of the United States, and not belonging to this town, in attempting, yesterday, in defiance of the moderator of the meeting, to vote for State and County officers, deserves severe censure; but his act of collaring the moderator while in the exercise of his official duty, we consider an outrage of the most destructive character.

“Voted, That the thanks of this meeting be given to William

* See Town Records, 1813, p. 376; also, list of officers for 1812.
† The house is now owned by Robert E. Pecker and Jonathan E. Lang.
A. Kent, Esq., the moderator, for his temperate, resolute and judicious conduct upon that occasion."

To which vote the moderator made the following reply:

"Fellow Citizens, — This expression of your approbation of my conduct, as presiding officer at the election of your State officers yesterday, demands my grateful acknowledgment.

Aware of the responsibility attached to the office of moderator, and having intimation of the claiming that was intended by the soldiers stationed in this town, calling themselves United States Volunteers, to interfere in our election, I endeavored so to decide respecting their voting, as would, I hoped, satisfy every man who regarded the rights of the citizen. With this view I was led to extend the right of suffrage to what was, in my opinion, and that of many others, a doubtful case: — I mean, that of admitting the votes of those in the service of the United States who were inhabitants of this town at the time of their enlistment, and not yet departed from it. The arguments in favor of their admission were, that in consequence of the rendezvous being in Concord, they had not yet left their habitations; that some of them had families here; and that they had paid taxes to the town for the year which had not yet expired.

"Having no disposition to abridge the right of suffrage, I was willing to give all possible weight to these considerations; and if I erred, that it should be in favor of that privilege. I therefore received their votes. Here I thought it my duty to stop. The soldiers from the barracks, who never were recognized as inhabitants, could not, in my view of the subject, be so considered, for the purpose of electing or being elected into office. I was yesterday proceeding to state the grounds of my opinion on this subject; but meeting with interruption, evidently intended to protract the meeting to a late hour, I determined to proceed no farther in that attempt, but to come at once to that ground which I determined to maintain at the hazard of my life.

"I considered faithfulness no less a duty in a moderator than impartiality. I viewed it as an important crisis, as it respected this town, and perhaps the State. This may be the place in which a standing army shall first attempt to lay prostrate the rights and liberties of the citizen. I decided that these ballots should not be received in any way or manner. The insult offered to the town by the assault on its representative, I doubt not is duly felt by my fellow citizens; and I rejoice that notwithstanding the difference of opinion respecting our national polities, so many of those who differ from me on that part united in reprobating and resenting that indignity."

The scarlet fever broke out among the soldiers early in March, 1813, which was very malignant and fatal. It spread also among the inhabitants. The whole number of cases was two hundred and forty-seven: of which, of inhabitants, ninety-three, and deaths six; of regular soldiers, forty-nine, and deaths seven; of volunteers, one hundred, and deaths twenty-four.*

For accommodation of sick soldiers, a building was erected, as a hospital, upon land owned by Mr. Nathaniel Abbot, west of the State Prison; which was afterwards sold, and the proceeds applied to liquidate the cost of building.† A Dr. Bartley, (probably of Londonderry,) was engaged to aid in taking care of the sick inhabitants; for whose compensation the town voted, "that the selectmen should collect what they could from the persons whom the doctor visited, and the remainder of his bill be paid out of any money belonging to the town."

Of soldiers belonging to Concord who marched to the northern frontiers, the following were in Capt. Flanders' company, 45th regiment, of which Marshall Baker, of Concord was first lieutenant: Ebenezer Frye, James Emerson, John Uran, Daniel Arlin, Jonathan Uran, Jonathan B. Worth, Nathaniel Parker, James Elliot, Samuel Emerson.

In the 4th regiment were John Elliot, Jonathan Uran,‡ John Dunlap, John Virgin, and James Dunlap, who died.

James Elliot reënlisted in the fourth regiment; Asa Hardy served in both the forty-fifth and fourth; Jonathan Elliot was on the peace establishment, and died at Rock Island, in the Mississippi river, Illinois. Timothy Abbot, of Andover, was a Concord recruit.*

In 1814, August 29th, the selectmen were authorized "to hire all soldiers which may be called for, in lieu of drafting." In March, 1815, they were directed to pay four dollars per month to each soldier detached for the defence of Portsmouth, in the service of the United States. As Portsmouth, the only sea-port in New-Hampshire, was in peculiar danger from armed vessels of the enemy, public attention was particularly directed to that quarter. For the names of the men from Concord, stationed there in 1812, '13, '14, and '15, with their respective commanders, reference must be had to the documentary chapter.†

Capt. Peter Robertson's volunteer company of artillery, that was in service twenty days, from September 10th to 29th, marched from Concord on the Sabbath, passing the old North Church, over Federal bridge, thence on the turnpike to Portsmouth. In this company were several highly respected citizens still living.

But the spirit of patriotism was not confined to the men who actually marched to the field of danger. Venerable, aged men, some of whom had served in the War of the Revolution, who were exempted from active service, offered themselves for the defence of their country.

Sometime in September, 1814, at the instance of John T.
Gilman, the then Governor of New-Hampshire, a public call was made for volunteers of that class of citizens who were by law exempt from military duty, in the ranks of the militia, to form themselves into companies, for the purpose of home defence in case of necessity from invasion. Some of the most respectable citizens of Concord immediately responded to the call; held a public meeting, and organized a company for that purpose, numbered the sixth company of volunteers. The officers chosen by the company were — Stephen Ambrose, Esq., captain; Samuel Sparhawk, Esq., 1st lieutenant, then Secretary of State; Nathan Ballard, Esq., 2d lieutenant; Ezra Hutchins, ensign; Moses Long, 1st sergeant, orderly and clerk; G. W. Rogers, ex-captain, 2d do.; Samuel Davis, West Parish, ex-captain, 3d do.; Samuel Runnels, 4th do. Corporals not recollected. There were some over an hundred privates enrolled in the company, many of whom had held offices, both civil and military, as the secretary of the State and treasurer, seven justices of the peace, one colonel, one lieutenant-colonel, one major, and nineteen captains. Quite a majority of the company were made up of some of the most respectable citizens and yeomanry of the town; among whom may be recollected the elder Esq. Bradley, Esq. Charles Walker, Wm. Stickney, inn-keeper, Capt. Richard Ayer, Major Timothy Chandler, Capt. Edmund Leavitt, Capt. Charles Eastman, Capt. Jacob Eastman, Jeremiah Pecker, Millen Kimball, Asa Kimball, Asa Graham,* &c., &c.

The meeting preliminary to forming the above company was held September 10, at Stickney's hall; Col. Wm. A. Kent, chairman; Seth Tucker, clerk. A committee, consisting of Col. Wm. A. Kent, Stephen Ambrose, Jonathan Eastman, Isaac Dow, and John George, reported the following preamble and resolution, which were adopted:

"Whereas, in defence of our altars and fire-sides, our property and our country, Americans can have but one opinion:

Resolved, That it is expedient to form a military association in the town of Concord, of such persons as are not enrolled in the militia, to be in readiness, at a moment's warning, to act under the direction of the Commander-in-Chief, for the defence of the State."

Capt. Richard Ayer, Capt. John Eastman, Hon. Wm. A. Kent, Mr. Isaac Dow, Mr. Philbrick Bradley, Mr. Daniel Clark, Ballard Hazeltine, Esq., Mr. John Garvin, Capt. Samuel Runnels, Nathan Ballard, jr., Timothy Carter, Esq., and Capt. Pearl Kimball, were appointed a committee to give information, and form a plan, &c., for the association, which was duly organized.

This company of venerable men, fully armed and equipped, paraded in town, October 1, and marched through Main street. Their appearance was accompanied with the proud conviction that this nation can never be conquered when such defenders shoulder the musket."*

* Reminiscence, by Dr. Moses Long, of Rochester, N. Y., who was clerk of the company.

A squad, or small company of volunteers, was also formed in East Concord, in consequence of a rumor that the British intended to destroy the United States seventy-four gun ship Washington, then on the stocks at Kittery, Maine. This company was also under drill by Dr. Moses Long, and consisted of about twenty men, of whom Gen. Isaac Eastman, Gen. Simeon Stevens and Col. Robert Ambrose, are recollected.†

MISCELLANEOUS INCIDENTS.

On Thursday evening, August 17th, 1809, at about half an hour before midnight, the inhabitants of the town were roused from sleep by the dismal cry of "fire! fire!" supposed to have originated from the heat of an air furnace or forge in the clock manufactory of Major Timothy Chandler. The manufactory, with all its contents, house, barn, (full of hay,) &c., sheds, and other buildings belonging to Maj. Chandler, with two large barns of hay, belonging to Robert Harris, Esq., were consumed. Maj. Chandler's loss was estimated at $5,000; for his relief $1,200 were generously subscribed by inhabitants of the town and of the vicinity. Mr. Harris's loss was about $1,000.

MAD DOG.

A dog, belonging to Mr. Charles Emery, supposed to be mad, bit a number of other dogs, and snapped at several persons. He was immediately killed.‡

Died in this town, January 16, 1810, Henry, the only son of Mr. Henry Chandler, aged about nine years. At his funeral the scholars of the fifth school district, of which the deceased was a member, being clad in mourning, formed a procession, walked to the house, preceded by Peter C. Farnum, Esq., preceptor of the school, and attended the funeral. The regularity and decorum of these youths reflected credit on themselves and their instructor.

Mr. Abraham Osgood, who lived in school district number fourteen, came to his death by a wound received from a mill-saw.* He was sitting on the log, in meditation, and was imperceptibly drawn so near to the saw that it caught him, and before he could extricate himself was mortally wounded—deep incisions being made in his side through the ribs, into his abdomen. With great strength and firm nerve he turned the saw some inches from its course; shut down the gate, and walked a few rods to a near house, from which he was borne on a litter to his home, and in about three weeks died, aged forty-four.

Several creatures which were bitten by a mad dog in the month of April died about three weeks afterwards, exhibiting all the symptoms of canine madness.

EXTRAORDINARY CALF.

A cow belonging to Mr. Abner Farnum, jr., of this town, last week brought two calves, one of which had two perfect heads, with two back bones running parallel to each other—two perfect intestines—two hearts, &c., with only four legs. Its body was about the size of a common calf at a month old. The other calf was of perfect shape and the common size—both lived for a short time.†

The tannery of Mr. Abner Farnum, jr., of Concord, was destroyed by fire on Tuesday, 27th February, 1811.

Married in this town, Mr. Ebenezer Ball to Miss Nancy Cumore.

When Cupid with his fiery dart
Had pier’d this maiden to the heart,—
The most extra’rdinary thing of all,
She’s not afraid to face a Ball. J. W.‡

Married in this town, Mr. Robert Ambrose to Mrs. Cleasby, the ages of both (79 and 67) make 146 years. One great-granddaughter, 18 years of age, attended the wedding.§

* The date is not certainly known, but sometime in 1810. The occurrence took place at "Lovejoy’s Mills," so called. Mr. O. was born in Salisbury, Mass.

Capt. John Roche, or Roach, died in this town May 11, 1811, aged 74. He was a native of Cork, Ireland, and came to Concord during the Revolutionary War, about 1778. The tradition is that Capt. Roach was the master of a vessel engaged in the fur trade. Having loaded at Quebec for London, he most unaccountably got out of his latitude and made Portsmouth harbor, where he disposed of his furs on his own account! He afterwards married Major Robert Rogers' wife, [who was divorced from her husband,] whose maiden name was Elizabeth Furness, of Portsmouth.† Moving to Concord, he settled on the farm lately owned by Gov. Isaac Hill. The house where he lived is still standing — known as the "Rogers House." Many anecdotes are related of Capt. Roach, which, as they illustrate vices rather than virtues of character, may be passed over. He was, however, a regular customer at Mother Osgood's tavern and at the store kept by John Stevens. The story is told that he often bought New-England rum in a wooden bottle or small keg; but sometimes a trick would be played upon him, by taking out the stopple, or boring the bottle with a gimblet, in which cases the Captain would discharge a volley of oaths!

Benjamin Hanniford died on the 6th of May, and was interred on the 9th in the Friends' Burying Ground.

CELEBRATION OF AMERICAN INDEPENDENCE JULY 4, 1811.

The anniversary of American Independence was celebrated in Concord by the republican citizens of this and the adjoining towns, those of Amherst and Wilton, and by other gentlemen from various parts, with greater splendor, dignity and hilarity, than had been witnessed on any former occasion in this State. At the dawn of the morning a salute of eighteen guns was fired from the Artillery, stationed near Capt. Solomon Mann's, which was answered by an equal number from the ship President, lying at anchor near Concord Bridge. At ten o'clock an immense collection of republicans met in convention at Capt. Mann's, and chose Hon. Timothy Walker president of the day, with other officers.

A procession was formed, the centre of which was opposite Major Timothy Chandler's, which, at a signal gun from the ship President, moved to the meeting-house, where prayer was offered by the Rev. Mr. Ruter, of Northfield. The Declaration of Independence was read, and an oration delivered by Charles G. Haines, Esq., of Canterbury.

At the close of the exercises at the meeting-house the procession marched to the bower appointed for the entertainment; but on the way a naval battle was fought between the ship President and His Majesty's sloop of war, the Little Belt, of which we have the following notice:

"Shipping Memoranda."

"Interesting Interior Ship News. The United States frigate President, sailing with four wheels on dry land, emblematic of our dry dock policy, and mounting one iron and twelve wooden swivels, while passing Horse Shoe Pond, near Concord, N. H., the 4th inst., fired upon the British sloop-of-war Little Belt, (an old canoe, or rather, a hollow log, each end being well secured with mud to keep it from sinking,) and, shocking to tell, made such havoc and confusion among the musquetos, that she struck her colors and surrendered at discretion."

After this glorious victory the President hauled her wind, tacked to the southward and came in under an easy sail to the bank of the bower — east of Mr. Mann's tavern — for the entertainment prepared; where, after a grand salute of eighteen guns, which was answered by an equal number from the artillery, and three cheers from her crew, which were responded to by the spectators, she dropped her anchors.

After dinner toasts were drank, with appropriate music, amid the thunder of artillery.

The following volunteer toast was offered by Timothy Dix, Esq., father of Hon. John A. Dix, of New-York:

"God guard our President from harm,
Long may he weather out the storm;
Long may he live to quell his foes,
And hold the Essex Junto by the nose."
INTERESTING INCIDENTS.

About four hundred dollars in money and produce were subscribed by the citizens of Concord, for the relief of sufferers by fire in Newburyport, Mass.

POST RIDER'S NOTICE.

"Look ye!"

"From Concord to Walpole through Charlestown, I say,
I have rode through the mud and the dust of the day:—
I have met with the showerers and the shiners in their turn,
And sometimes a storm which would cause me to mourn—
To bring you the news!"

"And now, my good patrons, let us square our newspaper accounts— you with me, and I with the printers, on the first week of October next."

Joseph Smith.

September 10, 1811."

Capt. Charles Emery, who died October 10, 1811, aged thirty-one years, was interred with military honors, attended by a very numerous and respectable concourse; nearly four hundred of whom followed his remains to "the house appointed for all living."

Died suddenly in this town, December 28, 1811, (at Mrs. Duncan's,) Hannah Shapley, aged eleven years. Her death was occasioned by a fall—her head striking the door-step before her body reached the ground. The neck was so injured that she expired immediately.

On Saturday morning, February 15, 1812, a fire broke out in the building occupied by Messrs. Mann & Robertson, traders, and Capt. George W. Rogers, cabinet-maker, which stood on the spot where Mr. Richard Herbert now lives. The shavings and other combustible materials soon enveloped the upper part of the building in flames, and it was consumed. The fire greatly endangered the "Upper Bank," which, however, was preserved by the spirited exertions of the citizens, with the help of Concord engine No. 1— the only fire engine then in town. The bank vault was then in a small building adjoining the house now owned by Rev. Dr. Bouton, and the north room of said house was the office of the Cashier and Directors. The house was entirely cleared — the windows and doors taken out, in the expectation that its destruction was inevitable. The contents of the vault were also removed to a place of safety.

COLD WINTER.

We believe there has not been within the recollection of the oldest inhabitants a winter in which the cold has been so severe and of such long continuance. Even now the sleighing is good in the interior of the State, and the Merrimack is in most places passable on the ice.*

About one hundred feet of Concord bridge was carried away by the ice, Sunday morning, April 12th.

Mr. Stephen Swett, of the U. S. army, was drowned in the Merrimack river, July —, supposed to have entered in, in a deranged state. He leaves a wife and several children in Andover.

In March, 1813, a mail commenced running between Concord and Amherst, through Dunbarton, Bedford and Goffstown.

CONCORD PRICE-CURRENT IN TIME OF THE WAR—1813.

Corn, $1,12½ to $1,33; rye, $1,33; wheat, $2,00; oats, 50 cents per bushel. Veal, 4 to 6 cents per pound; butter—very scarce—20 cents per pound.

A child of Mr. Ephraim Farnum was killed by the falling of stones from a wall.†

On the 3d of September, 1813, Joseph, son of Mr. Joseph Wheat, of Concord, was drowned in Merrimack river.

A society was formed in Concord this year, “for discountenancing vice and immorality,” of which Rev. Asa McFarland was president, and George Hough secretary. In December a petition was forwarded to Congress, praying that restrictions might be laid upon “the distillation of bread-stuffs into ardent spirits,” as a means of remedy for the exhorbitant price of provisions, and to check the growing evil of intemperance.

In January, 1814, the members of “the Concord Female Charitable Society,” with other ladies of Concord, raised and transmitted the sum of one hundred and sixty-four dollars and seventy-seven cents to Portsmouth, to be distributed among the women and children who are sufferers by the late calamitous fire in that place.

* Patriot, March 31, 1812. † Ib., July 6th.

In 1814 a bounty of one hundred and twenty-four dollars was offered to soldiers who should enlist in the United States service, one hundred and sixty acres of land, and eight dollars per month, with rations and clothing.

Master Francis Thompson, son of Hon. Thomas W. Thompson, aged ten years, was drowned in Merrimack river, on Wednesday evening, June 22, 1814, while bathing. He was accompanied by Hamilton Hutchins, John B. Chandler, and Artemas Davidson. The place where the occurrence took place was then known as Sandy Point,—the bend in the river about a mile south-east of the State House. The companions of Thompson were terrified, ran home so soon as they saw what had happened, and gave no alarm. In the night, Hutchins being aroused from sleep, and enquired of what had become of Thompson, said, "he is in the river."

A resolve passed the Legislature of New-Hampshire in June, 1814, authorizing the Directors of the State Prison to request the Rev. Dr. McFarland to attend prayer with the convicts on the Lord's day, and furnish each occupied cell of the prison with a Bible and Hymn book.

HISTORY OF CONCORD FROM 1815 TO 1825.

At the annual meeting in March, 1815, the town voted "That the intermission be one hour through the year, except Communion day, and on those days one hour and a half."

On the 23d of September a violent gale swept over this town, and indeed over the greater part of New-England, which did immense damage to buildings, fences, and especially to wood-lands. Hence at a meeting January 1, 1816, Richard Bradley, one of the selectmen, was appointed "agent in behalf of the town, to dispose of the wood and timber blown down on the eighty acre lot belonging to the parsonage, and that the net proceeds of the sale be given to the Rev. Asa McFarland." Mr. Bradley was also appointed agent to sell the wood and timber at the Rocky Pond, so called, that is now blown down on the land belonging to the town, and all the wood and timber blown down on any other lands owned by the town. Abiel Walker was appointed "assistant agent" for the same purpose.

This year the building of the State House was begun. A spirited competition arose between the North and South End, as to where the house should be located. The North End inhabitants were in favor of the location where the old town-house stands, or further west, on land owned by the late William Stickney. At the annual meeting, March 12th, it was voted, "That the town-house may be removed, if the Legislature should want to make use of the land for a State House, on which said house stands."

The conditions on which the State House might be located in Concord, as proposed by the Legislature, were, "That said town of Concord, or inhabitants of said town, shall convey to the State of New-Hampshire a suitable piece of ground on which to erect said State House, to the acceptance of his Excellency the Governor and Honorable Council aforesaid—shall level and well prepare said piece of ground, to the acceptance of the committee to superintend the building aforesaid—shall also give all the stone necessary to be used in the erection of said building, and shall convey or have conveyed said stone, under the direction of said committee, to the place or plot of ground upon which said State House shall be erected; which condition shall be performed free of any charge or expense to the State."

The inhabitants of the South End were in favor of the location at or near where the State House now stands. Especially interested and active in securing their object were the late Col. William A. Kent, Gov. Isaac Hill, and William Low. In examining the two locations it appears that a committee of the Legislature had reported favorably of that on Stickney’s land, but the decision of the question was left with the Governor and Council. In order to fulfil the conditions, subscriptions were started at both the North and South End; the latter soon amounted to about four thousand dollars; and tradition says, that in the mean time the most urgent and favorable considerations were presented to Governor William Plumer by those in the South End interest. The Governor had formerly boarded at the North End, with Francis N. Fisk, Esq., but this year he boarded with Mr. Hill, and both personal and political considerations were brought to bear on the question. The arguments for and against the respective locations in dispute were: That Stickney’s land was dry, elevated and airy; a building erected thereon could be seen far and wide; it was near the Town House, where the Legislature had been accustomed to meet, and had been recommended by a committee of that body. The other location was said to be more central, and less difficult of access: to which it was objected that it was low and wet, and contemptuously it was called a "frog-pond," out of which a member facetiously remarked, "that the frogs would peep up, and with their croakings interrupt the debates of the House!"—That the expense of laying a foundation in such a spot would swell the cost far beyond the estimate; and, in fact, that the people at the South End had no just claim whatever to put in, in opposition to the location on Stickney's land. Tradition further says, that the Governor and Council were as much divided in their opinions on the subject as the people of the respective sections. Two of the Council, Gen. Benjamin Pierce and Samuel Quarles, boarded with the late John George, and were decidedly in favor of the Stickney location—indeed, a majority of the Council were in favor of the latter spot. A day was fixed on to decide the question;—but, it happened, that just at that juncture one member of the Council, who was in favor of the north end location, was called away on special business, and before his return the Governor called the Council together, and decided the question in favor of the South End. Thus saith tradition.

The lot on which the State House is erected, containing about two acres, formerly belonged to the estate of Peter Green, Esq. On the north-east part of it stood the house of Capt. Peter Robertson, which house was sold to Mr. William Kent, and moved to Pleasant street, where it still stands. The entire lot was purchased and presented to the State, agreeably to the conditions specified.

Mr. Stuart J. Park* was chief architect, assisted by Mr. Levi Brigham.§ Messrs. Albe Cady, William Low and Jeremiah Pecker, of Concord, were the superintending building committee.

* Stuart J. Park. The parents of Mr. Park were natives of Scotland, and came to this country in 1767. His father was a stone mason, and the first here who practiced splitting stone with a wedge. Mr. Park possessed unusual mechanical genius. He was the overseer or contractor of the following structures: overseer in the work of building a jail in Portland, 1798; overseer of jail at Northampton, Mass., 1801; contractor State Prison at Charlestown, 1803; overseer upon prison at Windsor, 1808; contractor State Prison in Concord, 1810; Middlesex Locks and Canal, 1813; overseer State House in Concord, 1814, overseer jail at Dover, 1818; overseer Boston Mill Dam, 1820; overseer Dry Dock, Charlestown, 1825; overseer Lowell Railroad, 1833. Since that time he has resided upon his farm in Groton, Mass., one of the best in Massachusetts, and is eighty-two years of age. He visited Concord in March, 1854, and was then enjoying fine health and a green old age. He is still living.

§ Mr. Brigham was from Boston. He married Ann, daughter of Capt. Richard Ayer.
Convicts of the State prison were employed to hammer the stone. On Tuesday, September 24, 1816, the corner stone was laid. The building was completed and the Legislature first convened in it, in June, 1819.

The expense of building the house, including the fences and the furniture of the house, amounted to nearly eighty-two thousand dollars.*

At a meeting November 4, 1816, it was voted, that in future the ballot for Representatives be brought in on the same ticket for State and County officers.

At the annual meeting in March the selectmen were authorized to purchase two hearse; one hundred dollars were raised for purchasing a fire engine and other necessary apparatus therefor, and a quantity of hose to the amount of forty dollars. The selectmen were also authorized "to sell any part of Timothy Abbot's land, or the whole, as they may think best, and pay his debts."†

SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

Heretofore Dr. McFarland, ex officio, had performed the service of visiting and inspecting the schools of the town, examining teachers, &c.; but this year, March 11th, for the first time, a committee was appointed to visit the schools, viz.: Thomas W. Thompson, Dr. McFarland, Capt. Richard Ayer, William A. Kent, George Hough, Abiel Rolfe, Stephen Ambrose, Thomas Chadbourne, Moses Long, Richard Bradley, Samuel A. Kimball, and Samuel Fletcher.

It was also voted, "That the committee in each school district make out a list of all the children in their respective districts,

* For description of the State House see Miscellaneous Chapter.
† Timothy Abbot was a son of Edward Abbot, Esq. His land lay north of Centre street and extended back to Sand Hill. On account of irregular habits he was placed under guardianship. His property was conveyed to the town, which became obliged to support him. He died in 1830, leaving a [second] wife, Lydia. By virtue of her interest in her husband's estate, she received support from the town in her old age. She boarded for several years at Mr. Jacob Hoyt's; then at Simon Virgin's. In her latter years she fell and broke her thigh, and hence became very infirm and helpless. Finally she was boarded at Mr. Ebenezer Eastman's, in the East Village, where she died, May 25, 1833, aged eighty-five.
from the age of four years to twenty-one, and return the same to the selectmen in the month of April in each year, under oath if required.”

TEMPERANCE.

Voted, “That it shall be the duty of the selectmen to prosecute all persons in the town of Concord who shall, within knowledge or from satisfactory information, retail spirit contrary to law, except on public days.”

The selectmen were also directed to prosecute any person or persons who had trespassed or who shall hereafter trespass on any of the lands belonging to the town; and “to confer with the directors of Federal and of Concord bridges with respect to the compensation they will require, to permit the inhabitants on the east side of the river to pass and repass to attend public worship; and likewise to attend town-meetings by the year.” The immediate occasion of this vote was a vote passed by the directors of Federal bridge, September 2, 1817, requiring “all persons crossing Federal bridge, going to or returning from public worship on Sabbath days, (excepting foot-passengers,) to pay toll,” which vote was reconsidered September 24, 1817.

Great difficulty was experienced in obtaining a road from West Parish village to Horse Hill bridge, on account of conflicting opinions as to the best route; hence, at a meeting of the town December 21st, it was voted, “That a committee of three from some adjoining town or towns be requested by the selectmen to assist them in laying out a road from Horse Hill bridge to Orlando Brown’s in such way as shall best accommodate the public.” Andrew Bowers, Capt. Stone and Dea. Pettengill [of Salisbury] were chosen for the purpose.

On the 10th of March, voted, “That in future it shall be the duty of the selectmen and auditors of accounts to report at each annual meeting such sum or sums of money as will, in their opinion, be necessary to defray the expenses of the town the ensuing year; and that they specify each object of expense, together with the sum they judge necessary to meet it.” This rule has been found highly useful, and been generally acted on since its first adoption.

Thomas W. Thompson, Samuel Sparhawk, Stephen Ambrose, Isaac Hill, Samuel A. Kimball, Timothy Carter and Nathan Ballard, jr., were appointed a committee to report at the next town meeting "the most eligible mode they can devise for supporting the poor in future."

LANCASTERIAN SCHOOL.

Voted, "to admit the south end of the Town House, called the Senate Chamber, to be prepared and occupied by a Lancasterian school, provided the town be at no expense." This kind of school derived its name from a philanthropic gentleman in England, by the name of Lancaster; the school was designed for a large number of scholars of every age, to be conducted on the plan of monitorial instruction: that is, at the head of each class was a monitor, who was the teacher of the class, under the supervision and direction of the Principal. Cards were generally used instead of school-books, and the exercises consisted much in repeating lessons, after the monitor. The schools had a short-lived popularity in different parts of the country.

COWS AND SHEEP.

Voted, "That whereas the inhabitants of Concord and travelers with teams and loaded sleighs are frequently annoyed by cows and sheep running at large; — therefore, that hereafter no cow or sheep shall be permitted to run at large in the Main street between Carr's inn and Richard Bradley's dwelling-house, or within half a mile to the west of Main street, after the first day of November, 1819, till the first day of April, 1820."

Isaac Eastman and James Hoit were appointed by the town, to take legal measures to ascertain the names of those persons who have injured or damned the seats, candlesticks, &c., belonging to the Town House, and report their names; and that they, the said Eastman and Hoit, prosecute the same.

September 2d, Richard Bradley was appointed "an agent to settle or defend the suit commenced against the town of Concord by Ephraim Farnum, jr." This suit was to recover from the town the value of a horse belonging to Mr. Farnum, hired to Col. William Kent to go to Boston, and which horse, with a chaise, run off a bridge just north of the house of the late Dea. Wilkins, in the time of a high freshet, and was drowned. Mr. Farnum failed to recover.

At the annual meeting this year the town voted to pay five dollars "as a premium to the engine which may arrive at a fire first, and that the same be awarded by direction of the firewards." On the sixth of April the selectmen were directed to lease to the 11th school district, for such a length of time and on such terms as they may think proper, so much of the Parsonage lot near the house of David George as will be needed by said district for the purpose of building a school-house—provided the Rev. Dr. McFarland, or those who may claim a right to said lot under him, shall give his or their consent." The selectmen were also authorized to purchase or build a house or houses sufficient for the safe-keeping of the hearse or hearses which belong to the town. On the 4th of January, 1821, the selectmen were authorized to agree with the selectmen of Boscawen to repair or rebuild the bridge across Contoocook river, near John Chandler’s, in the same place it now is, and that the town of Concord pay half the expense.

At the annual meeting in March, 1821, upon recommendation of a committee previously appointed, consisting of Samuel Sparhawk, Charles Walker and William A. Kent, the town voted to provide a book "for the purpose of entering therein all returns of roads,"* and whatever else relative to that particular subject: also a book in which an account should be opened with every pauper maintained wholly or in part by the town; and an invoice and tax-book, so ruled and arranged that "any one who wishes may see at one view both the amount of his taxes and the property on which his taxes are assessed." It is to be regretted that the second recommendation above was never carried out.

A NEW COUNTY.

The question of forming a new county— to be called Merri-mack County— was acted on by the town at the annual meeting in March. Yeas, 522— nays, 6. The selectmen were directed to petition the General Court "so to alter and establish the line between Concord and Boscawen, that said line may strike the centre of Contoocook river at the place fixed upon to build a new bridge across said river."

The committee for visiting schools recommended in their annual report, "that a sum not less than three per cent. of the monies raised for the support of schools, be appropriated by the town and placed at the disposal of the committee— to be expended in premiums, in part, to school-masters" who shall have distinguished themselves for their ability and success in instruction and government;— "and the residue in useful books, to be given as rewards of merit to those scholars who shall have made the greatest improvement in their studies." The recommendation was adopted.

A new county being constituted, Concord became the shire town, and hence, for the accommodation of the courts, it became necessary to make alterations and improvements in the old town house. September 16th it was voted, "That the town so far comply with the act of the Legislature of June session, 1822, as to remove the town house back, turn it end to the road, raise it one story, and complete it to the acceptance of the Justices of the Superior Court,— provided Mr. Stickney will give the land which may be necessary for this purpose; and provided, also, that one third of the expense of removal and repairing said house be defrayed by individual subscription." Jeremiah Pecker, Robert Davis, 3d, and Joseph Low, were appointed superintendents, and eight hundred dollars appropriated towards defraying the expense of removing and repairing the building, agreeably to the foregoing vote.
The school committee reported that about one thousand children and youth, or one third of the whole population of the town, attended school during the winter; and that one half of them studied English Grammar, Arithmetic and Geography. Add the little children who attend only in summer, and nearly one half of the population are actually receiving their education "at these domestic institutions."

Jacob B. Moore made proposals to the town to publish "a history of the town," which he had prepared, to contain, with an appendix, about one hundred and fifty pages; whereupon the town voted, "to take a sufficient number of copies of said history to furnish each family in the town with one copy." The work was published in 1824, entitled "Annals of the Town of Concord." — pp. 112.

This year the selectmen were authorized to straighten "Centre street," and "to lease or otherwise dispose of the land given to the town by Deacon Joseph Hall, deceased." It was voted to give the proprietors of Federal Bridge twenty-five dollars per annum as a compensation for the privilege, to the inhabitants of the town, of passing toll free on Sabbath days, when going to and from public worship. At a meeting November 1st the selectmen were authorized to purchase that part of the New-Hampshire Turnpike (including the Branch) which lies in Concord; to pay a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars for the same.*

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS AND ANECDOTES RELATIVE TO THIS PERIOD.

The first boat, with regular freight, from Boston to Concord, through the Middlesex canal, arrived at Concord June 23, 1815.†

* The New-Hampshire Turnpike was the road from Federal Bridge through to Chichester, Epsom, Northwood, on to Portsmouth — and the "Branch" run from Concord bridge north-east till it met the Turnpike near the late Philip Stevens's.

The summer of 1816 was remarkable in Concord and throughout New-England for the severity of the cold. It is said that there were frosts every month in the season, from April to November. Corn, rye and other crops were almost entirely destroyed. Apples and other fruits were likewise cut off. In consequence, the price of provisions was unusually high, and the poor suffered from scarcity.

The lot where the brick school-house now stands, in district number eleven, was the Parsonage house lot, which Dr. McFarland had liberty to improve during his ministry. Some years after his settlement he leased it to Benjamin Kimball, jr., hatter, at the north end of Main street. Mr. Kimball moved his shop on the lot—agreeing to pay Dr. McFarland one bushel and a half of white beans annually. In the cold summer of 1816 white beans were a scarce article, and the quantity due could not be had. Mr. Kimball gathered from various sources two bushels or more of beans, "ring-streaked and speckled," and of all colors, and carried them to Dr. McF. for payment. The Doctor observed, "You have brought me more than a bushel and a half." "Not of white ones," said Mr. Kimball, "and the rest I'll throw in."

[1817.] Mr. Benjamin Thompson was drowned in Turkey Pond, June 20th, by the upsetting of a boat, in a squall of wind. He was in company with Lieut. B. Kimball. The former attempted to swim to the shore, and was drowned; the latter, who could not swim, clung to the boat, and was saved.

On the 18th of July President MONROE, on his tour through New-England, visited Concord. He was met on the borders of the town (on his way from Dover,) about three o'clock, P. M., by a committee of the citizens, consisting of the selectmen and Thomas W. Thompson, Samuel Sparhawk, William A. Kent, Charles Walker, Jonathan Eastman, Stephen Ambrose and Abiel Walker, Esqs., and under escort of Capt. Abbot's company of cavalry and citizens of Concord, proceeded by the Branch turnpike to Concord bridge. His approach was announced by Capt. Samuel Herbert's company of artillery, which saluted him from Butters's Hill, as he passed the bridge and through the Main Arrived near Barker's tavern, he was received by Capt. Long's excellent company of light infantry, and saluted by that and a company of citizens consisting of several hundreds. After a few moments' rest, he ascended a stage erected for the occasion, three sides of which were covered by the three escort companies, with presented arms — where he was met by the cheers and huzzas of the surrounding multitude.

Here the Hon. Thomas W. Thompson made an address to the President, welcoming him, in the name of his fellow citizens, to the town. To which the President responded.

A sumptuous dinner was partaken of at Mr. Barker's, after which the President gave as a toast — "The town of Concord — May its inhabitants continue to flourish and prosper." In the evening he attended a musical concert at the meeting-house, which was tastefully decorated for the occasion. On Saturday he received calls from individuals, among whom was the venerable Judge Walker, eighty years of age. After dining with Mr. Thompson he took an excursion down the river as far as Garvin's Falls in the newly launched pleasure boat; the President, with a select company of ladies and gentlemen — returning by land in carriages. He passed the evening with an invited party at Col. William A. Kent's; attended public worship in the morning of the Sabbath at the Old North Church, and left town on Monday morning, highly gratified with his visit to the Capital of the Granite State.

Died in this town, at the residence of her grandson, Richard Bradley, August 10, 1817, the widow Mary Calfe, aged ninety-eight, being the oldest person in town. She first married Samuel Bradley, who was killed by the Indians August 11, 1746, and was the mother of the late Hon. John Bradley. She afterwards married Richard Calfe, Esq., of Chester. About six years before her death she was disabled by a fall, and was confined ever after to her bed. She retained her faculties in a remarkable degree to the last. In her youthful days she had studied the Scriptures, and when strength and sight failed her, not only its doctrines but its very language were familiar to her — which she would repeat, to the comfort and satisfaction of her friends. She placed a firm reliance on the merits of her Saviour, and died in sweet peace and hope of rest in the kingdom of God.

Miss Abigail Kimball, aged sixty, who had been an attendant and nurse of Mrs. Calfe for about thirty years, died on the 4th of August—and Mrs. Hannah Bradley, widow of the Hon. John Bradley, aged sixty-six, died in the same house on the 15th of August. Their united ages made two hundred and fourteen years. Mrs. Bradley was a woman of uncommon excellence and usefulness in all the relations of life. The disease of which she died was dysentery.

Drowned in this town, Sabbath morning, August 17, 1817, Ebenezer Chickering, in the nineteenth year of his age—a youth of much promise. In his anxiety to become a swimmer, and unbeknown to the family where he lived, early on Sunday morning, with two other youths, he went to the river, and venturing in deep water, where he was unable to manage himself, he was carried down the stream.

The body of young Chickering was found several days after, floating on the surface of the river, about two miles below the place where he was drowned.

A smart shock of an earthquake was felt in this town on Sunday, October 5, 1817, about twenty minutes before twelve o'clock. It was of one or two minutes duration, apparently in a direction from south-west to north-east.

On Tuesday, November 25th, a large three story dwelling-house, chiefly owned by Mr. Abel Hutchins, and occupied by him and Mr. Albe Cady, was consumed by fire. The fire burst out of the roof about one o'clock, P. M. — probably communicated from a stove in the third story. A considerable portion of the furniture was saved. Loss estimated at about three thousand dollars. The house stood on the spot where the Phoenix Hotel now stands. The fire was prevented from extending to adjacent buildings, by the energetic efforts not only of men but of the fair sex, who were busy in furnishing carpets, coverlets and blankets to cover the exposed buildings, assisting also to bring water, forming lines for the engine, and in clearing adjacent buildings. Burning flakes fell among combustibles under a large barn full of hay, but were accidentally discovered and extinguished by [1818.] "Portsmouth and Concord Wagon Company" was formed at the beginning of the year 1818, "for the transportation of merchandize" between the two places. Wagons to leave Portsmouth every Monday for Concord, and pass over the Turnpike through the towns of Durham and Northwood; returning, leave Concord every Thursday, and arrive in Portsmouth on Saturday.

From the 2d to the 10th of April continued rain and snow fell, without the appearance of the sun. Stages from the north and south arrived on runners, on the 6th and 10th of April.

FIRE ENGINE.

An additional fire engine was purchased by the inhabitants of this town in April, 1818. It was a new invention, by Mr. S. F. B. Morse, the celebrated painter (and inventor of the electric telegraph) and was procured for about half the usual expense of other engines—say one hundred and fifty to two hundred dollars.*

On Tuesday, May 5th, was an unusual freshet. The intervals were covered with water, and the river extended from its usual channel to from one to two miles. Bridges in town were impassable for a number of days. No spring freshet is recollected to have been so high. The bridge between Boscawen and Canterbury was carried away.

in front of the State House, under the direction of Major Robertson; proceeded down State street and back, entered the State House, where a handsome extemporaneous address was delivered by PHILIP CARRIGAIN, Esq. Refreshments were plentifully distributed; toasts were drank amid loud cheers and the firing of artillery, the Concord Band, at intervals, playing appropriate airs. The thirteenth toast was—"The American Eagle,—May the shadow of his wings protect every acre of our united Continent, and the lightning of his eye flash terror and defeat through the ranks of our enemies."

The citizens of Concord have for two weeks past been much gratified with the appearance for the first time of a steamboat in our river. A good portion of the ladies and gentlemen in town availed themselves of the very polite invitation of the proprietors to take pleasure rides up and down the river, for two or three miles.‡

This boat was owned by John L. Sullivan, Esq., superintendent of the Concord Boating Company, and was intended to tow loaded boats up and down the Merrimack river.

Rev. Joshua Abbot died at Norfolk, Virginia, September 22, 1824. He was interred in the grave-yard of the Baptist society in Portsmouth, a small town separated from Norfolk by Elizabeth river. Two neatly executed white marble slabs mark the spot where rest the remains of this devoted servant of Christ. The inscription is as follows:

"Sacred to the memory of the Rev. Joshua Abbot, who departed this life September 28, 1824, aged 45* years.

"He died in Jesus and is blest,
How sweet his slumbers are:
From sufferings, from sins released,
And freed from every snare."

Mr. Abbot was a native of Concord, son of Capt. Joshua Abbot. He married Miss Eliza Kimball, by whom he had six children, four sons and two daughters. He became a member of the First Congregational Church in 1814, and turned his attention to the study of theology, although he had not the advantage of a public education. Licensed to preach by the Deerfield Association of ministers, he went to the South, in 1820, for the benefit of his health; resided at Norfolk, Virginia, where he conducted a school on the Lancasterian system, and preached the Gospel in the vicinity, as opportunities occurred. He made his family one visit after his first departure, and hoped either to rejoin them permanently in Concord, or have them go to him. He died of fever after a short sickness. Note 1. Heretofore, at the close of decennial periods, we have published the names of all who have been chosen annually to any town office; but on account of the yearly increase in the number of minor offices, we are obliged to restrict the names hereafter to those only who were chosen to the principal offices.

Note 2. By a law passed January 1, 1796, any person who was chosen to any town office in a town for one year, "for which he was liable to be fined for not accepting it," thereby gained a "settlement" in said town. This law was so far repealed, by an act passed December 25, 1816, that a person could gain a settlement only by being chosen and actually serving for one year "in the office of clerk, treasurer, selectman, or overseer of the poor."

Note 3. For more convenient reference we have placed the list of principal town officers and representatives chosen since 1815, at the close of the civil history of the town, in 1853.
CHAPTER XIV.

HISTORY OF CONCORD FROM 1825 TO 1835.

On the 9th of March the town voted to accept the following proposition, made by the Rev. Asa McFarland relative to dis-annulling his ministerial contract with the town, viz.:

"Since the time of my sickness, last winter, I have endeavored to make full trial, to determine whether I could perform the duties of the Christian ministry in this place. The result has been a conviction on my mind that I shall not be able to do all that the condition of the congregation requires.

Thus far there is, so far as I know, a good degree of harmony in the Society; and if I should attempt to continue alone to perform the duties of the ministry, I apprehend that I may fail; dissatisfaction may in consequence arise, and the Society not be in so good condition as it now is to call and settle a minister.

After much deliberation I have come to the settled conclusion, that the civil contract which is with the town, shall close at the end of the present ministerial year; that is to say, next March.

In regard to the pastoral relation, I shall be willing to have that dissolved, also, if it should be thought best; — but if it should seem that it will promote harmony to have me continue in this relation, I may be willing that it should be so. This, however, I leave to future consideration.

I have nothing more to communicate, only that it will be important to the Society, and pleasant to me, that a separation, in whole or in part, may take place with peace."
I shall probably live among you, and I hope in peace, and do what I can to promote harmony, and support the institutions of religion and the welfare of society.

Asa McFarland.

Concord, July 11, 1824.”

Having voted to accept the foregoing proposition, Dr. McFarland’s ministerial relation to the town ceased, after a laborious and faithful service of twenty-seven years.* Soon after the foregoing communication was made, measures were taken to organize a new religious society, agreeably to a law passed July 1, 1819, which authorized “any sect or any denomination of Christians in this State to associate and form societies, admit members, establish rules and by-laws for their regulation and government, and to possess and exercise all corporate powers necessary to assess and raise money by taxes upon the polls and ratable estates of the members of such association, for building and repairing houses of public worship, and for the support of the ministry.”

The new Society, organized July 29, 1824, was composed the first year of two hundred and twenty-three taxable members. In the fall of 1824, the Rev. Nathaniel Bouton, a licentiate from the Andover Theological Seminary, was invited to preach as a candidate. He preached his first sermon the last Sabbath in October, from the text, Luke x: 42, and continued his services as a candidate seven weeks. On the 24th of December the Church gave him a unanimous call to settle in the ministry, and on the 30th of the same month the Society concurred with the Church by a unanimous vote.† The call was accepted, and the Council called on the 23d of March, 1825, to ordain Rev. Mr. Bouton, dissolved also the pastoral relation of Rev. Dr. McFarland to the Church.

Thus, after a period of ninety-five years—that is, from the settlement of Rev. Timothy Walker, in 1730—the town in its corporate capacity ceased to provide for the support of the Ministry. Yet, at the annual meeting in March, it was voted, “That the Rev. Dr. McFarland have leave to cut fire-wood, sufficient for his own use, on the Parsonage land the current year; also, that he have the use of the improved lands the current year, which belong to the town."

The obligation of the town for the support of the ministry having ceased with the resignation of the Rev. Dr. McFarland, and the law of July, 1819, going into effect, relative changes were commenced in the disposition of the parsonage lands, and the interest of the town in the old North Church. At the annual meeting in March, Joseph Walker, Robert Davis and Jeremiah Pecker were chosen "a committee to sell all the parsonage lands and the school lands belonging to the town," and were authorized to make and execute, "in the name and in behalf of the town, all necessary conveyances, &c.; and were directed to vest or secure the proceeds of the sales of said lands to be a permanent fund—the interest of which shall be applied for the purposes for which said lands were reserved."

William A. Kent, Joseph Walker, and Abel Hutchins were also chosen "a committee to take into consideration the subject of selling the interest or right the town may have in the meeting-house, to the First Congregational Society in Concord." This committee, in a subsequent report, estimated the interest which the town had in the meeting-house at two hundred dollars; in the land on which the meeting-house stands, measuring six rods east, south, north, and west, to the original reserve for a road, at three hundred dollars; and in the bell at three hundred dollars; and they recommended that the whole be offered to the First Congregational Society for eight hundred dollars, which was accordingly done, and the town's interest therein sold to said society.† November 14, 1828, the town voted to relinquish the claim of three hundred dollars on the Society, for the bell.

The income of the improved lands belonging to the town was granted to Rev. Dr. McFarland another year; he also, with Rev. Nathaniel Bouton, and Rev. Nathaniel W. Williams, of the Baptist Church, had leave to cut from the parsonage land fire-wood sufficient for their own use the current year.

The selectmen were authorized to appoint an orator and a committee of arrangements for celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of American Independence on the fourth of July. They made choice of Richard Bartlett, Esq. The day was celebrated with unusual demonstrations of joy. At sunrise, a national salute was fired by the Columbian Artillery, and a merry peal rung from the bells of the churches. The Legislature, then in session, with His Excellency the Governor, and Council, joined the citizens of the town in the glorious commemoration. At eleven o'clock, A. M., a procession, with a band of music, under direction of Col. Robert Davis, chief marshal, assisted by Capt. Joseph Cofran, Capt. Samuel Coffin and Maj. John D. Abbott, moved to the Old North Church. Prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Bouton; the Declaration of Independence was read by Dr. Josiah Crosby, and an oration delivered by Richard Bartlett, Esq. A sumptuous dinner was afterwards partaken of in the area of the State House, which was splendidly decorated by ladies for the occasion. Hon. Samuel Green presided at the table, assisted by Hon. Samuel Morril and Major Timothy Chandler. Toasts were drank, accompanied with music, songs, and the discharge of cannon. Among the volunteer toasts was the following, offered by Jonathan Eastman, Jr., Esq.: "Our Great Grand Fathers, who here, a hundred years ago, planted the tree of Liberty in the wilds of Penacook."

On the 22d of April the committee aforesaid to sell the parsonage and school lands, held a public auction at the Washington Hotel, and made sale as follows: to John Eastman, Jr., eighty acre lot, for $3,277.70; to Abiel Walker six acre interval lot, for $494.47; to Richard Bradley, twenty acre grant, on Little Pond road, for $542.06; five acre interval lot on east side of the river, to William Hurd, for $357.64; three acre Emendation lot, on Contoocook plain, to Abiel Rolfe and Henry

As security against fires this year the following regulations were adopted, viz.: "That all ashes when taken up shall be kept in vessels of iron or tin; or in some place made of materials not combustible, so long as they shall remain in any building; and when carried out, if put into wooden vessels shall be placed at least fifteen feet from any building or combustible matter. Shavings shall be seasonably removed from all buildings, and deposited in suitable places, or burned under the direction of a fireward. No person shall carry a lighted cigar or pipe into any barn, shed or stable, by day or by night; and no person shall carry any lighted torch or fire, by night or by day, within forty feet of any building, lumber, or any combustible material which would endanger the property of any individual, on penalty of a fine of not less than one nor more than five dollars."

Effective measures were this year taken to provide a house and farm for the support of the poor of the town, who had heretofore been "bid off" to the person who would board and provide for them at the lowest rate. At the annual town meeting, "Voted, as the sense of this meeting, That the poor of the town be supported on a farm." "Voted, as the sense of this meeting, that the town will purchase a farm, on which the poor of the town shall be supported."

To carry this decisive vote into effect, Timothy Chandler, Stephen Ambrose, Abiel Walker, Abel Hutchins and Isaac Dow, were "authorized and directed to purchase stock and put in repair a suitable farm, on which all paupers which this town may be compelled to relieve or maintain may be placed for support." The selectmen were also instructed to employ a suitable person to have charge of the paupers and farm aforesaid.

In pursuance of the authority given to them, the aforenamed committee reported to the town, next year,"that they had examined six farms, shown them by different persons, all of which embraced many advantages for the purpose required; but they considered the farm of Mr. Timothy Walker, near the West Parish village, under all circumstances the most profitable, and they purchased it for four thousand dollars." "The farm," say the committee, "contains over two hundred acres of land, about forty acres of which are good intervale; also, a number of acres of brook land, which will make good mowing. The land on the west side of the road amounts to about one hundred acres, on which is a large quantity of valuable timber and a great quantity of wood, which, being only two miles from market, must render it very valuable."

In addition to four thousand dollars paid for the farm, the committee expended four hundred and eighty-four dollars and fifty-seven cents in the purchase of stock, repairing buildings, &c., making a total of four thousand four hundred and eighty-four dollars and fifty-seven cents.

Since the purchase of this farm the poor of the town have been supported there, in a manner greatly conducive to their comfort, at an expense much less than by the former mode.

At a special meeting, September 29, 1827, Robert Davis, Samuel Coffin and Samuel Herbert were authorized to sell the Rocky Pond lot, so called, devised by the late Dea. Joseph Hall "for the benefit of the Congregational minister who should exercise the duties of his office where the meeting-house then stood."*

1828.

To dispose of the interest which should annually accrue from the Parsonage fund, the town voted, "That the selectmen request each man in town to designate, annually, the incorporated religious society in Concord, which supports the preaching of the gospel, to which his proportion of the interest of the ministerial fund shall be paid;† and that the selectmen divide the interest accordingly." This became a permanent rule for the division of the interest of the Parsonage fund, with the addition, that "in case any persons did not choose to designate to what society their proportion should go, the same should be divided equally among all the societies."

FUNDS.

William A. Kent, Robert Davis and Joseph Low were appointed a committee to invest the principal of the Parsonage fund in bank stocks, or such public stocks as, in their judgment, would be for the interest of the town. The same committee were authorized to make a similar investment of the School and Literary Funds belonging to the town.‡ Five hundred dollars, which remained due from the First Congregational Society for the town's interest in the old meeting-house, was ordered to be divided among the incorporated religious societies in the town on the same principle that the interest of the Parsonage fund was divided. To aid the smaller and less wealthy school districts, the sum of four hundred dollars, of the money raised by the town for the support of schools, was divided equally among the districts of the town.

* See Special Report of a Committee on "Heirs of Joseph Hall: 1850."
† This proportion was determined by the amount of each man's tax on poll and estate.
‡ The Literary Fund arises from a tax on banks, which is divided among the several towns in the State. In 1828, a large sum, accumulated from this source, for the purpose of establishing a College, was, by a law of the Legislature, divided among the several towns.
As a security in case of fire, every house within a quarter of a mile of Main street, of two or more stories in height, having four or more fire-places, was required to be furnished with two or more fire-buckets.

The "Chandler farm," so called, which was in the hands of the town, lying on the hill north-west of Henry Martin's, was sold to Christopher Rowell for $625.50; and several parcels or tracts were also sold from the Poor Farm, viz.: to John Jarvis, Isaac Dow, Zebediah Gleason, Abner Farnum, Abel Baker: — the whole quantity sold amounting to three acres and twenty square rods — for $156.24.

Fifty dollars were placed at the disposal of the Superintending School Committee, for the purchase of books, to be distributed as rewards in the several schools, at the discretion of the committee; and ten dollars were appropriated for the benefit of the children at the Poor farm, to be instructed in school in District No. 3. Equal or larger appropriations for this latter purpose have generally been made every year since.

Ten dollars were appropriated in 1830 "for the benefit of poor families in District No. 12, who live too far from school to send their children with convenience; and for the benefit of Ephraim Davis's children, in District No. 9, all to be expended for schooling." Those families lived on or beyond what is called the "Dark Plain," about two and a half miles east of Main street.

Measures were taken to paint, repair and furnish steps for the Town House, and to restrict the use of the building to town business, and to meetings for religious and charitable purposes, unless on rent. The toll of ministers of the several incorporated religious societies in town, passing over Federal bridge, was, by vote of the town, paid by the selectmen.

"Voted, That a bridewell be built at the expense of the town; and that Richard Bradley, James Moulton, Jr., and Cyrus Robinson, selectmen, be authorized to contract for the same." The selectmen were also authorized to contract "to build a pound on the Poor Farm."

The plan before acted on, of dividing a portion of the school money—about $300—and also the whole of the literary fund, as annually received, equally among the school districts of the town, was adopted in 1831, and has been continued from year to year as a settled policy. It operates as an encouragement to education in the minor districts, and gives general satisfaction. Fifteen dollars were appropriated for the schooling of children on the "Dark Plain."

Permission was given to the inhabitants of Concord "to build horse sheds in front of the burying-ground on the town land, under the direction of the selectmen." During 1831 a long line of sheds was built for members of the First Congregational Society, by contract with Mr. Moses Morse, at a cost of about twelve dollars each. These sheds stood close to the fence of the burying ground, west of the old meeting-house, and there remained till the new meeting-house was built, in 1842, when a part of them were sold to Richard Bradley, Esq., and part moved to the location of the new house, and fitted up in the rear of it.

The following resolution, presented by Col. Dudley S. Palmer, was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the selectmen of this town be respectfully requested not to grant a license permitting any theatrical corps, circus, caravan, or any showmen, to exhibit or be exhibited within the limits of the town during the year for which said selectmen have this day been elected.'

The Poor Farm was taxed like other property, for the benefit of school District No. 3, and a vote passed to "establish a house of correction, in connection with the poor house."

In June, this year, intelligence came that the Asiatic cholera, whose deadly march through Europe the year previous had been reported, had crossed the ocean and commenced its ravages in Canada. As Concord lay in the direct line of travel from Canada to Boston, great apprehensions were entertained that the fatal malady might visit us also. Hence, upon the petition of a respectable number of citizens, a special town meeting was called on the 9th of July, "to see if the town will choose a board of health, and make provision for the accommodation and support of strangers and foreigners who may become sick and need assistance." At this meeting a board of health was appointed, consisting of Richard Bradley, Joseph P. Stickney, and Laban Page, selectmen; and doctors Thomas Chadbourne, Ezra Carter, Peter Renton, Elijah Colby, Samuel Morrill, Thomas Brown, and J. T. Gilman Leach, who were authorized to make all necessary provision and accommodations for sick strangers, &c., and for the comfort and safety of our own citizens." Five hundred dollars were appropriated to meet expenses. Through the care and kindness of Divine Providence, no case of cholera ever occurred among us!*

At the annual town meeting the following important measure was adopted:

"Voted, That whereas, from the great increase of inhabitants in the compact part of the town, new streets or highways may be required,—Therefore streets may be authorized by the selectmen, and become highways, to be thereafter maintained by the town as such, in the usual manner;—provided, that where streets are required for the especial benefit of the owner or owners of the land through which the said street may pass, the necessary land for the same be given for the purpose by the owners, and that the road and suitable water-courses be first made to the acceptance of the selectmen, at the expense of those for whose benefit the street may be laid out.

* In the Auditors' Report of 1833 are the following items:

Paid for rations for Militia, $111.90; for bounty on crows and foxes, $10.95; for guide boards, $12. The expense of supporting paupers on the farm is $420.94. Average number of paupers in 1832 is 17. "The auditors cannot refrain from expressing their approbation of Mr. Joseph Parker, the overseer. They believe he merits the commendation of the citizens of Concord for his industry and fidelity in the discharge of the duties of his office."

"And whereas, for the more easily describing lots and residences, the names of the several streets now made or hereafter to be made, should be known and recorded—Therefore, that suitable names may be given to such streets within the limits of the 9th, 10th and 11th school districts, a committee be appointed, (residents in said districts) who shall be authorized, with the concurrence of the owners of the land, where it has been given for the purpose, to report proper names to the selectmen; and when approved by them that the same be entered on the records of the town, and that the street be thereafter known by that name."

In accordance with the foregoing vote, William A. Kent, Abiel Walker and Timothy Chandler, were appointed a committee to name streets, who subsequently made report, which was adopted, as follows:

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS AND ANECDOTES RELATIVE TO THIS PERIOD.

July 4, 1825, was celebrated by a religious service appropriate to the occasion. Rev. Mr. Bouton delivered an address, and at the close a collection was taken up in aid of the American Colonization Society, amounting to $44,58.

Drowned in Horse-shoe pond, at the north end of the village, on Saturday, the 9th instant, John Bradley, aged five years and seven months, eldest child of Richard Bradley, Esq.

Drowned in Merrimack river, on the 16th instant, Mr. Leonard Fales, aged forty. He fell from a small boat while intoxicated.

June 22d Concord was honored by the presence of the immortal LaFayette. Great preparations were made for his reception. Met on the town-line, between Concord and Pembroke, he was addressed by Hon. William A. Kent, chairman of the committee of arrangements, as follows:

GENERAL LAFAYETTE: In behalf of the citizens of Concord, we offer you a cordial welcome to our village and to our hospitalities. In the various climates of our country through which you have recently passed, you have experienced a uniform temperature in the public feeling toward you. It has been warm—it has been grateful; and in this northern region, sir, where we are no strangers to cold and to frost, you will find no chill in our affections.
In expressing our admiration of your character, and our gratitude for your noble and disinterested services to our country, we but respond to the distinct voice of that country; and we again echo that voice when we say, as we now do from the heart, may God Almighty bless you.

To this address Gen. LaFayette responded. Arrived at the gate of the State House yard, an immense number of people, gathered from the town and from every part of the State, welcomed him with enthusiastic and prolonged cheering. In the hall of the House of Representatives he was welcomed and addressed by His Excellency the Governor, David L. Morril, and introduced to each of the members. Next, the General was introduced to the Revolutionary soldiers to the number of two hundred and ten, who had come to pay him their respects. He was addressed in their behalf by Gen. Benjamin Pierce.

At three o'clock in the afternoon he was conducted by the Governor, amid the cheerings of the assembled multitude, to the dinner-table, in front of the capitol, where, with about six hundred others—including more than two hundred Revolutionary officers and soldiers—he partook of a sumptuous entertainment, provided by Mr. John P. Gass, of the Columbian Hotel.

After dinner toasts were drank, accompanied with the discharge of cannon, and interspersed with songs. One song was written by Col. Philip Carrigain to the tune—

"Scots who ha' wi' Wallace bled."

The first stanza of which was—

"North, and South, and East, and West, Grateful homage have expressed—
Greeting loud the nation's guest:
   Son of Liberty;—
Whom tyrants cursed—whom Heav'n approved—
   And millions long have mourned and loved—
He comes, by fond entreaties moved,
   The Granite State to see."

During his sojourn in town the General was the guest of Hon. William A. Kent, at whose house a great number of ladies and gentlemen had the pleasure of a private introduction to him.

* Concord Register, June 25, 1825.
He left at seven o'clock, on Thursday morning, for Dover and other places eastward. He again returned to Concord on the 27th of June, and took his final leave, for Windsor, Vermont, by way of Hopkinton, Warner, Newport and Claremont. On passing the house of the late Daniel Clark, of Concord, Miss Mary Clark stepped out of the door and presented to Gen. LaFayette a beautiful bouquet of flowers, for which he politely thanked her.

The mercury stood at ninety, or above ninety degrees, on thirteen days during the month of July.

[1825.] December 17. We have fourteen regular stages running to and from this place three times a week—six of them to Boston; and, also, several one and two horse carriages carrying the mails across the country once a week.

[1826.] January 28. A bell, weighing about thirteen hundred pounds, from the foundry of Col. Revere, of Boston, for the new brick Baptist church, to which is to be attached a clock, was purchased by the donations of a number of citizens of this vicinity, and raised to the belfry the latter part of January.

*This edifice has since been considerably enlarged and beautified. See engraving of it as it now is, in history of the Baptist church.
February 4. On Wednesday morning the thermometer was twenty-six degrees below zero, which is the lowest that has been noticed for the last eight years.

February 18. The joiners' shop, owned by Capt. John Putney, at the East Village, was destroyed by fire. Loss estimated at three hundred dollars.

An unusual influenza at this season pervaded this town, and extended over the whole of New-England.

[1827.] On Thursday morning, May 3d, the hills in Canterbury, and the tops of Kearsarge and Cardigan, in sight of Concord village, were covered with snow, which had fallen two days before.

Died in this town, April 27th, at the residence of Capt. Joseph Walker, Mr. David Sawyer, of Salisbury, aged twenty-one. His body was removed to Salisbury. The cause of his sickness was the lodgment of a stick from an apple tree, exceeding one half of an inch in length and one eighth in diameter, entirely within the eye. It entered the pupil and was invisible to any observer for some length of time. The stick was extracted from the eye; but lock-jaw ensued, which was the immediate cause of his death.

The following is a fair specimen of advertisements for the sale of spirituous liquors, in this town, for many years before the temperance reform commenced:

May 10.

A reading room was opened in Concord, under favorable auspices, on Thursday, May 24th, having, as contributors for its support, about seventy subscribers. The room was the centre room, second story, of the large brick building — now Sanborn's block — near the State House, and was fitted up with much neatness and taste.

The watch and jewel shop of Mr. Timothy Chandler, of this town, was forcibly broken open and entered on Friday night, June 1st, and articles to the amount of from fifty to one hundred dollars taken therefrom.

On Friday morning, June 22d, in attempting to swim across Merrimack river, below Garvin's Falls, Mr. John Thompson, Jr., was drowned, aged thirty — son of Capt. John Thompson, of Concord.

A little son, four years old, of Mr. Atkinson Webster, was killed, July 7th, by the kick of a horse.

A hog, slaughtered by Mr. John Elliot, of this town, eighteen months and one week old, weighed, when dressed, five hundred and eighteen pounds.

Theatre. "At the hall of the Eagle Coffee House, in Concord, on Monday evening, July 28th, will be presented Shakespeare's celebrated tragedy of Othello," &c. "Doors open at seven and a half o'clock."

This was the first experiment of theatrical performances ever tried in this town. The performances were continued every evening through the week, except Saturday — receiving, however, but little patronage. They then closed.

Died in this town, on the 5th of August, of paralysis, Mr. William Stickney, aged sixty-nine. He was attacked in the morning, while about his ordinary business; was insensible through the day, and expired the same evening.

Died in this town, in September, Mr. Oliver Hoit, aged eighty. He was a worthy member of the Baptist church, whose last hours were distinguished by a calm reliance upon that Saviour whose religion he had honored by a uniform life of piety for a number of years.

[1828.] The victory of Gen. Jackson over the British at New-Orleans, January 8, 1814, was celebrated at Concord by an immense concourse of citizens from this town and other parts of the State. A procession was formed at eleven o'clock, in the forenoon, in front of the State House, and moved to the old North Church, where the Hon. Isaac Hill delivered a discourse, which was the first ever delivered by him on a public occasion. Prayers were offered by Rev. Nathaniel Bouton and Rev. N. W. Williams. A sumptuous dinner was served in the area of the State House. A ball at the hall of the Eagle Coffee House, in the evening, was said to be more splendid than any other exhibition of the kind that ever took place in the interior of New-England.*

The Eagle Coffee House, in Concord, kept by William Richardson, was opened for public entertainment in February, 1828.

Died in this town, on Wednesday morning, May 21st, aged twenty-one years, Mrs. Harriet Sherman Bouton, consort of Rev. Nathaniel Bouton. Never has it been our lot to record the death of one in our immediate neighborhood whose departure has excited a more intense or more general interest. The immense crowd of people that attended her funeral obsequies on Friday—the tears that glistened in many eyes—the deep solemnity that pervaded the audience—the long procession that followed to the “house appointed for all the living”—all evisced how strong was the attachment of those who two years ago were to her utter strangers. So young—so beautiful—so innocent, and meek, and unassuming, and yet so interesting—so pious, without affectation—so familiar, without obtrusiveness—so prudent, and yet so artless—hers seemed a spirit too pure and too angelic to be long of the nether world. Until within a few hours of her death, unconscious as was her partner of the alarming nature of her disease, the shock was as sudden as it was overwhelming to him, who was united by early attachment and by the tenderest sympathies.†

Mrs. B. was a daughter of Rev. John Sherman, grandson of Hon. Roger Sherman, of Connecticut. She was born at Trenton, New-York, April 3, 1807,—adopted daughter of Rev. Erastus Ripley, of Meriden, Connecticut; married in Lebanon, Goshen Parish church, September 11, 1825, and died suddenly, of puerperal fever, leaving two children, the youngest a son of one week old.

in the Patriot and Statesman offices, instead of the old fashioned balls, in August, 1828.

The eleventh regiment of the New-Hampshire militia, under the command of Col. Simeon Stevens, paraded for inspection and review, in this town, October 9th, on the same ground — west of the State Prison — upon which were encamped for some time, during the late war, a portion of United States troops. The troops were reviewed by Adjutant General Low.

[1829.] The blacksmith and machine shop, occupied by Gen. Isaac Eastman, on the east side of the river, in Concord, was destroyed by fire early on the morning of the 20th of March. The alarm was given by the ringing of bells, about one o'clock at night. By the aid of engines from the main street, the buildings near the shop were saved. No insurance. Loss estimated at about $500.

Died in this town, December 2d, Phebe Hutchins, wife of Levi Hutchins, aged sixty-three. She was for many years a worthy member of the Society of Friends, and manifested much of that spirit of universal love which she believed ought to be felt and cherished by all.

DEATH OF EZEKIEL WEBSTER.

On Friday afternoon, April 10, 1829, at about half past three o'clock, the Hon. Ezekiel Webster, of Boscawen, while addressing the jury in the Court of Common Pleas, in this town — apparently in perfect health, and with his usual strength and ability — suddenly fell, deprived of sensation and life. He had spoken for nearly half an hour in a full and unfltering voice, and had finished a sentence, when the hand of death arrested his earthly course. The physicians of this town were immediately present, but his soul had left its earthly tenement ere any human aid could be administered.

No language can paint the consternation of the court, the bar, and jurors, together with a crowded audience, whose eyes were riveted upon the speaker at the moment of his sudden exit. The court immediately adjourned, and the body of the deceased was conveyed in a carriage to his boarding-house — Mrs. Mary Ann Stickney’s — and thence to his family mansion, in Boscawen, on Friday evening.

On the opening of the court, on Saturday morning, the Hon. Charles H. Atherton announced to the court the deep feeling which pervaded the bar in this melancholy bereavement, and suitable resolutions were adopted. In the afternoon the court, members of the bar, and a great number of citizens, walked in procession to the North Church, where prayers were offered by Rev. Mr. Bouton.

Mr. Webster was one of the ablest lawyers of the State — a distinguished legislator — and left a rich inheritance in fame for his orphan children. He stood at the head of the Merrimack bar, by every member of which he was honored and esteemed for his courtesy, talents and integrity. The void created by his premature death will not soon be filled.*

In the summer of 1829 an infant school was kept by Mrs. Ruby B. Preston, in Stickney’s hall. About thirty children, between the ages of two and a half and six years, attended. The expense of the first quarter was two dollars and a half a scholar.

The ordination of Rev. Moses G. Thomas over the Second Congregational Church and Society in Concord, took place on the 25th of March, 1829. The services, agreeably to request, were performed in the old North Church. Introductory prayer and reading of Scripture, by Rev. Mr. Gage, of Dunstable, N. H.; sermon by Rev. Mr. Barrett, of Boston, from Romans v: 4; ordaining prayer by Rev. Mr. Gannett, of Boston; charge to the pastor by Rev. Mr. Capen, of South Boston; right hand of fellowship by Rev. Mr. Lathrop, of Dover; address to the Society by Rev. Mr. Gannett, and concluding prayer by Rev. Mr. Gannett.

The corner stone of a new church for the use of the Unitarian Society in this town was laid, with appropriate religious services, by the Rev. Moses G. Thomas, pastor of the Society, on Saturday, May 2, 1829.

In a leaden box, under the corner stone, were deposited, among other things, an historical account of Concord, from the time it was first visited by inhabitants from the eastern continent, in 1639, prepared by John Farmer, Esq.; also, a copy of the New-Hampshire Register for 1829, and a copy of each of the newspapers printed in the town.

Died in this town, Sunday evening, October 25th, Mr. Joseph Wiggin, aged eighty-four. Mr. W. attended meeting in the fore part of that day, but died suddenly in the evening, in a fit of apoplexy.

HISTORY OF CONCORD.

[1830.] The Concord Mechanics' Association held its annual meeting January 6th, and an address was delivered by Richard Bartlett, Esq. The society consists of about fifty master mechanics, and has a library of nearly one hundred volumes for the use of the members and their apprentices. George Hough, Esq., president; Maj. Timothy Chandler and Gen. Isaac Eastman, vice presidents; Jacob B. Moore, Esq., treasurer and librarian; Dea. James Moulton, secretary; Lewis Downing, Benjamin Parker, William Restieaux, David Allison, directors.

The first public measures for a temperance society in Concord were taken on Fast Day, April 1, 1830, by a meeting at the old North Church. On Thursday, the 8th, at the Town Hall, a constitution was adopted, a society organized, and officers chosen, viz.: Timothy Chandler, president; Samuel Morril, vice president; Albe Cady, secretary; Joseph Low, Ira Rowell, Elijah Colby, William Kent and Henry Fisk, executive committee.

At the inspection and exercise of the independent company of light infantry of this town, in May, 1830, under the command of Capt. George D. Abbot, the company abstained entirely from the use of ardent spirit.

On Tuesday evening, April 6th, a meeting was held at the Town Hall, in Concord, to consider the project of a railroad through this State and Vermont, to connect the business of the great western lakes with the tide waters of the Atlantic! Maj. Timothy Chandler called the meeting to order, and Hon. William A. Kent was chosen chairman, and Albe Cady, Esq., secretary. The project was approved, and a committee appointed to correspond on the subject, viz.: William A. Kent, Timothy Chandler, Dudley S. Palmer, Stephen Ambrose, Jeremiah Pecker, Joseph Low, George Kent, Samuel Coffin, Samuel Fletcher and Asa McFarland.

May 19. Mr. Joshua Sawyer, taverner, at the lower end of Main street, committed suicide by hanging.

July 26. The stage now runs three times a week from Burlington, through Montpelier, Hanover and Concord, to Boston, in two days.

August 9. A deer has been seen several times of late upon the interval east of the Merrimack river, a mile from the State House.

September 22. James Stevens, son of Mr. Philip Stevens, of this town, was killed at Quincy, Mass., while working in the granite quarry, by the falling of a huge stone on him. He was buried in Concord.

Mr. William Gault exhibited last week two long white Turkey cucumbers, which grew in his garden this season, one of which is nineteen and a quarter inches long, fifteen and three quarters in circumference, and weighs eight pounds and four ounces. The other is sixteen and a half inches long, twenty and a quarter inches in circumference, and weighs nine pounds and six ounces.*

November 15. On Wednesday last the Concord Light Infantry company, Capt. Joseph E. Estabrook, celebrated its fourteenth anniversary in handsome style. Much interest was imparted to the occasion by the ceremonies attending the presentation of an elegant standard to the company by a number of young ladies of this village. Miss Hannah Hutchins, in behalf of her fair companions, delivered the address.

[1831.] January 31. On Thursday evening last about eighty mechanics of this place partook of a splendid supper at the Columbian Hotel.

April 4. Drowned in Merrimack river, in this town, on Friday last, while employed with other persons in rafting, near West Parish village, Mr. Newell Currier, of Canterbury. The bank of the river on which he stepped caved in, and he immediately sank and was not again seen. Mr. Currier had a wife and two children.

In April, of this year, James Elliot was drowned in the "outlet," so called, at the Borough, aged about sixteen.

April 11. The first annual meeting of the Concord Temperance Society was held at the North Meeting-house, on Thursday (Fast day,) in the afternoon, and was addressed by Rev. Mr. Kelley, of the M. E. Church. The other exercises of the pulpit were conducted by Rev. Mr. Bouton, Rev. Mr. Williams and Rev. Mr. Thomas.

April 25. On Tuesday evening last, about nine o'clock, the aurora borealis presented an unusual and magnificent appearance. There was a brilliant bow in the heavens, the more effulgent horn apparently resting on a dark cloud in the eastern horizon. Light flashed upward from the bow, whilst the stars shone dimly in the sky beneath. In the south, also, waves of light flashed to the zenith.

PARK STREET.*

This beautiful street, which is situated immediately north of the State House yard, and overlooks the same, was opened to the public about this time, by private individuals, principally through the instrumentality of the Hon. Nathaniel G. Upham. The dwelling-house of Judge Upham, of which a view is here presented, is a fine specimen of the best architecture of this period. The house was built in 1831. At first a court was opened to it from State street, but was extended to Main street in 1834, at which time the American house was erected by Mr. John P.

* So called in honor of Stuart J. Park, Esq., architect and builder of the State House.
Gass and his son. This house was built in less time than any other house of its size ever before built in Concord. The site where it stands was occupied by a store called the green store, and by the house owned by the late Mr. Jacob Emmons. These buildings were moved in March—the first a few rods west, and the other a few rods north, where they still remain. The underpinning of the American house was laid in April, and in six weeks and two days the spacious edifice was completed, and opened the first of June for the accommodation of guests. A large number of members of the Legislature obtained board there. The piazza on the front and south side of the house was built subsequently.

On Sunday, May 22, during the afternoon service, a boy by the name of Benjamin Tibbetts, 13 years of age, entered the store of Dea. William Gault, and took from the money drawer the sum of §19.37; but before he had retreated was seized by a young man of the name of Wiggin, who was left in the store in the morning to watch. Tibbetts was examined next morning before Albe Cady, Esq., and the proof being positive against him, he was, for want of bonds to the amount of §100, committed to the jail in Hopkinton, to await his trial in September.

Election Sermon. The sermon before the Executive and both branches of the Legislature, was delivered on Thursday afternoon, June 2, at the old North Church, by Rev. Nathan Lord, D. D., President of Dartmouth College. The text was I. Cor. xiii: 5: "Charity seeketh not her own." This was the last Election sermon in New-Hampshire. The first was delivered by Rev. Dr. Samuel McClintock, of Greenland, in June, 1784, and the practice of having such a service annually was continued till this time. A motion, made by Hon. Charles F. Gove, indefinitely to postpone a resolution introduced by Benj. M. Farley, Esq., "to appoint a committee on the part of the House to select some person to preach the Election sermon next year," was carried by 107 yeas, to 81 nays, and the good old custom henceforth ceased, to the great regret of a large portion of the citizens.

On Sunday, June 12, the lightning struck an elm tree near Mr. Charles Hutchins's, in the south part of the village; and on the 19th it struck another elm, near Mr. Moses G. Atwood's. The last tree was very much shattered.

* See Miscellaneous Chapter,—"Election" and "Election Sermons."

About this time religious meetings, of three or four days' continuance, were held in many places, and attended with remarkable effects in awakening attention to religious concerns. They were called "three" or "four days meetings."

In the summer of 1831 there were connected with the First Congregational Society in Concord fourteen Sunday schools, taught in different parts of the parish, containing four hundred and fifty-five scholars and eighty-two teachers. In the winter one school, taught during intermission, at the meeting-house, contained three hundred scholars.

The New-Hampshire Savings Bank in Concord was instituted in June, 1830. The first year the amount of deposits, by two hundred and twenty-one persons, was $19,443.25.

The General Association of Congregational and Presbyterian Ministers was held at the North Meeting-house, in Concord, September 6th, 7th and 8th, 1831, and was followed by an extensive revival of religion in every part of the town.

Col. Robert Ambrose, of Concord, son of Stephen Ambrose, Esq., on a visit at Boston, rode out of the city on the 20th of September in company with another gentleman, over the Mill-dam, where they met a loose horse pursued by a dog, and running with great rapidity, at which their horse became restive and ungovernable. The other gentleman leaped from the wagon without serious injury, but Col. Ambrose was thrown out with such violence as to fracture his skull and occasion almost immediate death.

The sad intelligence of his death was communicated to his wife and father by Rev. Mr. Bouton, early on Thursday morning—only a few hours before the arrival of the corpse from Boston. It was an occasion of inexpressible sorrow and anguish. The funeral took place in the afternoon of Thursday, attended by a large concourse of sympathizing friends and citizens. Col. Ambrose was thirty-four years of age—a gentleman of great activity and enterprise. For two years in succession, 1829 and 1830, he represented the town in the State Legislature. He left a wife and four children — three sons and a daughter.

DEDICATION OF THE METHODIST MEETING-HOUSE.

The new Methodist Meeting-house in this town was dedicated to the service of Almighty God, on Thursday, December 1, 1831. The order of exercises was as follows: Introductory anthem — "I was glad," &c.; introductory prayer, by Rev. O. Hinds, of Chichester; reading of the Scriptures, by Rev. Samuel Kelley, pastor; hymn, read by Rev. E. Stickney, Hopkinton — "Before Jehovah's awful throne," &c.; dedicatory prayer, by Rev. J. Perkins, of Epping; a selected hymn for the occasion, read by Rev. G. Storrs; sermon, by Rev. G. Storrs, of Portsmouth; hymn, read by Rev. J. Perkins, selected for the occasion; concluding prayer, by Rev. E. Stickney; dismissal anthem; benediction.

The church is forty by sixty feet, including the vestibule, and has about eighty-four pews.

[1832.] On Sunday night, July 15th, six convicts in the New-Hampshire State Prison, who were confined in one cell, effected their escape by splitting out a stone in the roofing of their cell, cutting a hole in the roof of the building, and letting themselves down to the wall by their blankets. All this was accomplished with so little noise as not to alarm the sentinel on duty in the guard-room; and the discovery was not made until Monday morning. On Tuesday four of the six were captured near Hill’s bridge, in Hopkinton, and returned to the prison. Another was taken in Grantham, and one finally escaped.

On the 8th of August a public dinner was given, by his political friends, to Hon. Isaac Hill, at the Eagle coffee-house. Between two and three hundred joined in the festivities of the occasion.

The frame of the meeting-house for the West Congregational Society in Concord was raised August 17th. Prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Bouton. Maj. William Abbot was architect. No ardent spirits were used on the occasion.

[A1833.] A large wolf was killed in this town on Saturday, February 16th, within a mile of the State House. His track was discovered in the north-western part of the town, and followed by a party of hunters from the West Parish for nearly a week, until the wolf was driven into a swamp south of the village, which was surrounded, and he was shot by Capt. Enoch Dow, one of the party who first started in pursuit.

LECTURES ON READING.

A couple of young gentlemen from Andover, Mass.,* are giving a course of lectures in this place upon reading. It is said that they read so well as to draw tears from the audience, even when reading the fable of the old man and rude boy; and that at the introductory lecture, so pathetic was the enunciation, and so affecting, withal, that the audience came near being drowned out by the flood of tears!†

Died in this town, June 14th, Mr. Moses Hall, aged about 50; an industrious and worthy citizen. Mr. Hall rose in the morning, apparently in usual health, and expired in a few minutes afterwards from disease of the heart.

On the 28th of June Concord was honored by the visit of Gen. Andrew Jackson, President of the United States. Agreeably to arrangements, he was met in the afternoon on the line between Bow and Concord by a large cavalcade of citizens and strangers,

* Mr. T. D. P. Stone and Mr. Fackler. †N. H. Patriot, April 30, 1833.
and welcomed to the town by Col. Robert Davis, chairman of the town committee. A procession was formed, which moved to the Plain in Concord, and was met by eight brilliant independent companies, under command of Col. Stephen Peabody, of Milford, for the purpose of escorting the President to his lodgings. The President then left his barouche, and mounted an elegant horse, and the procession moved to the north end of Main street, down State street, through School street, to his quarters, at the Eagle coffee house. The interesting occasion called out an immense concourse of people to see the chief magistrate of the nation. It was estimated that more than ten thousand persons were in Concord on Friday. The President was exceedingly exhausted at evening, and retired to his room at an early hour. At eight o'clock on Saturday morning the troops were paraded west of the Capitol, under command of Col. Peabody, and at nine, the President, accompanied by the Governor and their suites, and Adjutant General Low reviewed them; after which, he repaired to his quarters, front of the capitol, when the troops formed a line from the coffee house to the east door of the capitol, and opened to the right and left, through which the President, the Vice President, his suite, Gen. Miller, Col. McNeil, several ex-governors, and other gentlemen of distinction, passed to pay their respects to the several branches of the civil government. On entering the Representatives' hall the President was announced by Chief Marshal Cushman. The assembly rose, and the Marshal introduced the Governor, who addressed the President, and received a pertinent and pathetic reply; after which the Governor introduced the Council and the President of the Senate. The latter introduced the Senate and Speaker of the House. The Speaker of the House introduced the members individually. He was then greeted by several other gentlemen, and returned to his quarters amid the cheers of thousands. After a little respite the President appeared in the piazza, attended by Vice President Van Buren, Gov. Cass, Secretary of War, and Judge Woodbury, Secretary of the Navy, who were severally introduced to the multitude, with cheers of approbation.

In the afternoon, at three o'clock, the President received the respects of all those citizens who wished to call on him, and visited the State Prison; and at seven in the evening, in the area of the capitol, received the hands of nearly five hundred ladies, who thus expressed their pleasure on seeing the chief magistrate of the United States.

On the Lord’s day, in the forenoon, the President and the gentlemen who accompanied him, attended religious service at the First Congregational meeting-house, and heard Rev. Mr. Bouton from the text Luke x: 20.

In the afternoon they attended the Unitarian meeting, Rev. Mr. Thomas; at four, met the Baptist and Methodist Societies at the Baptist church. Rev. Mr. Cummings offered the prayer, and Rev. Mr. Dow preached.

While the President was attending worship in the old North Church, a Mr. Hewins, portrait painter, took a pencil sketch, from which he painted one of the best likenesses ever taken of the General.

Among those introduced to the President in this town were two lads of from twelve to fifteen years of age, one of whom was named Isaac Andrew, the youngest son of Hon. Isaac Hill, and the name of the other Andrew Jackson. The President took them kindly by the hand, and said, “My sons, I am glad to see you; you are fine boys, and I make you the same legacy I make to all my children—THE EAGLE OF YOUR COUNTRY.” So saying, he drew from his purse, for each, a United States coin, and presenting it, added, “Here, my sons, is the eagle of your country, which during my life I have endeavored to honor and defend. Keep it in remembrance of me; and if ever it should be assailed by a foreign or domestic foe, rally under its pinions and defend it to the last.”

On Monday morning, at seven o’clock, the President left this place on his return to Washington. He was escorted by the Concord committee, on horseback, to the town line, and on the spot where they first had the honor to receive him, opened to the right and left, dismounted and uncovered. The President, with beaver in hand, passed through, gracefully saluting the committee; when their chairman, Col. Robert Davis, briefly repeated the assurances of the pleasure his visit had given, and in the name of the committee and his fellow citizens generally, bade him "God speed." The President took him kindly by the hand, and in a few touching and eloquent words directed him to return his thanks to the committee and citizens, and assure them that their kind wishes were most heartily reciprocated.

Ripe Indian corn was gathered on the premises of Hon. Isaac Hill, in this town, August 7th. The corn was the small eight rowed, planted in May, seed from Montpelier, Vt.

Mr. John Estabrook, of this town, was instantly killed by the explosion of the boilers of the steamboat New-England, on the 9th of October, 1833, at Essex, near the mouth of Connecticut river. Mr. Estabrook had taken passage from New-York, expecting to go to Weathersfield, Connecticut, to meet his wife and child, then on a visit to the family of Amos Pillsbury, Esq., warden of the Connecticut State Prison. By the explosion of the boilers thirteen persons were killed and many more severely injured. Mr. Estabrook was probably blown off the deck into the water, whence his body was recovered in full dress. The watch in his pocket stopped at the precise moment when the explosion took place. Mr. E. was interred at Essex, but subsequently his remains were removed to the family burying ground in Hopkinton, N. H., which was his native place. He was in his 29th year.

Mr. Estabrook was the eldest son of an orphan family, formerly of Hopkinton, to whom he had been, to the best of his ability, a protector and guardian. He married Miss Emeline Abbot, youngest daughter of Mr. Nathaniel Abbot, of this town, July 6, 1829, by whom he had one child, Frederick, who died January 3, 1844, aged 12 years. Mr. E. was a trader,—a young man of active and enterprising habits.

Isaac F. Williams, of Concord, raised the present year in his garden, one hundred and twenty-four bushels of the first quality potatoes, on a little less than one fourth of an acre of land.

On Sunday evening, January 12, 1834, Mr. Ephraim Pettengill was found dead, on the road north-east of Mr. Meshech Lang's, and about one fourth of a mile from his own house. An axe lay by his side, stained with blood, and the main artery of his leg, near the groin, was cut. A bottle of rum was found in his pocket. He started from Mr. Ambrose's store about nine o'clock, on Saturday evening, and it is supposed fell on the edge of the axe and bled to death. An elm tree now marks the spot where he was found.

Died in this town, February 25, 1834, Mrs. Elizabeth Hazeltine, aged one hundred years and six months. Mrs. H. was the oldest person that ever deceased in Concord. She was the fourth child of Mr. Nathaniel Abbot, one of the original proprietors of the town; born July 1, 1733, old style. She married Joseph Hazeltine, and lived in the south-west part of the town, on what is now known as the "silk farm." Mrs. H. was remarkable for kindness of temper, suavity of manners, vivacity of spirit, energy, and for her tenacious memory. This she retained till the last of life. She remembered and related not only early incidents in her life, with great exactness, but things that occurred when she was seventy, eighty, and even ninety years old. On the day she was ninety-nine years old, a sermon was preached at her house by Rev. Mr. Bouton, from Psalms 71: 9: "Cast me not off in the time of old age; forsake me not when my strength faileth." Her hearing was then perfect, her mental faculties bright, and after meeting she held sprightly conversation with many neighbors who visited her. When one hundred years old another discourse was preached at her house, which was numerously attended by persons from the main village, who had the curiosity to see a centenarian. With the exception of her eye-sight, her faculties were still good. She was able to sit up in her armed chair during the whole service, and enjoyed it greatly. After the lecture she said to her pastor—"When you preached here last year from the text in Psalms, 71: 9, I did not expect that I should live to hear another sermon; but I am thankful that the Lord has spared me to hear the word once more. To-day I am a monument of his mercy, and a witness for his goodness and forbearance." On being introduced to children and grand-children of those whom she formerly knew, she addressed them severally with great propriety—often relating some little anecdote suited to the occasion. Mrs. H. was greatly esteemed and beloved by her neighbors—for whom, in sickness and trouble, she would cheerfully sacrifice her own comfort. In middle life she was once called on, in a cold winter night, when the snow was deep, to attend on a neighbor's wife, half a mile distant; and, fastening on snow-shoes, she walked over the top of fences to the place.

The following beautiful sketch of her character was written by the late Miss Mary Clark, and addressed to a friend:

"We proceeded together to visit the venerable matron of ninety-seven, now probably near the close of a long and exemplary life. We found her sitting upright in her easy chair, somewhat more comfortable than she was the day previous. The dimness of her eyesight prevented her from recognizing us, but as we were successively introduced by her grand-daughter, her withered hand was extended to us with the same cordial expression of kindly feelings she was wont to manifest. The same entire trust and confidence in her heavenly Father, the same perfect resignation to his will, the same happy serenity of mind, the same desire to arrive at the end of her pilgrimage, yet the same willingness to wait God's time, are still apparent in her; and I might add, the same benevolent regard for her friends and neighbors, and the whole human family, which has characterized her life and conversation. She converses with much propriety, and seems to retain her mental faculties wonderfully, considering her advanced age and the sorrows of her life. There was always something peculiarly pleasant in visiting her. Her humility of mind; her calm, unobtrusive piety; the sweetness of her disposition; the affability and dignity of her manners, and her intelligent conversation, rendered her society highly interesting. Her's is the evening of a well spent life; an evening without clouds, over which the bright assemblage of her Christian virtues sheds a delightful radiance. And how has she attained this excellence of character? Has it not been by continued perseverance in the way of well doing? Doubtless she has had her conflicts with temptation, her sorrows for sin; she has felt her own weakness, she has lamented her own frailty; but she has been led to the Rock that was higher than she,—she has trusted in the arm that was stronger than hers,—she has believed in Him who is the way, the truth and the life,—she has followed him, and he has owned and blessed her, and will undoubtedly save her with an everlasting salvation. And why may not we do likewise? What hinders us from walking by the same rule, from minding the same thing? The same aids are proffered to us, the same Almighty Power remains to hold us up, that we may be safe from sin and temptation; we also may die the death of this righteous woman, and have our last end be like hers, if we will be careful to live as she has lived, by faith in the Son of God. What though we are weak? He is mighty. What though we are tempted? He can deliver. He can be touched with a feeling of our infirmities, for he was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin. Let us therefore come boldly to the Throne of Grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need. Let us lay aside every weight and the sin which doth easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith, who, for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God.”

“‘True, ’tis a strait and thorny road,
And mortal spirits tire and faint,
But they forget the mighty God
Who feeds the strength of every saint.’”

An Irish emigrant, in a dying state, was found in the barn of Samuel Simpson, of this town, on the 9th of July, and shortly afterwards expired. He was apparently about thirty-five years of age. It was supposed that the cause of his death was the fatigue of travelling on a day of such extreme heat, and his having drunk too freely of cold water. He was respectably interred in the common burying-ground, by the town authorities of Concord.

Died in this town, May 26, of pulmonary consumption, Miss Lydia C. Farnum, daughter of Mr. Ephraim Farnum, aged twenty-seven. She was distinguished for a bright and active mind, a highly finished education, uncommon aptness to teach, personal beauty, and, above all, for Christian excellence. Her death was peaceful and happy.

An unsuccessful attempt was made on the night of July 4 to rob the Concord Bank. The outer door was entered, but the robbers were unsuccessful in forcing the vault.

At Concord, the 4th of July was celebrated by two political parties—both branches of the Legislature joining in the festivities, according to political predilections. Processions were formed of the friends of the Administration at the State House, and of the Whigs at the Court House. The first proceeded to the Brick meeting-house, where Mr. Theophilus Fisk, a minister of the denomination of Universalists, delivered an oration. The latter proceeded to the North Meeting-house, where Leonard Wilcox, Esq., of Orford, delivered an address. Each party had its dinner, toasts and speeches.

MECHANICS’ BANK.

The first meeting of the grantees of the Mechanics’ Bank was held at the Eagle coffee-house, on Tuesday, August 12, 1834, Joseph M. Harper in the chair, and the following board of directors was chosen:

At a subsequent meeting of the directors, Hon. Nathaniel G. Upham was chosen president, and George Minot cashier.

A public dinner was given in Concord, by the Whigs of New-Hampshire, on the 30th of September, to the Hon. SAMUEL BELL, of Chester, Senator in Congress. A splendid pavilion was erected for the occasion, on the common in School street, and about six hundred persons sat down to the dinner. The speakers were Hon. Daniel Webster, John Holmes, of Maine, Ichabod Bartlett, and Senator Bell. Col. Amos A. Brewster, of Hanover, presided at the table; grace was invoked by Rev. Moses G. Thomas, of Concord, and the toasts were read by George Kent, Esq.

September 8, 1834, Abraham Prescott, a young man charged with the murder of Mrs. Sally Cochran, both of Pembroke, was tried before the Court of Common Pleas, held (on account of the large concourse of people) in the old North Meeting-House in Concord. He was found guilty, but allowed a new trial. The second trial took place at the same place, September 8, 1835, and on Saturday, the 12th, at nine, A. M., the jury came into court with a verdict of guilty. Sentence of death was pronounced by Judge Upham on Monday, September 14, and the time of his execution fixed on the 23d of December, between the hours of ten and twelve o’clock. A reprieve was granted by
Gov. William Badger till the 6th of January, 1836, when Prescott was executed, by hanging, at Hopkinton, in the presence of a large concourse of people.

Died in this town, October 30th, Mrs. Anna Willey, at the advanced age of one hundred years, wanting a few days. Through life she enjoyed uniform health, and, until within a few years of her decease, contributed of her own handiwork in the family of her son, Dea. James Willey, with whom she resided. Her age was ninety-nine years, eleven months and six days.

The new prison, or north wing of the State Prison, was completed this year. It is composed of granite, one hundred and twenty-seven feet long and thirty-seven feet wide. The walls are from twenty to twenty-four inches thick and twenty-five feet high. The whole cost was $17,533.75.
CHAPTER XV.

HISTORY OF CONCORD FROM 1835 TO 1845.

The first part of the period of our history from 1835 to 1845, is distinguished for nothing so much as the remarkable spirit of speculation, amounting almost to a mania, which extensively prevailed. It was awakened about the beginning of the year 1835, in relation to lands in the State of Maine, and soon extended to real estate in all the principal cities and villages of New-England. Visionary schemes were projected, airy hopes raised, and extravagant sums paid for land, with the expectation of amassing thereby a large fortune. Lots in Concord, valued at from forty to sixty dollars per acre, suddenly rose to twice and five times that sum; purchases were made—generally on credit—and many lots changed owners. Associations were formed of gentlemen who had by their industry laid up a few hundred or thousand dollars, and the whole placed at stake in a speculating race for wealth. In 1837 the crisis was reached, the bubble burst, and a large part of all who had enlisted in the enterprise found their money gone, without an equivalent. The loss to persons in Concord, principally by speculation in eastern lands, was estimated at from seventy-five to one hundred thousand dollars. The consequence was, a pecuniary embarrassment which lasted long afterwards, and from which some never recovered.

In the mean time the common affairs of the town proceeded in their usual order. As a means of security in case of fires, the selectmen were authorized, in 1835, to purchase two fire engines of a large size, for the use of Main street, and to locate those then on Main street, one at the East and one at the West village.
On recommendation of the selectmen, school district No. 12 was divided and a new district formed on the Dark Plain, (No. 22,) "consisting of the inhabitants living on the turnpike from Philip Stevens's to Pembroke line, from the turnpike to Loudon line, and from the turnpike to Pembroke line, on the Sheep road, so called." A school-house was subsequently built at the angle of the turnpike and Loudon road.

The superintending school committee reported this year the whole number of scholars 1049, in the winter schools, kept by male teachers. Of that number, besides reading and spelling, there were writers, 425; mental arithmetic, 239; written arithmetic, 223; grammar, 175; geography, 228; history, 40; philosophy, 25; chemistry, 7; astronomy, 7; Watts on the mind, 5; algebra and geometry, 9.

SMALL POX.

During the months of August and September, 1835, four cases of small pox occurred in town. The patients were removed to a retired situation, about two miles from the main village (to a house on the Bog road.) One case only proved fatal, viz., Abiel E. Thompson, aged 38, died September 20th. But in consequence of the general alarm produced by this disease in the community, the town, in 1836, adopted a law of the State, passed June 27, 1835, for the prevention of the small pox, and appointed Dr. Ezra Carter agent for vaccinating all the inhabitants of the town.

The selectmen were authorized to demand the highest sum of showmen in all cases, and to withhold licenses for the sale of ardent spirits.

By order of the town, land was purchased of Gen. Robert Davis for a burying ground in the West Parish, north of the meeting-house, at a cost of $190.83. The first person buried therein was Mr. Orlando Brown, taverner in the West village, who deceased December 12th, aged 54.

RAILROAD STOCK.

At a special town meeting, October 10, 1836, William A. Kent, Robert Davis and Joseph Low, having charge of the parsonage and school funds, were authorized to invest the same in two hundred shares* of the Concord Railroad. The same committee were "empowered and directed, for and in behalf of the town, to subscribe for five hundred shares of Concord Railroad stock, and to borrow a sum not exceeding $30,000 at not more than six per cent. interest, redeemable after the year 1845." The same committee were appointed to make application to the Legislature, at its ensuing session in November, "to empower the town of Concord to procure a loan of $30,000, or any less sum, to be invested by the town in the stock of the Concord Railroad."

At a town meeting, held November 7th, on the question, "Is it expedient for the State to grant an appropriation to build an Insane Hospital?" there were five hundred and fifty-three yea's, and sixteen nay's.

SURPLUS REVENUE.

At a special meeting, January 30, 1837, "Voted, That the town will receive from the Treasurer of the State the portion allotted to it of the public money of the United States, deposited with this State, agreeably to the act providing for the disposition of the public money, passed January 13, 1837." Isaac Hill was at the same time appointed agent in behalf of the town, to receive from time to time the town's portion of the aforesaid money, as it should become due; to receipt for the same, and "to pledge the faith of the town for the safe keeping and their payment of the same when demanded by the State treasurer."

"Voted, That the act of the Legislature of New-Hampshire, passed January 14, 1837, authorizing the town of Concord to hire money to be vested in the Concord Railroad stock, be accepted by the town."

At the same meeting the vote of the town, authorizing William A. Kent, Robert Davis and Joseph Low, to subscribe for shares in the aforesaid stock, and to borrow $30,000 on the credit of the town, was renewed; and they were directed to borrow from the agent of the surplus revenue "the portion allotted to the town” as it became due, “for the payment of assessments on said railroad shares.” The agent was authorized to loan the money to the committee, and to take a certificate from them that they had received the same for investment in the aforesaid stock.

At the annual meeting in March the above committee reported that they had received from the agent of the town the first instalment of the surplus revenue, amounting to $4,287. From this had been paid, in part of an assessment on six hundred shares in Concord Railroad stock, $900, and the remainder, $3,927, loaned for the benefit of the town at legal interest, on a note signed by Joseph Low, George Hutchins, George Kent, Amos Wood, Asaph Evans, Samuel Fetcher, N. G. Upham and Samuel Evans. The next year the committee reported three instalments paid to the town, amounting to $14,481.

Stringent regulations were adopted for security against fires; no horses, cattle, sheep or swine were permitted to go at large within the limits of the town. The selectmen were instructed to “cause the hay scales, standing in the highway at the corner of Main and Pleasant streets, to be forthwith removed;” to publish the warrant for the next annual town meeting in two public newspapers of the town; and to purchase a hearse and pall for the new burying ground at the West Village, and build a house for the same.

On the question, “Is it expedient to revise the Constitution?” there were seven yea, and two hundred and seventy nays.

Abiel Walker, Richard Bradley and Isaac Dow, a committee to sell lands on the town farm, reported that they “had sold and conveyed to Daniel Farnum the water power, with about two and a half acres of land and a right of way to the same, for $550.”

A part of the literary fund was this year appropriated to “employ a teacher to instruct in penmanship in the several school districts in town.”

At a special meeting, June 15, 1839, it was voted, “That the income,—after it shall have been accepted by the trustees of the Asylum for the Insane,—accruing from the surplus revenue of the United States, now received by the town of Concord, be appropriated to the use of the Insane Hospital for the term of twenty years, provided said hospital shall be located within the limits of this town.” Robert Davis, William A. Kent and Joseph Low, were appointed a committee to secure said sum to the trustees of the hospital.

A great interest was felt by the citizens generally, and especially of the main village, in the location of the Hospital for the Insane. At a meeting, June 15, a committee of the town was appointed to show the State Committee of Location “the several sites in town proposed for the location and erection of the institution.” This committee consisted of William A. Kent, Richard Bradley, Jonathan Eastman, Theodore T. Abbot, Cyrus Barton, Ezra Carter, Lewis Downing, Joseph Eastman, jr., Timothy Chandler and Abraham Bean. The sites which were examined were, Mr. Jacob Hoyt’s place, on the Mountain, so called; John Glover’s, on the Pembroke road, south-east of Concord bridge; Josiah Stevens’s, near the Bradley monument; the Emery lot, owned by E. S. Towle, including upland and interval, at the place called ‘Paradise;’ also, a lot owned by Francis N. Fisk, on the west side of the road, opposite the Emery lot; and the lot owned by Benjamin Gale and Elisha Morrill, which was finally selected as the location. The chief competition of those interested in locating the hospital was between the Emery place and the Gale lot.

The sum actually appropriated next year from the surplus revenue for the Asylum for the Insane was $9,500 — leaving available for other purposes, $6,293.18.*

The interest in the Concord Railroad had by this time risen to such a pitch that William A. Kent, Robert Davis and Joseph Low, as committee, were empowered and directed, in behalf of the town, to subscribe for two thousand shares of the Concord Railroad stock, and to borrow a sum not exceeding $100,000, redeemable after the year 1850, “the interest on said loan to be paid from the income of the road,” or otherwise, as found expedient!

This amount of stock was not taken, and as the enthusiasm for the railroad cooled down, the town, having paid an assessment of

* See Auditors’ Report, 1841.
$900 on six hundred shares already subscribed for, finally, in 1841, transferred "all their right and title to said six hundred shares to the Trustees of the Concord Literary Institution, to relieve them of their debts and liabilities;" at the same time deciding to "carry on two hundred shares of said stock;" but subsequently the committee having in charge the town funds were instructed to sell one hundred shares of this stock, leaving one hundred shares only, which also were finally disposed of by the committee.*

In 1840 the town voted, "That so much of the interest of the surplus revenue fund as shall be necessary for the purpose, shall be appropriated to pay the poll tax of the town!"

Five hundred dollars were appropriated to be laid out on Dimond's hill, for repair and improvement of the road; one hundred and fifty dollars to build an engine house, and a sum not to exceed five thousand dollars, from the surplus revenue, "to pay the debts of the town." The whole amount of the surplus revenue in March, 1840, including principal and interest which had accrued, was $16,886.84.

CONCORD BANK FAILURE.

About this time (June, 1840,) the failure of the Concord bank occurred, in consequence of which a portion of the Parsonage fund, that is, thirteen shares of the bank stock, amounting to $1,326.25, and a portion of the School fund, (ten shares,) equal to $1,020.25, was rendered worthless.

1842.

At the annual town meeting, 1842, Josiah Stevens, Jr., Joseph Low, Robert Davis, Luther Roby and William Restieaux, were appointed a committee "to purchase so much land as may be necessary for a cemetery or burying ground, in connection with the one near the old North Church," to fence and ornament the same, and five hundred dollars were appropriated for that purpose.

Robert Davis and Joseph Low, the committee who had for several years had in charge the town funds, resigned; and Samuel Coffin, Francis N. Fisk and Seth Eastman were appointed in their place.

*See Town Records, 1841-2.

The average number of paupers at the town farm the past year was only sixteen, and the expense for each pauper eighteen dollars and seventy-nine cents.

In consequence of disturbances which had occurred for several years on the fourth of July, (especially in the evening,) by the assembling of numerous unknown individuals, endangering the property and in some cases the lives of the citizens, the several constables and fire-wards of the town were appointed "to keep the peace, and to assist in quelling any and all disturbances in and about Concord main village, on said fourth of July and at other times."

At the annual meeting in March, 1843, the committee on the burying-ground made the following report:

"The committee appointed at your last annual meeting to purchase land for a cemetery near the North Meeting-house, and fence the same, have attended to the duty assigned them, and have expended the following sums, viz.:

Paid for land, . . . . . . . . . . . $127.50
" lumber, . . . . . . . . . . . . 108.23
" stone posts, iron bolts, building fence, making road, and other labor and services, . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . 321.10

Making in the whole, . . . . . . . . . $556.83

Your committee would state, that they deem the quantity of land which they have purchased and enclosed with the old grave yard, equal to the public wants for half a century; that the whole, with the exception of the front, is enclosed with a fence as durable as they could construct of stone, iron and wood; that the front, until recently, has been occupied with sheds, which have prevented your committee from fencing the same; that a part of the sheds have recently been removed, and consequently the grave-yard is at this time entirely unprotected on the front; and your committee sincerely hope that immediate measures will be taken to complete this work.

Luther Roby,
William Restieaux, Committee."
Joseph Low,
An additional sum, not exceeding one hundred and fifty dollars, was appropriated to finish the fence around the grave-yard, and the horse-sheds were ordered to be removed.

The next year the cemetery was laid out in lots or plats, for the use of families, according to a plan drawn by Capt. Benjamin Parker, under direction of the committee of the town. The committee were authorized to convey a right or title to such lots to any individual, at their discretion, at such price as they deemed proper, not to exceed the sum of ten dollars;—to enter the name of the individual upon the number of the plan corresponding with his lot, and to give him a certificate, which, when entered and recorded by the town-clerk, in a record kept for the purpose, his title to such lot shall be absolute and exclusive.*

The town also voted to "accept the donation of a lot of land from Mr. Charles Smart, for a burying-ground, and the selectmen be authorized to fence the same." This lot lies easterly, at the foot of Stickney's hill, so called, and near the road that runs across from the Stickney Hill road to the old Dunbarton road. Jonathan Stickney, who formerly owned the land, died of the small pox, November 19, 1792, and through a fear of spreading the infection he was buried by his friends in that retired spot; as were, also, subsequently other members of the Stickney family. Mr. Smart bought the land of the heirs of Mr. Stickney, and made a donation of it to the town for the purpose specified.

The selectmen were directed to take a conveyance to the town from Abraham Bean of the property which was conveyed to him by Benjamin Green, and to settle with Mr. Bean agreeably to the conditions of his bond to the town, relating to that property.†

By a vote of the town the selectmen were "authorized to send to the New-Hampshire Asylum for the Insane, at their discretion, any or all insane persons who are now or may become chargeable to the town."

Strict police regulations were this year adopted, respecting the extinguishment of fires and safe keeping of gunpowder; no person being allowed to keep more than twenty-five pounds. Among the offences against the police laws of towns, which were prohibited with suitable penalties, were the following: No person shall make any brawls or tumults in any street or public place; or be guilty of any rude, indecent or disorderly conduct; or insult or wantonly impede any person passing in the streets. No person shall sing or repeat any lewd, obscene or profane song, or write or mark in any manner any obscene word or obscene or lascivious figure or representation on any building, fence, wall, or any thing whatever. No person shall wantonly injure or deface any building, or cut or injure any tree standing in the highway, or rob any garden or field of fruit or vegetables. No person shall use any juggling or unlawful games or plays, or play at any game for money or other property. No one within the compact part of the town shall fire or discharge any cannon, gun or pistol, or beat any drum (without authority from a military officer) or fire any rockets, squibs or crackers, except by permission of the police. Nor shall any person bathe or swim, undressing for that purpose, in the day time, within view of any dwelling-house. If any person shall be found drunk in any street, or other public place; or shall be a common street-walker or prostitute, such person shall be punished therefor: and no person shall sell, give or furnish to any pauper, or person committed to any house of correction, or to any spendthrift or idle person, under guardianship, any spirituous liquor.

At a town meeting, May 27, 1843, the following resolution, offered by Asa Fowler, Esq., was adopted: "Resolved, That the selectmen be requested to grant the use of the Town-hall for the purpose of meetings, to any citizen or citizens who may apply for the same, without regard to the particular religious, political, or other sentiments, if such citizen or citizens will be responsible that the public property shall not be injured by such use."

Failing to elect representatives this year, the town voted "That Franklin Pierce, Richard Bradley and William Low, Esqs., be a committee, with instructions to apply for leave to be heard in behalf of the town before the Legislature," on the subject of a new proportion of public taxes.
One hundred dollars were appropriated for building one or more reservoirs on Main street, between Francis N. Fisk’s and Porter Blanchard’s.

it expedient to abolish capital punishment?" yeas four hundred and three, nays one hundred and fifty-four.
On the question, "Is it expedient to alter the Constitution?"
yeas four hundred and eighty-seven, nays one hundred and seventy-three.
A lot of Parsonage land near Little pond, containing nine and a half acres, was sold to Daniel Farnum for $237,50.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS AND ANECDOTES RELATIVE
TO THIS PERIOD.

[1835.] A company, called the "Sewall’s Falls Locks and Canal Corporation," took active measures, at the beginning of the year, to construct a canal from Sewall’s falls to the East village in Concord, for the purpose of carrying on manufacturing operations. A dam was constructed at the falls above Sewall’s island, and a canal commenced at the same place, to terminate near Federal bridge. Both were left in an unfinished state, and the whole enterprise failed, with a heavy loss to the corporation.
As John Shepard, of this town, stage proprietor, was riding in an open wagon to Hooksett, on Wednesday, January 21st, the harness broke while descending a hill. The horse ran, overturned the wagon, and threw Mr. Shepard out, whose leg was broken by the fall. Another person in the wagon escaped without much injury.
May Day. The return of this anniversary was celebrated in fine style by the members of the "Concord Literary Institution."
The scholars assembled at the Court House early in the morning; then made an excursion into the neighboring fields and woods, in search of flowers. Upon their return the court-room was tastefully decorated with evergreens and artificial fruit trees, and tables spread loaded with bountiful provisions. At half past six in the evening the pupils again assembled. A beautiful hymn, composed for the occasion, was sung, and an address on social habits was delivered by the principal, Mr. T. D. P. Stone. The festivities of the evening then commenced, accompanied with music, and continued until about nine o'clock, under the form of a festive social party.

Died in this town, June 7th, Mrs. Nancy Hazen Brigham, aged forty-two, relict of Mr. Levi Brigham, of Boston, and daughter of the late Capt. Richard Ayer. For the last twenty-five days of her life she endured the most intense sufferings from a total obstruction of the intestinal passage. The disorder had been gradually increasing for the last ten months. She bore her sufferings with remarkable patience and equanimity, sustained by the hope of a blessed immortality through Jesus Christ.

On Wednesday, June 17th, agreeably to appointment by the New-Hampshire Legislature, Hon. Nathaniel G. Upham delivered an eulogy, in the old North Meeting-house, commemorative of the life and services of Gen. LaFayette. The address occupied one hour and forty minutes in the delivery. It was well and ably written. Two hymns, composed for the occasion by Hon. Philip Carrigain, were sung—one by the choir and the other by Mr. George W. Dixon. The discourse was published by order of the Legislature.

In June a company was incorporated in this town, with a capital of $75,000, for the manufacture of silk. Albe Cady, Esq., was chosen president, Moses G. Atwood corresponding secretary, and G. Parker Lyon, treasurer. Albe Cady, Isaac Hill, Abner B. Kelly, Stephen Brown, Samuel Evans, Charles Smart and John Whipple, were chosen directors. The farm formerly owned by Ballard Hazeltine, Esq., in the south-west part of the town, near Turkey pond, was purchased for the purpose. The house was handsomely repaired and several hundred mulberry trees set out. Silk was manufactured in small quantities for a few years, and the business was then relinquished.

THE MORMONS.

On Tuesday and Friday evenings, June 25th and 28th, one of this sect—a Mr. Green—held forth in the Town Hall; and he proposed to continue his lectures until he had given a full exposition of the doctrines and practices of what he termed the "Church of the Latter Day Saints." He made no converts in this town to his new doctrine.

In the summer of 1835 Mr. George Thompson, a celebrated anti-slavery lecturer from England, came to this country. In the month of August he visited Concord, and caused great excitement by his denunciations of slavery, and of all those who did not embrace his views on the subject. On Thursday evening, September 3d, a public meeting was held at the Court House, agreeably to a call signed by seventy-four citizens of Concord, at which Ralph Metcalf, Esq., presided, and George W. Ela and Joseph Robinson were secretaries. The meeting was numerously attended, composed of persons of both political parties—Democrats and Whigs. Addresses were made by Hon. Isaac Hill and Samuel Fletcher, Esq., of Concord, and Hon. Ichabod Bartlett, of Portsmouth. Resolutions were adopted, of which the third was as follows:

"Resolved, That we behold with indignation and disgust the intrusion upon us of foreign emissaries, paid by the money of open enemies to our form of government, who are traversing the country, assailing its institutions and distracting the quiet of the people."

The next day the friends of Mr. Thompson posted up handbills, giving notice that a meeting would be held on Friday evening, at seven o'clock, at the Court House, to be attended by George Thompson and John G. Whittier, when the principles, views and operations of the abolitionists would be explained. This notice produced a general and intense excitement, which it was evident would end in disturbance and tumult, should the meeting be held. Seeing this state of things Gen. Robert Davis, chairman of the board of selectmen, called on George Kent, Esq., a friend of Mr. Thompson, and advised that the meeting should not be held. He also directed Mr. Constable Bean to close the door of the Town Hall — the door of the Court Room (in the same building) being also closed by the sheriff. At the hour appointed, however, persons of both parties began to assemble around the Town Hall. Soon three men were seen approaching, of whom one was supposed to be Thompson — the other two being Whittier, and Joseph H. Kimball, editor of the Herald of Freedom. These three were immediately assailed by the multitude with tumultuous shouts. Dirt and gravel were thrown at them, and they were followed up Washington street, down State street, to the house of Col. William A. Kent, when the people were assured that Thompson was not one of the number. Next the multitude — about two hundred — went to the house of George Kent, Esq., where Thompson was hospitably entertained. Aware of their approach, Thompson left the house, and Mr. Kent also withdrew, leaving the house in charge of Mrs. Kent. Just at this time Gen. Davis arrived, and ascertaining that Thompson was not in the house, and that Mrs. Kent was sick, notified the people accordingly; assured them that Thompson would not attempt to lecture on anti-slavery in town; that their assembling under such circumstances might be deemed riotous, and requested them at once to desist and withdraw. Col. Philip Carrigain seconded the motion, and, lifting his hands and voice, cried, "Come, let us go!" All moved off together; but, constructing an effigy, they paraded it through the principal streets, and afterward burnt it in the State House yard, concluding the whole with a display of fire-works and discharge of cannon.*

On Wednesday evening, December 23d, a fire was discovered in the garret of Hill’s brick building, which originated from a defect in the chimney. The night was intensely cold — the wind blowing fresh from the north-west, and the thermometer twenty degrees below zero. As soon as the fire was discovered Mr. C. R. Winter, clerk in the Patriot counting-room, and J. R. Whitemore, clerk in Brown’s book-store, rushed into the garret, which was filled with smoke and flame, and by well directed efforts extinguished the fire, which otherwise must have rapidly spread and caused immense loss of property.

A meeting was held at the Court House, on Thursday, March 31st, on the subject of a hospital for the insane—Richard Bradley, Esq., in the chair, and Dr. Ezra Carter secretary. After the passage of resolutions approving of the object, the following delegates were chosen to attend the meeting at Portsmouth, on Wednesday, April 3d: Nathaniel Bouton, Hall Burgin, Joseph Low, Charles H. Peaslee, Thomas Chadbourne, Richard Bradley, Theodore French, Ezra Carter, William Kent, Benjamin Gale, Timothy Chandler, Cyrus Barton, George W. Ela, Jacob B. Moore, E. E. Cummings, Samuel Herbert and William Gault.

At this meeting Charles H. Peaslee, Esq., who from the first had manifested a deep interest in the establishment of an asylum for the insane, made an able and effective speech in behalf of the object. Gov. Isaac Hill also recommended the subject strongly in his message to the legislature in June, 1836.

Rev. George B. Cheever, of Salem, Mass., author of the famous "Dream about Dea. Giles’s Distillery," by invitation delivered a temperance address in the old North Meeting-house, on the annual Fast-day, in April. Opposition was shown by sundry persons in the rum interest, and in the evening a party of them—about seven in number—passed through Main street in a noisy manner, and, stopping before Rev. Mr. Bouton’s house, where Mr. Cheever was, assailed the front door—shaking it violently and calling for the man “who dreamed a dream!” The police soon coming, the party withdrew to the State House yard, where they burnt a man of straw in honor of Mr. Cheever! The next day the rioters were arrested, tried before Albe Cady, Esq., and fined three dollars each.

On Friday evening, June 10th, Samuel E. Coues, Esq., of Portsmouth, delivered a very interesting address in the Representatives’ hall, upon the nature and extent of insanity, and the best method of treating it—enforcing the utility, importance and necessity of a hospital for the insane in this State.

The thermometer on Friday, July 8th, was snug up to one hundred degrees in the shade.*

street, in this town, was entirely consumed on Friday, August 26th. The loss was about $300, and no insurance. The fire was discovered about eleven o'clock in the forenoon, and in thirty minutes the building was demolished and the fire extinguished. The house, which was connected with the shop, had a narrow escape.

A printer by the name of Charles Watrous, boarding at the Merrimack hotel, committed suicide by taking laudanum, on Thursday, September 22d. He lately published a paper at Chelsea, Vt., and his valedictory article bears evidence that he had for some time labored under insanity. He was a man of intemperate habits, aged about 36.

DEDICATION OF THE SOUTH CONGREGATIONAL MEETING-HOUSE.

[1837.] On the 1st of February the house erected for the use of the South Congregational Church and Society was dedicated to the worship of God. The building is of wood, with a basement of stone—77 feet in length and 64 in width, and has one hundred and eight pews on the lower floor. In the basement is a convenient vestry, 64 feet in length and 36 in breadth. In front of the vestry are two rooms designed for stores. The house was built under the direction of Capt. Philip Watson. The whole expense of the house was about $10,000.

The body of a man was found in the Merrimack river, July 13th, in the south part of the town, too much decayed to be recognized; but from some articles found with it, it is supposed to be that of John Givens, a native of Ireland, who was missing some time in November last, and supposed at the time to have been drowned in the river.

[1838.] Died in this town, in February, Mrs. Lucia Anne, wife of George Kent, Esq., and daughter of the late Hon. Daniel Farrand, of Burlington, Vt., aged thirty-nine. Mrs. Kent was a woman of uncommon decision and energy of character, combined with cultivated taste and religious sentiment. As a wife, mother, sister and friend, she was greatly esteemed and beloved. A friend and helper of the poor and afflicted, and ardent in all benevolent enterprizes, her charity always reached to the full extent of her means. For several years she was president of the Concord Female Anti-Slavery Society, in which cause she evinced great zeal and resolution. In a period of unusual excitement, in 1835, she showed her decision, in opposition to prevailing prejudices against the blacks, by taking a colored woman with her into church, and sitting by her side in the same pew. When Mr. Kent's house was assailed in search of George Thompson, Mrs. Kent, in feeble health, boldly went to the door, asked what they wanted, and assured them Mr. Thompson was not there. At the time of her decease she was a member of the South Congregational Church. Her funeral was attended by a large concourse of people.

A lad by the name of J. Q. Symonds, aged ten years, was drowned July 10th, a little above Concord bridge, while bathing. He was in the water but about fifteen minutes, yet all attempts to resuscitate him were fruitless.

A direct line of stages leaves the Phenix Hotel, Concord, for Hampton Beach, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, at seven o'clock in the forenoon. Fare, two dollars and fifty cents.

Nathaniel Ewer, Jr., living in the north part of this town, was drowned in Lovejoy's mill-pond while bathing, on Sunday afternoon, July 29th, aged sixteen.
Died, August 9th, Mr. Joseph Bickford, aged sixty-nine. His death was occasioned by falling backwards from a wagon and breaking the spine of his neck. The accident occurred in East Concord, on the road to Canterbury, near the foot of the long hill south of Jacob Hoit's.

NEW-HAMPSHIRE ASYLUM FOR THE INSANE.

The first meeting of this corporation was held, agreeably to public notice, at the Grecian hall, (in the Eagle coffee-house,) August 14th. Richard H. Ayer was chairman, and Samuel E. Coues, of Portsmouth, secretary pro tem. The act of incorporation was adopted, and a committee of five appointed to draft by-laws, regulations, &c., viz.: Daniel M. Durell, of Dover; John H. Steele, of Peterborough; Charles J. Fox, of Nashua; Joel Parker, of Keene; Charles H. Peaslee, of Concord.

BALLOON ASCENSION.

Mr. L. A. Lauriat, a foreigner, proposed a grand balloon ascension in Concord, with his little son in company, September 11th. He was not, however, wholly successful in filling the balloon with gas; but just as it began to rise from the ground Mr. Amasa Powell, of Concord, jumped into the car and went up some two hundred feet, and made a safe descent two miles distant, south of the village. On the 21st of September Mr. Lauriat made a successful and grand ascension. His balloon, completely filled with gas, rose from the ground near the State House, about five o'clock in the afternoon, in the midst of an immense throng of spectators, and slowly and majestically ascended with the daring aeronaut about five thousand feet, moving in a north-westerly direction; then it changed to the north-east and went directly over the Shaker village in Canterbury, when a rope was thrown out, by which the balloon was pulled down. After partaking of the Shakers' hospitality, Mr. Lauriat again ascended, and was borne away toward Northfield, where he descended at six and a half o'clock, sixteen miles from Concord. The greatest altitude he reached was eleven thousand feet. A part of the time he was far above the clouds; at other times in the midst of them, and was wet to the skin by vapor.
Died at the hospital, in Boston, of typhus fever, November 6th, Isaac Shute, Jr., son of Mr. Isaac Shute, of this town, aged twenty-four. Young Shute was a youth of much promise, enterprise and intelligence, and his death was deeply deplored.

Died in this town, on Friday evening, November 9, 1838, Mrs. Elizabeth McFarland, aged 58 years, widow of the late Rev. Asa McFarland, D. D. Mrs. McFarland was born in Boston, March 19, 1780; the only daughter of Mr. Bartholomew and Mrs. Susanna Sewall Kneeland. Her grand-father, Samuel Sewall, of York, Me., was a kinsman of the distinguished chief justice Samuel Sewall, of Massachusetts. She was married to Mr. McFarland in September, 1803. Possessed naturally of superior endowments of mind and heart; with a good education, refined manners, and of singular conscientiousness, humility and devotion of spirit, Mrs. McFarland rendered herself eminently useful in the station which she occupied. In her domestic relations she was a pattern of industry, order, frugality and diligence. Rising early at all seasons of the year, she spent a season in private devotion, before other members of the family were up; thus, as she said, she was prepared and strengthened for the duties of the day. In the instruction of her children, she usually went over with them the studies they were pursuing at school; but most assiduously taught them lessons from the holy Scriptures, and aimed to form within them right moral and religious principles, and to mould them to habits of virtue and piety. By her charity, her self-denial, simplicity in dress and manners, her eminent social qualities, and, above all, by that "ornament of a meek and quiet spirit," which she always wore, she greatly endeared herself to all who knew her, without ever exciting the envy of any. Mrs. McFarland was one of those who not only "devised," but executed "liberal things." She first suggested the plan of the New-Hampshire Cent Institution, in 1804, and of the Concord Female Charitable Society, in January, 1812. With her commenced the first offerings made in Concord for foreign missions. She originated the first female prayer meeting held in town; and by her agency, especially, was the monthly female prayer meeting established in the First Church, in 1816, which is sustained till this time.

After the death of her husband, less occupied with domestic cares, Mrs. McFarland spent a greater portion of her time, each day, in religious devotions and active christian duties for the welfare of others. The north chamber of her house was her closet, which seemed to all who entered it to be hallowed by her devout spirit. In her last sickness, of lingering consumption, she enjoyed in a remarkable degree the presence of her Redeemer and the consolations of his religion. She died in the complete triumph of faith, and in joyful expectation of a glorious immortality.

Of the many excellent women that have adorned society in Concord, at different periods, and whose memory is precious, it may be said in respect of her without envy, "Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all."

On the white monument erected by her children to her memory in the ancient burying ground, are inscribed the fit words of the Saviour — "She hath done what she could."

Mr. Henry Farley died in this town, November 23d, in consequence of a fall of a few feet from a ladder in the wood-shed of his house, striking the back part of his head upon a box, which fractured his skull. He was taken up insensible and died in a few minutes.

In the latter part of December teams crossed the Merrimack river on the ice at the place where the Free Bridge now is—a road being opened across the middle interval for their accommodation.

[1839.] An interesting daughter of Capt. Ebenezer Ridgeway, U. S. N., of this town, five years of age, was so badly burnt on January 1st, by her clothes taking fire, as to cause her death the next day. The child was playing with her brother, two years older, and approaching too near the fire her clothes caught, and before assistance could be rendered were nearly consumed. No other person was in the room with the children at the time of the occurrence.

Died in Concord, February 15th, Mrs. Mary Ann P., wife of Rev. Nathaniel Bouton, aged 34. Mrs. B. was the eldest daughter of the late Hon. John Bell, of Chester. The funeral services at the North Meeting-house, on Monday, 18th, were attended by a large assembly of citizens and christian friends, who testified their deep sympathy on the mournful occasion. An appropriate sermon was preached by Rev. John M. Putnam, of Dunbarton, from Coll. i: 27, "Christ in you, the hope of glory." During her residence of about ten years in Concord, Mrs. B. had endeared herself greatly to the people of the parish, and indeed to all who knew her, by her gentle and affectionate disposition and manners. She was especially distinguished by her native modesty and guileless simplicity of character. She possessed in an uncommon degree the "charity which thinketh no evil." "On her tongue was the law of kindness," and never was it heard to speak evil of any one. She bore her lingering sickness with christian patience and submission, deriving great comfort from the promises of the Bible; trusting in the mercy of God through Jesus Christ. A short time before her death the account of the martyr Stephen was read to her, Acts vii: 56–60. She said, "I desire that the last prayer which shall be offered for me may be the same as his — 'Lord Jesus, receive my spirit.'"

On Sunday, May 19th, a very extensive conflagration took place on the pine plain, directly east of the main village, which, as was estimated, ran over more than a thousand acres, destroying the growth and consuming a large quantity of wood that was cut and in piles. It was believed to be the work of incendiaries.

The large dwelling-house owned and occupied by Mr. Leavitt C. Virgin and Capt. Samuel Blake, of this town, was consumed by fire early on the morning of Tuesday, May 14th. This is the first dwelling-house that has been entirely consumed in this extended village for the last twenty years.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH — LAYING OF THE CORNER STONE.

The corner-stone of St. Paul's Church, in Concord, was laid with appropriate ceremonies, on Thursday, the 13th of June. Service by Rev. Mr. Ten Broeck, assisted by Rev. Mr. Chase, of St. Matthew's Church, Hopkinton. An interesting address on the condition and prospects of the Society was delivered by the Rector, Mr. Ten Broeck. A deposite of various articles was made beneath the corner-stone.

On Friday, July 5th, the dwelling-house of Mr. John Dearborn, of Concord, was struck by lightning. The fluid burst the top of the chimney, sending the bricks in every direction; passed down, bursting the chimney again between the chamber and lower part of the house, throwing off the breast-work, and precipitating the tongs through the cellar door. There were eight persons sitting in the room, yet no one was in the least injured.

The house, barn and shop, belonging to Mr. Jacob Clough, on the hill three miles from this village, on the Canterbury road, were entirely consumed by fire on Saturday, November 9th, about eleven o'clock, A. M. Loss about one thousand dollars. No insurance. It seems the boys had built a fire in the shop where they were husking corn, from which it was communicated to the husks. The buildings were in distinct view of this village, and the engines promptly repaired to the scene of conflagration, but too late to render assistance. The house was formerly owned by Mr. Simeon Virgin.

[1840.] The stagemen's ball, held at the Eagle coffee-house on Friday evening, January 10th, was attended by one hundred and fifty couples, and everything was done up in the neat and elegant style peculiar to the gentlemen of the whip on such occasions.

Col. Stevens, Secretary of State, delivered a lecture upon the subject of common schools, at the North meeting-house, on Fast day, April 9th, before a numerous audience. The subject was ably and eloquently treated.

Died in this town, April 1st, Philbrick Bradley, Esq., aged 84. He was in the battle of Bennington, in Col. Stickney's regiment, and also at the capture of Burgoyne. Mr. Bradley was very social and facetious in conversation, and delighted to entertain the young with stories of olden time. He lived on the Mountain, so called, in East Concord, about three miles and a half from the main village, and was a pensioner of government.

On Saturday morning, September 3d, a small building in the rear of Stickney's block was consumed by fire. The air was still, otherwise there must have been an extensive conflagration, as the building destroyed was in the midst of the most combustible as well as valuable part of the town.

[1841.] The freshet of the second of January was one of the most remarkable ever known on the Merrimack in the winter. On Tuesday week the cold was excessively severe, the mercury down to sixteen, eighteen, and nineteen degrees below zero in the morning. Wednesday moderate, eight degrees below zero, and commenced snowing. Thursday, rain and strong south wind. Friday, as warm as April. At noon the river had risen four or five feet; by night-fall its banks were nearly full. About seven in the evening the ice started, and immediately a crashing sound, nearly as loud as the report of a small cannon, announced the destruction of the east part of the Free bridge, and pier after pier and section after section followed, till, at a little past eight, all but one pier on the west was carried away. One pier of the Federal bridge and two lengths of stringers were carried away. The ice blocked up the channel of the stream above the Lower bridge, and turned the water over the interval, thus saving the bridge. Fears were entertained that the river had cut a new channel for itself, but it soon resumed the old channel. The ice between Wattanummons and Federal bridge was piled up in such quantities that some of it remained till the following May.

On Thursday, January 21st, the Bridewell, situate in the basement story of the wooden building opposite the American House, was discovered to be on fire. In it was confined a fellow named Rufus Orcutt, charged with attempting the life of his wife in a brutal assault which he made upon her. The door of the Bridewell was immediately forced and Orcutt found half buried in the burning straw. When he was taken out it was supposed he was dead. His face, neck and breast were very much burned. Medical aid was soon procured, and he was restored in some degree, but he survived only till Sunday, 24th. He had once been in the State prison for life, but was pardoned, and had threatened, if committed to the Bridewell, to burn it. The fire was extinguished without much damage to the building.

Died in this town, May 9th, Miss Mary Clark, aged 49, daughter of the late Mr. Daniel Clark. Miss Clark was a lady of uncommon gifts and acquirements, of a social disposition, simple in her manners, kind to the poor, ever sympathizing with the afflicted and suffering of all classes. In the latter years of life her health was very delicate, but she was interested in the events of the day, and especially in the cause of peace and the anti-slavery society. She was fond of historic and antiquarian research, and a particular friend of the late John Farmer, Esq. In religious views she was remarkably catholic; admiring and loving all, of all classes and denominations, who possessed a humane and devout spirit, but she was not united with any in a religious profession. A short time before her death she prepared a paper, giving her "dying testimony,—being on the brink of Jordan,—against all those ministers and churches who have refused to pray for the slave."* She directed that her funeral should be without parade, and without the ceremony of an officiating clergyman. Accordingly, the services at the funeral were performed by her friends, Mr. Amos Wood and John B. Chandler.

lecturer, from Canterbury, entered the North meeting-house, (the pastor, Rev. Mr. Bouton, being absent on an exchange with Rev. Jonathan Curtice of Pittsfield,) and interrupted the usual order of services. He first prayed, kneeling in front of the pulpit; then he ascended two or three of the pulpit stairs, and said he had a message from God to deliver. Refusing to desist, as requested by deacons of the church and others, three young men, Lyman A. Walker, James M. Tarlton, and Charles W. Walker, rose and took him, without violence, led him down the broad aisle, out of the front door, and he departed. He then proceeded to the South church, where he conducted in a similar disorderly manner, and whence, with less ceremony, he was ejected.

Mr. Theodore T. Abbott, of this town, who carried on the cutlery business at Millville, contracted to supply the members of Congress, in 1841, with all the cutlery wanted for their use.

[1842.] Mr. Asaph Evans, formerly a trader in the old store corner of Pleasant and Main streets, died in New-York city, January 8th, aged 57 years. Mr. Evans was the first trader in Concord who voluntarily relinquished the sale of ardent spirits, after the temperance reform commenced.

The new Congregational meeting-house in East Concord was dedicated to the worship of God, January 13th. Sermon by Rev. Mr. Bouton.

Mr. Asa McFarland delivered the first lecture before the Concord Lyceum this year, February 4th, on "The Campaign of Napoleon in Russia." The lecture was ably written, and subsequently printed.

Opening of the Railroad to Concord. On Tuesday evening, September 6, 1842, at one fourth before seven o'clock, the locomotive "Amoskeag," with a train of three passenger cars and some baggage, came through from Boston to Concord. The grounds about the depot were thronged with men, women and children, to behold the new and wondrous sight! As the 447 cars came in the multitude raised a cheering shout, and the cannon pealed forth its thunders to celebrate the event.

A few minutes after the arrival, it was announced that the conductor would give the people a ride. Immediately every car was crammed, and scores could not find a place to stand or sit down. The train went a few miles — as far as Bow-crossing — and returned, with the party delighted at the thought that theirs was the first ride in the first hour after opening.

The locomotive, cars and every thing appeared in the finest order. The passenger train commenced running regularly twice a day, and the week following three passenger trains a day were run.

The Universalist meeting-house in Concord was dedicated on Thursday, October 6, two o'clock, P. M. Sermon by Rev. Otis A. Skinner, of Boston.

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH.

The house here represented was occupied by the Universalist Society until June, 1855; when the Society, having decided to erect a new, more spacious and costly edifice, it was sold to the South Free Will Baptist Society, Rev. Hiram Whitcher, pastor, and moved to a lot near the south end of State street.

The "Millerites," so called, believers in the visible advent of Christ and the end of the world in 1843, held a great meeting in Concord the fourth week in July. Having erected and consecrated a spacious tent, capable of holding four thousand persons, on the hill, near where the house of Mr. Abel B. Holt now stands, a violent gust of wind soon after prostrated it to the ground. They next raised the tent in the valley west of the hill: assigning as a reason, 'that in raising the tent on the hill they had exalted themselves, and must move down into the valley of humiliation.' On Saturday afternoon the wind blew violently, attended with rain, which fell in torrents and flooded the ground where the large tent stood, so that they were obliged to desert it. The smaller tents, beds, &c., were completely drenched, and the occupants, amid darkness, thunder, lightning and rain, at midnight, were compelled to seek refuge in neighboring houses and in the public hotels of the village. On Sunday morning a fire engine with hose was used to draw off the water from the place of the encampment. The meeting was largely attended, and produced great noise and excitement among believers in the doctrine.

The workmen on the railroad at the lower end of Main street, near the river, have dug out the bones of two bodies, supposed to be those of Indians.*

On Friday, September 2, a large company of gentlemen and ladies from Concord main village, visited Long pond. The gentlemen caught fish and the ladies cooked them, and with other eatables furnished by the ladies, a fine dinner was prepared. After dinner it was resolved that, henceforth and forever, what had been called "Long pond" should be known as "Lake Penacook." But, notwithstanding the resolution, Long pond is still "Long pond."

On the morning of July 4, at eight o'clock, the corner stone of the new meeting-house, for the use of the First Congregational Society, at the corner of Main and Washington streets, was laid with appropriate religious services, to wit:

1. Singing, 87th Psalm, L. M.
2. Reading of select scripture by the pastor.
3. Depositing a box under the north-east corner stone, containing sundry documents.
4. Prayer, by the pastor.

By the ingenious use of tackling, the whole main body of the house was raised before four o'clock, P. M.

Messrs. Mack and Lambert delivered a course of lectures in Concord during the winter season of 1842, on physiology and anatomy. Their lectures were illustrated by a manikin, or model of a man, so ingeniously wrought and put together in pieces as to require a near inspection to satisfy a spectator that it was not a real living subject. Every portion of the human body, suitable for exhibition before a promiscuous assembly, was exactly represented.

On Wednesday morning, May 11, James M. Abbot, oldest son of Mr. David Abbot, was drowned in Horse-shoe pond. It is supposed that he fell out of a boat—his cap and a boat being discovered floating near each other in the middle of the pond at the time he was first missed. He was eleven years old. His body was soon after recovered.

William Ainsworth, Esq., member of the House of Representatives from the town of New-Ipswich, died at his lodgings in this town June 14th.

FOURTH OF JULY.

Scenes of rowdism and violation of law and order were attempted in this town on the evening of the glorious fourth. A barrel of tar was lighted in the middle of the State House yard, and the tossing of fire-balls begun, when the police of the town interfered, with the design to stop such proceedings. Several persons were arrested, tried and fined. One of the beautiful maples in the State House yard was nearly destroyed by the burning of tar under it.*

On Friday, July 8th, Nathaniel P. Abbot, aged twenty-one, fell from the belfry of the newly-raised meeting-house, and was precipitated from the upper flooring to the ground, a distance of about thirty feet. Before any one reached him he was up and attempting to get upon the sill. A large gash was cut in his head, and he was much bruised, but no bone was broken, or dangerous wound inflicted.

George M. Thomas, aged eleven years and six months, only son of Rev. Moses G. Thomas, of this town, was drowned in Merrimack river on the 13th of July, near the Free bridge. He was bathing with other boys on the easterly side, and was missed about sunset by his companions. Between eight and nine o'clock in the evening search was commenced, and his body was found about half past eleven, P. M., near one of the piers, in about four feet of water.

OPENING OF THE ASYLUM FOR THE INSANE.

The New-Hampshire Asylum for the Insane was publicly opened for the reception of patients the first of November. Price of board for patients belonging to the State, two dollars and twenty-five cents. A patient from Tuftonborough was admitted the week previous, who was rendered insane by the excitement on the subject of the second advent. He prayed, preached, exhorted and harangued upon the subject about four hours every morning, and remained quiet the rest of the day.

Died in this town, October 28, Mrs. Nancy B. Fletcher, wife of Samuel Fletcher, Esq., aged 54. Mrs. Fletcher was a woman of great excellence of character, intelligent, affectionate, charitable to the poor, of exemplary piety, and greatly beloved by a large circle of relatives and friends. Her maiden name was Nancy Bordman, a native of South-Reading, Mass. She was for several years treasurer of the New-Hampshire Cent Institution, and president of the Concord Female Charitable Society.

A man died in this town, November 24th, who confessed on his death bed that he set fire to the barn of William Walker & Co., which was partially destroyed by the flames on the morning of November 15.

On Friday, December 6th, Mr. Horace Call, a young man of Concord, while at work in repairing the Free bridge, across the Merrimack river, fell from the bridge upon the ice, about fifteen feet. His fall was not discovered till some time afterwards, when he was taken up insensible, and supposed to be dead. His right eye and side of his face were much bruised. Dr. Renton was immediately called, and the young man was restored to consciousness and suffered but little permanent injury.

Thomas W. Dorr, who claimed to be governor of Rhode Island, and was leader of the insurrection in that State in 1842, visited this town while under indictment for high treason. He attended public worship, incog., at the North church, December 11th, but on the evening of the 14th a public meeting was held in the Court House, at which he delivered a speech occupying three hours. He was introduced to the meeting by Gov. Henry Hubbard, and his speech was followed by a complimentary address and resolutions by Hon. Franklin Pierce.

[1843.] The evening passenger train of cars, which usually arrives here at about half past eight o'clock, run off the track about half a mile below the depot, on Tuesday evening, January 24th, in consequence of the switch being out of place. But little damage was done.

On Sunday afternoon, night, and Monday morning, February 6th and 7th, we had a very severe snow storm, with heavy drifts. The cuts on the railroad were so filled that neither

* Previous to leaving the old North meeting-house as a place of public worship, a union meeting of the four Congregational churches in town was held in it. The meeting was attended two successive days, viz.: Thursday, 27th, and Friday, 28th of September, in which the several pastors took part, viz.: Rev. Asa P. Tenney, of the West church; Rev. Daniel J. Noyes, of the South church; Rev. Timothy Morgan, preacher at East church, and the pastor of the First church. In the forenoon of Friday the pastor preached a discourse on reminiscences of the old meeting-house. In the afternoon about five hundred and fifty communicants, belonging to the four sister churches, sat down to the Lord's Supper. It was a season of tender and affecting interest. Many wept at the thought of a separation from the place where they and their fathers had so long worshipped.

train of cars due here on Tuesday arrived, and it was impossible to force a passage through from Nashua to Concord until Wednesday afternoon, when the united energies of four powerful engines made a way through the drifts of snow.

APRIL 27. The freshet in the Merrimack river has been higher at Concord than has been known for a great number of years. The water, which a week ago last Monday was the highest, fell some four feet by the last of the week. Since that time, in consequence of rains and rapid melting of snow, it has been rising again. A great portion of the interval is submerged, and the entrances into Concord from the east over Federal and the Free bridges are impassable.

In anticipation that the second advent of Christ and the end of the world would take place on or about the 23d of April, 1843, according to the “Miller doctrine,” a considerable number of people in this and other places, believing it, neglected all worldly business, gave themselves up to religious services; expended their property, and in consequence several became insane, and others were reduced to absolute want. At the time appointed they stood in hourly expectation of seeing the “sign of the Son of Man” in the heavens, and of being caught up in the air to meet him, while the world should be burnt up. A company went to the old burying-ground, to ascend with the rising dead. The day passed without any thing unusual!

TEMPERANCE MOVEMENT IN CONCORD.

At a meeting held in the Court Room the latter part of April, a committee, consisting of the following gentlemen:—Franklin Pierce, Lewis Downing, Abraham Prescott, Hosea Fessenden, Nathaniel B. Baker, Moses T. Willard, Joel C. Danforth, Josiah Stevens, Jr., Zenas Clement, Joseph Low, Francis N. Fisk, Samuel Coffin, Richard Bradley, Chandler E. Potter, Abraham Bean, Joseph F. Dow, Harry Houston, Theodore T. Abbot, Moses Shute and Atkinson Webster, were appointed to report at an adjourned meeting such resolutions and plan, as, in their judgment, would most certainly and speedily cause the use and traffic in intoxicating drinks to cease in this town, except for mechanical and medicinal purposes.
At an adjourned meeting, held at the old North meeting-house, May 7th, the above committee reported the following resolution and pledge, with a preamble and appeal:

"Resolved, That the signature of every individual present be solicited to the following pledge and appeal; and that the same be printed and presented to the citizens of each school district in town for the sanction of their names.

PLEDGE.

"We, the undersigned, citizens of the town of Concord, believing that intoxicating drinks of every description, used as a beverage, are not only useless, but injurious to men in health under all circumstances; and being fully persuaded that it would conduce to the best interests of said town, and tend greatly to promote the morality, happiness and prosperity of its citizens, of all classes and conditions, wholly to abolish the using and vending of such liquors within its limits, except for medicinal and mechanical purposes, hereby pledge to the accomplishment of so desirable an object our best exertions."

This pledge and the appeal which accompanied it was signed by one thousand seven hundred and sixteen inhabitants of the town, male and female.*

Joseph Gerrish, a young man from Boscawen, aged about 25, supposed to be insane, drowned himself in the Merrimack river, near the Free bridge, early on Monday morning, June 19th. His body was found a week after, floating in the river about half a mile below the bridge, soon after the firing of a cannon on the bank near the river, for the purpose of raising it.

Col. Franklin Pierce delivered a most eloquent and powerful address upon the subject of temperance, Thursday evening, June 22d, at the old North church. He held his audience in breathless attention for one hour and a half.

On July 20th the Meredith stage, with sixteen passengers, returning from the White Mountains, was upset on the east side of the Merrimack river, descending from the plain to the interval which leads to the Free bridge. No bones were broken or lives lost, but some of the passengers were bruised and injured.

bridge over the Merrimack river at Hooksett, making repairs, on Saturday, August 5th, fell from the bridge and was precipitated upon the rocks below, about thirty feet. He received a cut on the head, and one wrist and one ankle were broken.

Mr. Eastman relates that in 1839 he went out west, and while in Brown county, Ill., in the month of May, he went with a party of two others to hunt deer. They came in sight of a pack of wolves, four in number, which had infested that section for some time. One of the wolves was shot and killed; the others retreated to their den in the hollow of a large oak wind-fall. At first the party attempted to shut the wolves in, but one not liking the idea of "durance vile," rushed to the mouth of the hole. The party seized him, tied his legs, and laid him down by his dead companion. Then the question was how they should dispose of the remaining two. One of the party proposed to get an axe and cut them out; but Eastman said a better way was to crawl in and shoot them, as old Putnam did. "Well," they said, "you may do it, we won't." Whereupon, loading his gun heavy with buck shot, he crawled into the hollow log till he saw the glare of the wolves' eyes. Discharging his gun it kicked him back, and the confined report nearly stunned him. Recovering, however, he reloaded, crawled in, and gave the wolves another shot. Both were killed, and dragged out of the hole by means of a hook fastened to a long pole. After this exploit, they called Eastman "the little smart yankee."

Jeremiah Pecker, Esq., died in this town August 12th, aged 71. Mr. Pecker was a thrifty farmer, and frequently held responsible offices in town. He was a man of quick wit, of much mechanical ingenuity, facetious in conversation, and a respected and useful citizen.

A severe gale was experienced in this town on the afternoon of Tuesday, August 16th, accompanied with torrents of rain. One of the fine elms in the State House yard was completely destroyed. The main branches were split off and the body of the tree, which was about twenty inches in diameter at the butt, was broken off about twenty feet from the ground.

In the year 1843 thirty-seven new dwelling-houses, making fifty-one tenements, were built in the main village of Concord, besides one large church and various stores, shops and offices.
E. B. Little, Esq., of New-York city, made a donation of five hundred dollars to the Episcopal society in this town, for the purchase of an organ for the church.

Died at the Eagle coffee-house, in this town, Saturday evening, September 30th, of consumption, Charles Walker, Esq., aged 45. Mr. W. was the eldest son of the late Charles Walker, Esq., of Concord. He graduated at Cambridge in 1819, was a tutor in Transylvania University, in Kentucky, with President Holley, two years; studied law with Thomas Addis Emmett, of New-York city, where he went into successful practice and continued until 1835. On account of ill health he visited the West Indies, but afterwards resided at Key West, in Florida, where he received the appointment of District Attorney of the United States. Subsequently he went to Porto Rico, and purchased a plantation, which he cultivated till the spring of 1843, when he returned to the place of his birth—to die! Mr. Walker possessed many admirable qualities, and was greatly esteemed and beloved by all who knew him. He brought a pony from the West Indies, for his use in riding, which, a short time before his death he gave to Mr. James Prescott, in remembrance of boyhood attachments, when Prescott lived in the family of Mr. W.'s father. The gift was made on condition that Prescott should use the pony well, and when too old for service should kindly kill him. This beautiful and tractable animal is yet alive, (1855,) and has had the honor of bearing on his back hundreds of ladies and gentlemen of Concord.

Mr. Walker's monument stands in the range of others of the Walker family, in the north-east section of the old burying-ground.

On the 18th of September, Charles Ferrin, son of Mr. Philip Ferrin, in drawing a charge from a loaded gun, struck the butt of the gun against a beam, with his hand over the muzzle, when the contents of the musket were discharged, badly shattering his hand.

October 23d there was a considerable fall of snow in Concord and vicinity.

On the 3d and 4th of November the printers, binders and booksellers of Concord, formed into two companies, and went out on a shooting match. On the evening of the 4th the game was brought in and counted, and a supper had at Moore’s tavern, north end of Main street. Members of the companies were as follows:

After supper the companies chose N. B. Baker president; True Osgood, Frank S. West, vice-presidents; John M. Hill secretary, and N. J. McClure toast-master.

On the 23d of November a frightened horse, running with the fore-wheels of a wagon, took the side walk below the Phenix hotel, and ran over a little daughter of Ira Perley, Esq., about two years old. By some means the child was thrown from the walk about ten feet, into the street, but received no material injury.

At a meeting of the citizens of Concord, at the town hall, August 9th, without distinction of party, Jonathan Eastman, Esq., was chosen chairman, and A. C. Blodgett and John Whipple secretaries. The proposition was made and unanimously adopted to invite the celebrated Col. Richard M. Johnson, of Kentucky, then about to take a tour in New-England, to visit Concord. This invitation was accepted, and Col. Johnson made his visit to this place on Friday, October 25th. Leaving Boston in the morning by cars, he reached the crossing, near the south line of Concord, about half past ten o'clock in the forenoon, where he was met by Col. Franklin Pierce and Judge Upham, of the committee of invitation. Mounting a beautiful white steed, he rode, escorted by a cavalcade of citizens, as far as the Rumford place, where he was received by the committee of arrangements, and welcomed to the hospitalities of the capital by Ira Perley, Esq. Thence a procession of citizens and soldiers, led by Gen. Charles H. Peaslee, chief marshal, Col. Johnson still mounted on his white horse, marched, amid the firing of cannon and ringing of bells, through Main street, down State street to Pleasant street, and thence to the American house, where lodgings were provided for the distinguished guest. The streets through which the procession moved were lined with people, who saluted him with shouts. The windows and balconies of the houses were thronged by ladies, who testified their interest in the scene by the waving of handkerchiefs and by smiling faces.

Soon after, Col. Johnson was conducted to the hall of the House of Representatives, where he was introduced to the people assembled by Ira Perley, Esq., in a highly appropriate address, to which the Colonel responded. Col. Johnson wore a red vest, the same he had on in the battle of the Thames, at the time he killed the Indian chief, Tecumseh, and which was pierced by eleven bullet shots.

At three o'clock in the afternoon Col. Johnson, with a large company, sat down to dinner in the hall of the Eagle hotel. At the dinner Franklin Pierce presided, assisted by Ira Perley, Joseph Robinson, Thomas P. Treadwell, Joseph Low, Abel Baker and Moses Shute. Speeches were made by the president and others. A beautiful song, written by Mrs. Susan A. Barnes, of Hooksett, was sung by Mr. George Wood with admirable effect. Mr. William Low proposed the question to Col. Johnson— "Did you or did you not, in your opinion, kill Tecumseh?" Col. Johnson then minutely related the circumstances of the battle, and closed by saying, "In my own opinion I did kill Tecumseh!"

In the evening was a public levee at the Eagle hotel, where great numbers had the pleasure of a personal introduction. On Saturday morning Col. Johnson rode about the town, and at noon left by stage for Newport.
INTERESTING INCIDENTS.

On Thursday, November 30th, Anthony Potter, son of Samuel G. Potter, living in the eastern part of Concord, was drowned in Turtle pond while skating. A companion by the name of Parker, rushing to his aid, also fell in, when a third, seeing them, went to their rescue, who also fell in. A dog with them raised a pitiful howling, which attracted the attention of some men near by. By their exertions the two last were saved, but Potter sunk. His body was recovered the next day in about sixteen feet of water. One boot was pulled off. He was about 20 years of age.

At a temperance meeting, December 30th, a committee was appointed to prosecute all persons who continue to sell intoxicating liquors in town.

[1844.] The new road from Concord, east village, to the Shaker village, running west of Oak hill, was opened for public travel early in 1844.

On Friday morning, January 26th, between twelve and one o’clock, one of the watchmen of the State prison, in going his rounds, discovered a fire breaking out in the blacksmiths’ shop in the prison yard. A fire alarm was given, and by the active exertions of the citizens the fire was extinguished, but with a loss to the State estimated at about $1000, and to Messrs. Greeley & Eayres, contractors of the blacksmiths’ shop, at a larger sum. The night was intensely cold, and it was with great difficulty that the engines could be worked.

Early on Saturday morning, February 5th, a fire broke out in the third story of the stone factory, at Fisherville. There being no fire-engine at Fisherville, Mr. Leonard Morrison, on horseback, riding at full speed, gave the alarm to No. 6 engine company, at West Concord, and to the fire companies in Concord main village. Great progress was made by the fire before the arrival of the engines, but it was checked and extinguished; with a heavy loss, however, in machinery and materials. The upper part of the factory was nearly destroyed. There were in operation in the factory one hundred and eighteen looms, and four thousand three hundred and eight spindles — employing about one hundred operatives.

A coroner’s inquest was held on Tuesday, April 2d, on the body of Mr. Ephraim Upham, who was found dead near the railroad track, about half a mile below the bridge over the railroad, at the south end of the town. He had been missing since the night of the 29th of March. He was 67 years of age. It appeared in evidence that Mr. Upham was at the house of Joseph Whitcher, in the evening of the 29th, in a state of intoxication, and, attempting to walk home on the rail track, it is probable he fell and perished in the cold.

April 18. The weather for the past ten days has been as warm and balmy as in June. Last Sunday was almost a hot day. Vegetation is very forward.

July 4. Mr. Carter, who lives near the stream that connects Great Turkey pond with Little Turkey, has fitted up five boats for the accommodation of those who visit the ponds for a boat-ride or for fishing.

There was a temperance celebration in Concord on the 4th, which was numerously attended. A collation was prepared in the State House yard, which was partaken of, as is estimated, by over two thousand persons.

The members of the Universalist society in Concord had a fishing party at Turkey pond July 23d. On their return they drove through the streets of the village, forming a large procession of carriages. First was a four horse carriage, with the Concord band, playing some most excellent and enlivening music; then a carry-all, containing their pastor and family, and others; then three stage-coaches, crowded full and covered on the top with ladies and gentlemen; then several two horse carriages, followed by twenty-six buggies, chaise and wagons.

Died in this town, very suddenly, of disease of the heart, August 23, Mrs. Anna, wife of Mr. Joseph Potter, aged 70. Mr. Potter rose early in the morning, went to his barn, and was absent about fifteen minutes. On his return his wife was a corpse.

Died in this town, September 7th, Capt. David Neal, aged 36. His funeral took place on Sunday, from the Universalist meeting-house. Capt. Neal was buried with military honors, being a member of the Concord light infantry at the time of his death, and formerly commander of the company. A very large procession followed him to the grave.
INTERESTING INCIDENTS.

On the 24th of September a daughter of John Arlin, aged 15, was burned to death.

The drought in this region is extreme. Almost every thing is turned to dust. For three weeks, from September 1st to September 22d, we did not have one drop of rain.

A house belonging to James C. Whittemore, at the north end of Main street, was burned on Thursday, September 26th. One of the chimneys was burned out early in the morning, and it being observed that there were defects in it, by smoke issuing, it was watched till about eleven o'clock in the forenoon, when all danger seemed to be at an end; but in a little more than an hour afterward the house was discovered to be on fire—the fire having been communicated from a defect in the chimney to the flooring of the garret. The engines were upon the ground in good season, and had there been a sufficient supply of water the fire might have been extinguished in fifteen minutes; but in a long drought that had prevailed the wells near by gave out in a few moments. A line of people was then formed to Horse-shoe pond, for the passage of water. The fire was then too far advanced to be checked by the inadequate quantity of water thus supplied, and the house was completely consumed. It was occupied by four tenants—Rev. Sylvester Dana, Justin L. Robinson, Joshua Ingalls and Mrs. Anna True. Mr. Dana lost four or five hundred volumes of theological works, and many articles of bedding and clothing. Mr. Robinson's family suffered severely. The loss of the others was not so great. The house was insured in the Merrimack County Insurance Company for $1000.

Died in this town, October 2d, Hon. Hall Burgin, aged 74. He formerly resided in Allenstown, owning the extensive farm now owned by George W. Ela, Esq. He was a man of great influence in Allenstown, had held the office of Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, and was once a member of the State Senate. Removing with his family to this town, about 1835, he built the elegant brick dwelling-house now owned by Joseph A. Gilmore. Toward the latter part of his life his property became embarrassed. He was highly respected as a citizen.

A shocking casualty occurred in Concord on Friday evening, November 8th, while the democratic party were celebrating the triumph of the New-York election of Polk and Dallas, candidates for president and vice-president of the United States. Mr. John L. Haynes, one of the officers of the Columbian Artillery, had his left arm almost entirely blown off, his right arm dreadfully shattered, and his face shockingly burnt, in the act of ramming down a cartridge. The discharge took place in consequence of the vent not being stopped, in the excitement and hurry of the firing. His left arm was amputated by Dr. Haynes, of Concord.

The number of deaths in town in 1844 was one hundred and thirteen, which is a larger number than ever occurred in a year before. Of these, fifty were children under ten years of age, who died mostly of the bowel, or summer complaint, as it is called, which extensively prevailed this season. Among the number deceased was Mr. Samuel Jackman, formerly of Boscawen, a revolutionary soldier and pensioner. He lived in the easterly part of the town, near Lovejoy's mills, and at the time of his death, August 20th, was the oldest person in town, being 96 years of age. He was a man of uncommon physical vigor, with the exception of his eye-sight. He retained his physical and mental powers, in a good degree, to the last.
CHAPTER XVI.

HISTORY OF CONCORD FROM 1845 TO 1853; OR, TO THE ORGANIZATION OF THE CITY GOVERNMENT.

At a special meeting of the town, September 23, 1845, new rules and regulations were adopted for the organization of the fire department. Four hundred and twenty dollars were appropriated for the purchase of three hundred and fifty feet of hose for engine No. 2; three hundred feet of hose for engine No. 4, and twenty-five feet for engine No. 5. Reservoirs were ordered to be constructed; one between the South Church and Hoyt's tavern, at the south end of Main street; one opposite the State House and west of Green street, and one or more at such other place as the board of engineers of the fire department shall determine.

At the organization of the fire department, according to the new regulations, September 24, Luther Roby was chosen chief engineer, and Arthur Fletcher, George H. H. Silsby, Caleb Parker, Daniel A. Hill, John Haines, John Abbot, Lowell Eastman, Harvey Rice, Benjamin Grover, James Moore, Shadrach Seavey, William Pecker, H. H. Brown, Moses Shute, Benjamin F. Duncklee, Lewis Downing, Benjamin F. Dow, and Stephen Brown, were chosen assistant engineers.

The town also adopted a law of the State, passed at the June session, declaring "that any bowling-alley, situate within twenty-five rods of any dwelling-house, store, shop, school-house, or place of public worship, shall be deemed to be a public nuisance;" and the selectmen were instructed to adopt the proper legal measures necessary to abate such nuisances as then existed in the town. At this time there were four or five bowling-saloons in the compact part of the village, in which some young men spent a portion of their time every day, to the grief of parents and friends, the injury of their morals, and waste of money.

Asa Fowler, Esq., was appointed one of a committee to take charge of the town funds, in place of Samuel Coffin, resigned. Two hundred dollars were appropriated to purchase of Lewis Downing engine No. 3, together with the house, hose, and other fixtures belonging to the same. This engine was purchased by Mr. Downing in 1833, for two hundred and twenty-five dollars, for the protection of his large carriage manufactory establishment, then situated at the south end of Main street, on the spot now owned and occupied by Mr. J. Stephens Abbot & Son.

A law of the State was adopted by the town, authorizing "any two or more contiguous school districts in any town to form a union, for the purpose of maintaining a high school, for the instruction of the older and more advanced scholars." An attempt made to unite the three adjacent school districts in the main village proved unsuccessful.

The superintending school committee reported that "some of the higher branches, History, Philosophy, Astronomy, Physiology and Algebra, had received the attention of the more advanced scholars in district schools."

The auditors reported that "the whole expenditure for the support of the poor the past year, including the interest on farm and overseer's salary, over and above what has been received for that purpose, amounts to $374,49." The average number of paupers, twenty-two and two thirds, and the "income has been sufficient to support them."

The committee having in charge the various funds of the town were authorized to sell and convey, in the name of the town, the real estate formerly owned by Hall Burgin, Esq. This property was mortgaged to the town for money borrowed of the surplus revenue fund. In pursuance of the above authority the Burgin house and land—including the widow’s dower, which the town had purchased—was sold to Mr. Caleb Pratt, late of Hartford, Conn., for $4500. Mr. Pratt died suddenly at his house, September 26th, aged fifty-seven, of disease of the heart.

A sum not exceeding four hundred dollars was appropriated for a new burying-ground in the East village, and for fencing the same. Land for this purpose was bought of the estate of the late Jeremiah Pecker, Jr., and a new burying-ground laid out on the south side of the cross road running east of the meeting-house, to the Loudon road.

The selectmen were “directed forthwith to remove all nuisances called bowling-saloons;” and “to cause the blacksmith shop, stone shop, and all other incumbrances now on the highway and common near the old North Church, to be removed.” The blacksmith shop stood near the corner of the lot where the new house of Francis N. Fisk now stands.

At the annual meeting this year, a sum not exceeding three hundred dollars was appropriated, for enlarging and fencing the burying-ground at Millville, on the Hopkinton road. Permission was given to fence the common about the Biblical Institute, or old North Church, and incipient measures taken towards erecting a new Town-house. These measures were fully carried out after the town became a city. One hundred dollars were appropriated for the support of a Teachers’ Institute in and for the County of Merrimack; a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars to purchase land and fence the same, for a burying-ground at Fisherville. The selectmen were instructed to grant no licenses during the year, permitting the exhibition of circuses; and upon the question, “Is it expedient that a law be enacted by the General Court, prohibiting the sale of wines, or other spirituous liquors, except for chemical, medicinal or mechanical purposes?” affirmative, one hundred and eighty-six; negative, none.
The superintending school committee reported one thousand five hundred and thirty scholars in winter schools, and one thousand four hundred and thirty-two in summer schools, of whom one thousand three hundred and twenty-four were under fourteen years of age.

At a special meeting, May 6th, resolutions introduced by Col. Dudley S. Palmer were adopted, requiring the selectmen to appoint a committee of five, whose duty it should be "to enforce the provisions of the license law against the unlawful sale of intoxicating drinks;" and also "a committee to prosecute every instance of a bowling-alley being used unlawfully;" — the expenses of such committees to be defrayed by the town, not exceeding five hundred dollars.

Our representatives to the Legislature were instructed to oppose the annexation of any part of Bow to this town!

H. H. Brown, Nathaniel Rolfe, Eldad Tenney, Theodore F. Elliot and E. F. Brockway, were appointed a committee to lay out into lots the burying-ground at Fisherville. The selectmen were instructed to pay each member of any engine or hook and ladder company in the town, twenty-five cents per hour for all labor actually performed by him at fires. Luther Roby, chief engineer of the fire department, reported that the expense of constructing reservoirs of desirable materials, and which will contain one thousand cubic feet of water, will vary, according to the kind of earth and depth of excavation, from one hundred dollars to one hundred and sixty dollars; — and that the fire hooks which belong to the town, whenever their use has been attempted, have either broken or straightened out, and consequently thrown down and made a pile of the men attached to them, instead of pulling down the building to which they were attached.

The summer of 1849 was an unusually sickly season, from the prevalence of cholera morbus. In two or three cases the disease strongly resembled what was called the Asiatic cholera. Hence, on petition of Joseph Low, Nathaniel B. Baker and others, the selectmen, June 7, appointed doctors Ezra Carter, Thomas Chadbourne and Charles P. Gage, Joseph Low and Asa Fowler, Esqs., a board of health,—which board immediately adopted sanitary regulations; examined out-buildings and places where stagnant water, decayed vegetables, or other offensive matter was accumulated, and ordered the removal of the same; also recommended to the inhabitants "the observance of strict temperance in regard to food and drink—limiting the diet to the most plain, simple and easily digested articles; avoiding all crude vegetables and unripe fruit, much fresh animal food, large draughts of cold water, and, above all, ardent spirits in every form." This year the deaths in town were one hundred and fifty-eight—a larger number than ever occurred in one year before.

At the June session of the Legislature this year, an act was passed "to incorporate the City of Concord." September 22 the vote of the town was taken on the adoption of the charter. Yeas, 183; nays, 637.

To render the crossings of the highways by the several railroads more safe and practicable, the town voted that the Concord and Claremont railroad, the Northern, and the Boston, Concord and Montreal railroads, should be required to secure the crossing of their respective roads with the Free bridge road, by the construction of bridges; and that at the intersection of the Boston, Concord and Montreal road with the highway near the easterly end of Federal bridge; of the Northern railroad with the highway near Horse-shoe pond; of the Concord and Claremont road with the highway near Horse-shoe pond, near Benjamin Farnum's, and near the Mast Yard, gates should be erected and maintained; and that at the crossing near the West Concord depot a bridge should be built.

A sum not exceeding one thousand dollars was appropriated for the purchase of a fire engine, hose, &c., for the use of engine company No. 3, to be located near Mr. J. S. Abbot's carriage manufactory; and a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars was appropriated to purchase a new hearse and burying-cloth, to be used at the West Parish. The town paid the "Temperance Committee," for services and expenses, seventy-three dollars.
At a meeting, October 8, called "to choose delegates to represent this town in a convention to revise the Constitution of this State, to be held at the Capitol, in Concord, on the first Wednesday of November next," the following ballots were cast:

and others, scattering. This Convention assembled in November. Hon. Franklin Pierce was chosen President of the Convention, which, with adjournments, continued its session till January 3, 1851. Proposed amendments to the Constitution were agreed upon by the Convention, and ordered to be laid before the people, to adopt or reject at the annual town meetings in March, 1851. The amendments were fifteen in number, every one of which was rejected in this town by majorities of from four to six hundred,* and also rejected by a large majority throughout the State.

The Convention again assembled, April 16, and agreed upon three amendments to be sent out to the people, viz.: 1. To abolish the property qualification for office. 2. To abolish the religious test. 3. To empower the Legislature to originate future amendments of the Constitution. These were acted on at the March meeting, 1852, and the vote stood as follows: (1st.) Yeas, 304;

At a meeting November 18, the town appropriated $1500 to pay the award of the road commissioners to the proprietors of Federal bridge, for a highway across the same, and other expenses connected with necessary repairs. The selectmen were authorized to advertise for proposals and to contract for rebuilding said bridge. The Federal bridge thus became free. In 1851 it was rebuilt in the most substantial manner, at a cost to the town of $14,830.14.*

At the town meeting in March, Asa McFarland, Esq., introduced the following, which was unanimously adopted:

"Whereas the tolling of bells on funeral occasions is productive of no good, and may, in case of the illness of the living, result in evil—Therefore,

"Resolved, That the practice be discontinued here, as it has generally been in other populous places."

Thus ended a custom which had been invariably observed since a bell was first used on a meeting-house in Concord. At the funeral of Mrs. Sarah, wife of Mr. Richard Herbert, May 5, the bell was tolled by his particular direction.

A committee, consisting of Joseph P. Stickney, Seth Eastman, and Ira Rowell, reported that in consequence of turning the current of Merrimack river to the east side of Sewall's island, by the Northern Railroad corporation, "from two to three acres of the most valuable interval land had been washed away" from the town farm.

Measures were taken to suppress billiard tables.

The selectmen were authorized to employ two or more suitable persons as a night watch for the main village, and one or more for the village of Fisherville. The persons employed in the main village were Horace H. Holt and Loring R. Cook, who were paid for their services $387.87.

The selectmen were instructed to license but one person to sell

Money was this year appropriated for the construction of new reservoirs: $100 for one near the brick school-house in district No. 10; $100 for one near the house of A. B. Currier; $100 for one near the house of Francis N. Fisk; $50 for one at the brook near Isaac Emery's; $50 for one at the brook near Philip Watson's; $200 for the enlargement of the reservoir in front of the State House, and $50 for one near the school-house in district No. 9.

New Town House. A committee, consisting of Josiah Minot, Richard Bradley, Joseph B. Walker, John Abbot and Nathaniel B. Baker, was appointed, and "authorized in behalf of the town to make such arrangements as they think proper with the county, for the erection of a new building, on or adjoining the site of the present Town House, with a town hall, court room, and other offices in the same." The committee was also authorized "to dispose of the old town house as they may think advisable, and appropriate the proceeds thereof to the new building."

A committee, viz. Sylvester Dana, Asa Fowler, Jacob A. Pot-

* From a report of a committee on the Fire Department, it appears that at this time the town is provided with six good and reliable Engines, which are located as follows: No. 2 near the State Prison, at the corner of Tremont and State streets; No. 4 on the north side of Warren street, a few rods west of State street; No. 3 at the south end of Main street, nearly opposite Abbot & Co's carriage manufactury; No. 8 at Fisherville; No. 6 at the West Village, and No. 7 at the East Village.

In regard to a supply of water, your committee find that there are now in the town fourteen public reservoirs, located as follows: At the south end of Main street, opposite Abbot & Co's carriage manufactury, is a reservoir whose capacity is about 1000 cubic feet; opposite the Thompsonian building is another, whose capacity is about 1000 cubic feet; near the South Church is another, whose capacity is about 400 cubic feet; in front of the State House are three others, whose aggregate capacity is about 2500 cubic feet; at the intersection of Centre and Main streets is another, whose capacity is about 600 cubic feet; opposite the Merrimack County Bank is another, whose capacity is about 600 cubic feet, but which is always fully supplied with water; opposite the house of John H. George is another, whose capacity is about 800 cubic feet; on State street, near the house of Sewel Hoyt, is another, which is supplied by a brook, and is unfailing; on South street, near the house of N. B. Baker, is another, whose capacity is about 1000 cubic feet. Besides these there are others of various capacities, not strictly public reservoirs, located in different parts of the Centre Village—there being three near Warren street, between Main and Green streets; one in the rear of Call's block; one at the intersection of State and Washington streets; one at the intersection of Main and Franklin streets, and various others, of small capacity, which it may be unnecessary here to enumerate.
MISCELLANEOUS MATTERS.

At a town meeting, August 14, Joseph B. Walker, John H. George and Stephen C. Badger, were appointed a committee, "with full power to build a bridewell for the use of the town."

The selectmen were authorized and instructed "to take immediate measures for building a bridge across Merrimack river at Sewall's falls." The bridge was completed the next year as a free bridge.

The annual meeting in March, of this year, was the last ever held in the capacity of a town. On the question of the acceptance of a city charter, which had three times before been rejected, the vote stood: yeas, 828; nays, 559. The usual town officers were elected, who continued in office until the organization of the city government.

From the report of the committee having the town funds in charge, it appeared that at this time the

Parsonage fund amounted to . . . . $4,296,76
School fund . . . . . . . . 8,188,58
Surplus Revenue fund (in 1852,) . . 7,985,30

This latter fund had been borrowed by the town; but as the fund itself was considered the property of the town, and entirely at its disposal, the committee having it in charge, March 13, 1852, were "directed to cancel the certificates of this fund:"—the effect of which was to extinguish not only the debt due from the town, but the fund itself.

The last important business transacted by the town, at this meeting, was passing the following votes:

"Voted, That the committee appointed at the last annual town meeting, viz.: Josiah Minot, Nathaniel B. Baker, Richard Bradley, Joseph B. Walker and John Abbot, be authorized, in addition to the powers and authority given by the vote passed at said meeting, which are hereby renewed and confirmed, to purchase for the use of the town all the premises in said town lying between Main street, on the east; Court street, on the north; Summer street, on the west; and the south line of the Dearborn lot, so called, as it now runs, extended in a straight line westerly to Summer street, on the south—or such parts thereof as they think proper; and that the selectmen be authorized from time to time, in behalf and on the credit of the town, to borrow such sums of money as may be necessary for that purpose, or for any of the purposes mentioned in the vote aforesaid; and that the same be placed at the disposal of said committee."

"Voted, That a committee of three be appointed, with full powers to procure the publication of such portions of the original proprietors' and town records as they may deem expedient, either in connection with the proposed history of the town by the Rev. Dr.
Bouton, or otherwise, at their discretion; and that a sum not exceeding three hundred dollars be appropriated therefor.

"Committee—Nathaniel B. Baker, Jonathan Eastman and Joseph B. Walker."

"Voted, That the selectmen be instructed forthwith to organize the city government."

"Voted, That this meeting be dissolved.

JOHN P. JOHNSON, Town Clerk."

TO THIS PERIOD.

[1845.] A fire broke out in the store of Mr. Albert Herbert, on the corner north of the Merrimack house, Main street, on Saturday evening, May 10th, at half past nine o'clock. By the prompt exertions of the firemen the fire was kept from spreading.
The house of Capt. Samuel Herbert, on one side; the Merrimack tavern and the house of Mr. Richard Herbert, on the other, being in imminent peril, were cleared of furniture, &c., as was also, in part, the house of Rev. Mr. Bouton. The store of Mr. Herbert was totally consumed, together with a considerable quantity of goods. Loss estimated at about $2,500—insurance, $1,800.

A highly interesting, able and exciting political debate took place at a public meeting held in the old North church, on Thursday, June 5th, between Hon. John P. Hale and the Hon. Franklin Pierce. Mr. Hale represented the cause of the Anti-Slavery party and Mr. Pierce that of the Democracy. As usual, the friends of each claimed the victory. A sketch of the debate may be found in the newspapers of that week.

The New-Hampshire Anti-Slavery Society met in the old Town Hall on Wednesday, June 4th. The whole day was spent in discussing the question whether a secretary should be appointed and the meeting regularly organized by the choice of officers. N. P. Rogers, of this town, and others, spoke against organization, and in favor of allowing every member perfect liberty. Stephen S. Foster, of Canterbury, was in favor of organization. The meeting was split on this rock!

Mr. John G. Gould, of Concord, was drowned on Sunday, June 15th, in the Merrimack river, aged 28. He was bathing at the foot of Turkey falls, near the railroad crossing, in company with two others. He swam a few rods to a small island in the river, and on returning was drowned.

Mr. Benjamin Hoit, living near Horse Hill bridge, killed a rattlesnake, in the month of June, which was five feet long and nine inches in circumference. Forty-nine eggs were taken from it. It had twelve rattles, and consequently was supposed to be fifteen years old.

One day last week an eagle, which measured six feet from the tip of one wing to the tip of the other, was shot by a boy only thirteen years old, by the name of Goodrich, in the west part of the town.*

George W. Currier, aged 29, and Alva C. Currier, aged 22, brothers, were drowned in Little Turkey pond on Wednesday evening, July 2d, about six o’clock. Their bodies were found on Thursday morning, about six rods from the shore, in about nine feet of water. They fell from a boat in which they were attempting to cross the pond.

Died in this town, September 5th, at the house of his son-in-law, Lewis Downing, Esq., Mr. Jonathan Wheelock, a Revolutionary soldier and pensioner, aged 85 years. He was born at Lancaster, or Lempster, Mass., and entered the army of the Revolution when he was 16 years old, as a musician. He was at the battle of Bunker Hill, at the capture of Burgoyne, and served through the whole war—occupying the station of drum-major at its close. Not ten minutes before his death he had signed the papers necessary for the receipt of his pension, sitting up in a chair.

Twelve thousand eight hundred letters were mailed from the post-office in Concord during the quarter ending October 1st. The receipts for the quarter ending June 30th were $827,16; and for the quarter ending September 30th, $742,48.

The Rogers' family, consisting of three girls and one boy,* of ages varying from 11 to 17 years, gave a concert at the Unitarian church on Wednesday evening of last week. The house was full, and all were highly satisfied with the performances of this interesting family.†

About the 1st of November Mr. Thomas D. Potter, of Concord, fell from a chestnut tree a distance of thirty-four feet, bruising him, but not fracturing a limb. Twenty-four years ago the same individual fell from the same tree, and the same distance, breaking an arm, thumb, &c.

On the 26th of November a drove of five hundred and twenty-five turkeys passed through our streets—a pleasing sight for the day before Thanksgiving.

Samuel Carr, of this town, took a dose of laudanum on Friday, October 31st, designedly, it is supposed. The application of the stomach-pump relieved him of this, but he died on the next day in a fever, superinduced by the poison.

Mr. George Battes, recently resident in this town, while eating his breakfast on Monday morning, November 17th, dropped from his chair and died instantly. It is supposed he was strangled with meat. He was formerly of Lebanon, about 35 years old, and was a man of intemperate habits.

A blacksmith's shop, at the north end of Main street, caught fire on Saturday forenoon, December 13th, and the roof was nearly destroyed before the fire could be extinguished. It was occupied by Mr. Justin L. Robinson.

Capt. Benjamin Parker, of this town, slaughtered a hog last week, which weighed six hundred and thirty-nine and a half pounds. *

In the month of December a party of four men went from this town to the neighborhood of the White mountains, to hunt for deer. They made their head quarters at Littleton, and were successful in getting ten fine deer in a few days.

[1846.] On Saturday morning, January 3d, about half past six o'clock, the two story wooden building on Main street, owned and occupied by Messrs. Morrill, Silsby & Co., printers, stereotypers, binders and booksellers, was discovered to be on fire in the press-room of the second story. By the promptness of a few individuals, and the exertions of our firemen, it was extinguished in the course of an hour, with but comparatively little damage. The fire was communicated from a stove — in which a boy had a few moments previously kindled a fire, and then left the room — to a quantity of printed sheets which had been hung up to dry on the preceding evening.

At a little past twelve o'clock at night, January 7th, a fire broke out in the spacious frame buildings at the dépôt of the Concord Railroad Company, occupied by Messrs. Gilmore & Clapp for an extensive wholesale grocery establishment, and by the railroad company as a car house.

The building contained an immense amount of West India goods and groceries, comprising a large quantity of flour, lime, oil, plaster, pork, fish, iron, &c., besides four valuable passenger cars and three baggage cars, belonging to the railroad, nearly all of which were destroyed, or so much injured as to be almost a total loss. By the well directed efforts of our firemen on that part of the building in which Messrs. Gilmore & Clapp's safe — containing all their books — was situated, the latter was drawn out but slightly heated, and with the contents uninjured. The building was entirely consumed.

Baker, recording secretary; Asa Fowler, corresponding secretary; I. F. Williams, treasurer; John H. George, librarian and cabinet keeper; Joseph Low, Charles P. Gage, Richard Bradley, Abiel Chandler, managers.

Messrs. E. & G. G. Hook, of Boston, have recently erected, in the First Baptist meeting-house in this town, a splendid organ from their manufactory, a subscription of $1,500 being raised for the purpose.

About two months since a new organ was erected in the new North Congregational church, which cost $1,150.*

A child of Mr. John Shields, an Irishman, was run over by a team heavily loaded with timber, on Monday afternoon, April 20th, and was instantly killed. The wheels passed directly over its head, crushing it in a most shocking manner.

The damages paid by the Northern railroad for land taken for the track of the road, &c., on the east side of Main street, as appraised by the State Railroad Commissioners, were as follows:

On Tuesday morning, May 5th, about half past one o'clock, a fire broke out in one of two barns, owned by Messrs. Joseph and William Low, situated a few rods south of the lower dépôt of the Concord railroad, just west of the track. Both barns were totally destroyed, together with about twelve tons of cotton waste and paper-rags, belonging to Peabody & Daniell, of Franklin. A buggy-chaise, belonging to Gen. Low, and a small quantity of hay, were also consumed. The fire arose from spontaneous combustion of the cotton waste.

The ancient dwelling-house, long owned by Dr. Peter Green, opposite the Court House, on the east side of Main street, and occupied by Irish families, with a small barn and shed in the rear, was nearly consumed by fire on Thursday afternoon, June 18th.

Died in this town, in the evening of Tuesday, August 4th, Henry Harrison Carroll, Esq., aged 33 years; editor and proprietor of the N. H. Patriot and State Gazette. His disorder was congestion of the brain, of which the partial loss of sight for the last three months had been but too sure a precursor,—ending in twenty-three distinct fits of convulsion. Mr. Carroll graduated at Dartmouth College in 1836. As a political writer, for his age, "he was capable of wielding as strong a pen as any other editor in the State."

A considerable shock of an earthquake was felt in this town and vicinity, for twenty or thirty miles around, on Tuesday morning, August 25th, about five o'clock.

The foundation for a new brick school-house, in district No. 10, for which $3,200 had been appropriated, was laid early in September.

A man named Scales, a tailor, at the west parish of Concord, last week presented a note for eight hundred dollars, signed by himself as principal, and two sureties, to the cashier of the Merrimack County Bank, and received the money therefor. It was afterwards found that the names of the sureties had been forged. Scales was arrested, five hundred dollars recovered, and then he escaped.

Mr. Abel Hutchins raised a musk-melon in his garden, this season, four feet and two inches long! At the age of 83, Mr. H. is industrious, and as active as most men of 60.

A fire occurred Saturday, September 26th, in the house of Mr. Samuel Palmer, on Green street, corner of Warren street, which took from the pipe of a boarder, setting fire to a bed on which he lay down to take a nap after dinner.

Died in this town, October 5th, at the house of his daughter, Mrs. Susan Webster, in the East village, very suddenly, Stephen Ambrose, Esq., aged 75. His disease was dropsy in the chest. Mr. A. rose at the usual hour in the morning, nearly completed dressing himself, and had been called to breakfast by his daughter, to which he answered. In about fifteen minutes afterward she opened the door of his room, and found him sitting in an upright posture in his arm chair—dead! For more than forty years he was extensively known as a trader at the East village. He represented the town in the Legislature several years, and filled various important offices of trust and responsibility, with ability and credit. He was an ardent politician, embracing the Whig cause, and was highly esteemed as a kind neighbor and an enterprising and useful citizen. At the failure of the Concord Bank he was its president.*

Lieut. Joseph H. Potter, a son of Thomas D. Potter, Esq., of this town, who graduated at the West Point military academy in 1843, was wounded in the battle of Monterey, September 21, 1846. In a letter to his friends here, dated September 27th, he says: "I was shot through the leg about two inches below the knee — the ball passing between the two bones of the leg and out on the opposite side. I was wounded while storming a battery on one of the hills back of the town. We had three days hard fighting."

An Aged Man. Capt. John Palmer, who died in Canterbury in October, 1846, at the age of 102 years and 5 months, was for many years a resident in this town. He was born in Marblehead, Mass., in May, 1744; followed the sea, in the East India trade, about thirty years, and in the Revolutionary war he was a lieutenant and captain of a privateer. About 1790 he moved to Hopkinton, N. H., where he went into trade; thence he moved to Concord, in March, 1794; from Concord to Canterbury, in 1800, and remained in the latter place till 1816, when he again returned to Concord and lived with his son, Capt. John Palmer, Jr., in the house built by the latter on the Mountain, so called. In 1844 he returned to Canterbury, where he remained till his death. Capt. Palmer was small in stature — about five feet and four inches — but very spry and quick in his motions. Unfortunate in business, he was reduced in his circumstances, and disheartened. For a few years he was somewhat irregular in his habits; but afterwards he became strictly temperate in drink and rather abstemious in food. In his old age he was industrious and active — working at the cooper business, which was his trade, in a little shop near his son's residence, on the Mountain, on the west side of the road. He continued to work till near one hundred years of age. He retained his faculties of sight and hearing, and also his memory, till within a week of his death.

In the evening Prof. Haddock, of Dartmouth College, the State School Commissioner, delivered an address. After he had concluded, Rev. Mr. Bouton introduced a series of resolutions, which, after a full discussion, were unanimously adopted.

One hundred and ten couples attended the stagemen's ball in this town, on Friday evening, January 15th, and had a jovial time of it. The music and entertainment are said to have been excellent.*

A meeting of the citizens of this town was held on Tuesday evening, February 23d, to take into consideration such measures as it might be deemed expedient to adopt for the relief of suffering caused by famine in Ireland. At this meeting a committee was appointed, who issued the following notice:

"The undersigned individuals, having been appointed a committee to receive and transmit to Ireland such contributions of money, provisions and clothing as may be made for those suffering from famine in that country, hereby give notice that they will receive and transmit contributions for this purpose, made by the citizens of Concord and other towns, to Boston, free of expense, whence they will be transmitted free of expense by the committees in Boston to Ireland. INTERESTING INCIDENTS. 481

Died at Loudon, February 13th, Thomas Haines, a Revolutionary soldier, aged 87, well known in this vicinity as "old soldier Haines." He entered the army at the age of nineteen; was at Ticonderoga in 1777, and in the retreat from that place was shot at and his woolen frock pierced in several places with bullets—he being only slightly wounded. He escaped the pursuit of Indians by hiding in a deep ravine. He was in the battle at Bemis’s Heights, near Saratoga, and was shot down and lay among the dead more than forty-eight hours. When found, it seemed doubtful whether the breath of life was in him. He was wounded by a ball passing through his cheeks, from side to side, nearly cutting off his tongue and knocking out most of his teeth. His face bore the marks of mutilation till his death. In the latter years of his life he received a pension from government. Soldier Haines lived many years in a small house about four miles from Concord Main street, towards Chichester, and near the corner of the road leading to the mills on Soucook river, known as Dickerman’s mills. He often came into the main village, and was highly respected. He removed to Loudon only a few months before his death.

In answer to a call* signed by one hundred and fourteen citizens of Concord, a large meeting of those "in favor of a vigorous and determined prosecution of the war with Mexico," was held at the Town Hall, on Monday evening, February 8th. The meeting was called to order by Col. Josiah Stevens, and was organized by the choice of Jonathan Eastman, president; Isaac Dow, Moses Shute, Francis N. Fisk, William Low, Nathan Call, vice-presidents; Joseph B. Walker and John M. Hill, secretaries.

The meeting was addressed by Gen. Charles H. Peaslee, Franklin Pierce, Joseph Low, Charles F. Low, and a letter was read from Lieut. Joseph H. Potter, who was wounded at Monterey, but was then in town.

At this meeting Franklin Pierce, Joseph Low and William Butterfield were appointed to procure subscriptions "in aid of the citizens of New-Hampshire who are attached to the regiment of volunteers" under the command of Col. Caleb Cushing. A subscription from seventy-three individuals amounted to $310.*

Hon. Franklin Pierce having received the appointment of brigadier-general in the United States army for the Mexican war, on Monday evening, May 10th, an elegant sword was presented to him by ladies of Concord. In behalf of the fair ones, Mrs. N. B. Baker, in presenting the sword, addressed Gen. Pierce in a very happy and appropriate manner, to which the General responded.†

A beautiful horse, lately purchased of Col. Fox, of Nashua, by gentlemen in this town, and intended as a present to Gen. Pierce, died last week from the effects of a sudden and severe cold. Since that event several gentlemen, distinguished for their liberality, have purchased and presented to Gen. Pierce the fine black horse which has been owned by William Walker, Esq., the proprietor of the Eagle coffee-house.†

Messrs. Fisk & Norcross, of Lowell, have employed the last winter about one hundred men, in cutting and drawing timber in the vicinity of the White mountains. In the month of May they had upwards of thirty thousand timber logs scattered along the Merrimack river, between Thornton and Concord. These logs are to be carried to Lowell and sawed into lumber for building purposes, in the steam saw-mill of Fisk & Norcross.

† N. H. Patriot, May 13, 1847.
INTERESTING INCIDENTS.

On the first of July, 1847, James K. Polk, president of the United States, visited the capital of New-Hampshire, and was received and entertained in a manner worthy of the high station he occupied.

Patrick Hart, of this town, a young man in the employ of the Concord Railroad, as brakeman, was so severely injured near Lowell, on Monday evening, August 30th, that he survived the accident but a few hours.

The Ancient and Honorable Artillery, of Boston, under command of Gen. J. S. Tyler, celebrated their two hundred and eleventh anniversary on Thursday, September 9, by a visit to the capital of the Granite State. This corps, accompanied by Flagg’s brass band, arrived by the noon train. Disembarking a short distance below the village, they formed in column and marched to the foot of Main street, at which point they were received by the Concord Light Infantry, Capt. Charles A. Davis, attended by the Fisherville band. After the usual ceremonies of reception by the military, Gen. C. H. Peaslee, in behalf of the citizens, welcomed this time-honored corps to the hospitalities of Concord.

Lieut. Charles F. Low, son of Gen. Joseph Low, of this town, sailed for Vera Cruz from New-York, on the 17th of September, with eighty-five recruits of the ninth regiment.

Died in this town, October 6, Mr. Andrew Willey, aged 96 years; the oldest man in town.

Sergeant John C. Stowell and Henry F. Carswell, both of the ninth regiment, and both lately printers in the N. H. Patriot office, died at the camp near the city of Mexico about the first of September. The former was very severely wounded in the battle of the 20th of August. Carswell died of fever.

Died in this town, November 7, Col. John Carter, a revolutionary pensioner and colonel in a regiment in the war of 1812, aged 88 years and 5 months. Col. C. was a native of Concord, and at the time of his decease was the second oldest resident of the place. He was always a firm and consistent democrat, and lover of his country.*

On Thursday night, December 2, about eleven o’clock, the cabinet shop of Mr. Charles E. West, adjoining the foundry, on Warren street, was discovered to be on fire. It had made such progress before it was discovered that the building was nearly consumed before it was extinguished. Loss about $1,500. Four young men, Messrs. Pettengill, Bickford, Ricker and Marden, mechanics employed in the shop, lost their tools, valued at about $200.

[1848.] On Wednesday, January 19, the large and nearly new dwelling-house and barn of M. N. Brown, situated in the north-eastern part of Concord, were entirely destroyed by fire, together with most of his household furniture, thirty or forty tons of hay, a large quantity of grain, farming tools, and a young horse, &c., amounting in value to about $2,500. Insured for $775.

Gen. Pierce arrived in this town, on return from Mexico, January 27, and was received with distinguished honor. It was estimated that between three and four thousand persons were at the railroad dépôt to greet him. At the Dépôt Hall he made a public address. In the evening, a public levee was held at the State House, where he received the congratulations of his friends.

The body of a child, enveloped in a napkin and handkerchief, was found May 1, by some young people who were out “Maying,” in the woods west of the village, near what is known as the New Colony. From appearances when discovered it had probably lain there nearly a week.

Died in this town, May 19, Capt. Samuel Davis, in the 90th year of his age. He was a Revolutionary soldier, and for several years the oldest native of the town. His life was characterized by industry, integrity, and a faithful discharge of life’s duties. He spent much of his time in old age in reading the Holy Scriptures.

A beautiful monument has lately been cut from Concord granite, at Mr. Luther Roby’s stone-yard, at the north end of Main street, to be erected in West Cambridge, Massachusetts, on the spot where Jason Russell and eleven other American citizens were killed by the British army on the 19th of April, 1775.

On Tuesday, September 12, Charles West, son of Hazen K. West, of this village, was struck, at the north end of Main street, by a boy named Quinn. There had been some controversy between them in the former part of the day; and upon meeting, towards night, the latter boy struck West several blows with a stake over the head. He died the next morning. The boys were about 15 years of age. Quinn ran away.

Mr. Theodore A. Hall died in this town on Thursday, October 12, under the following circumstances: Being employed in the wood-shop of the Northern railroad company, on the Saturday previous, he received a severe blow from another workman, which took effect in the region of the chest, or stomach. No bad consequences were apprehended at first; but he soon became very ill, and died in five days after receiving the injury. No malicious intention was imputed to the person who struck him.

On Friday morning, November 24, about two o'clock, as Gen. Joseph Low was returning from a visit to a sick friend, in passing the block opposite Gass's hotel he heard something resembling the cry of an infant in an entry-way next door to S. E. Brown's store. Proceeding to the spot he found a little male infant, apparently about two weeks old, lying on the floor, upon its face, nearly stifled. Gen. Low took the foundling home, and gave it proper care until provided for by the town.

Died in this town, on the 28th of January, of paralysis of the left side, after an illness of about ten days, Hon. David Lawrence Morril, aged 77 years.*

The building owned by Capt. Ebenezer Symmes, and occupied as a bakery and confectionery establishment, was discovered to be on fire on Tuesday morning, February 13. The night was intensely cold, and the fire had made considerable headway at the time of the discovery; yet, by judicious management, it was extinguished. The fire took from ashes which had been thrown out near the building, communicating to a flight of outer stairs, and thence running to the building itself.

On Tuesday evening, February 13, at half past ten o'clock, the quiet of our usually peaceful village was broken by the cries of fire and the ringing of bells. The extensive coach manufacture of J. Stevens Abbot, Esq., (formerly Downing & Abbot,) was found to be on fire, which had made such progress before its discovery as to baffle the exertions of the fire department. The entire establishment, with the exception of a large blacksmith’s shop, (a fire proof building,) was in a few hours laid in ashes.

* See Biography.

An Irishman, named Michael Storan, committed suicide in this town on Tuesday morning, April 8, by drowning himself in the Merrimack river.

Died in this town, March 30, Isaac Emery, Esq., aged 80 years. Mr. Emery was a native of this town, and was for many years the well known landlord of a public house on the east side of the river. He had been twice elected a member of the Legislature, and had held a number of important stations in the gift of his fellow-citizens.

In the evening of March 17, Mr. Henry Larkin, an Irishman of this village, drank by mistake — supposing it to be brandy — a quantity of poison, (tincture of aconite,) enough to kill fifty men; and was immediately thrown into the most dreadful convulsions, and died in about twenty minutes.

The presentation of the sword voted by the Legislature of the State of New-Hampshire to Gen. Pierce, took place June 27, at half past four o’clock, P. M., in front of the State House. The sword was presented by Gov. Samuel Dinsmoor, in presence of a large number of the members of the Legislature and of citizens.

A serious accident, resulting in the death of one individual and the serious injury of two others, occurred on the Concord and Claremont railroad upon the occasion of its opening to Warner, on Friday, September 21. Mr. Matthew G. Gould, of Sutton, aged about 20 years, was accidentally thrown from the platform of a car near Farnum’s crossing, and his legs were shockingly crushed, so that death ensued.

George E. Farnum, aged 15 years, eldest son of Dea. Benjamin Farnum, of this town, was fatally injured on Tuesday evening, September 18, by falling from a scaffolding to the lower floor in his father’s barn, thereby fracturing his skull and breaking his right thigh, causing his death in two or three days.

The clothing store of F. C. Edmunds, in this place, was broken open on the night before Thanksgiving, and about one hundred dollars’ worth of clothing stolen therefrom. A small trunk, containing papers of little value, was taken, but was found the next morning near the Free bridge.
On Friday, December 14, about half past twelve o'clock, the large three story wooden block on Main street, next south of the Eagle coffee-house, called Butterfield's block, was discovered to be on fire, and before men enough to resist it had assembled, the fire had made such progress as to render it impossible to save the building, and it was entirely consumed, together with the two story building next south, owned and occupied by Abraham Prescott & Sons, for the manufacture and sale of musical instruments. Next to that were two "ten footers," and then a two story dwelling-house, all owned by Col. Benjamin Grover — the first of which was nearly burned up and the others considerably injured.

Died in this town, December 22, Mrs. Mary Abbot, aged 85 — just three weeks after the death of her husband, Mr. Samuel Abbot. They had lived together in wedded life sixty-three years, and in their death were not long divided.

[1850.] Mr. Peter Jenness, of Chichester, was instantly killed, on Saturday, February 9, at the crossings of the railroads and Free bridge road. He was coming into the village with a horse and sleigh, just as the eleven o'clock train on the Concord and Claremont railroad was starting out, and either supposing the train had not started, and wishing to cross before it, or for some other reason, he whipped his horse into a very fast gait, and just as the horse had cleared the track, and the sleigh had got square upon it, the engine struck him and killed him instantly — cutting, tearing and mangling his body in a horrible manner. Mr. Jenness was a respectable farmer, about 53 years of age, and has left a wife and children.

Daniel Prince, residing on Pleasant street, committed suicide by cutting his throat with a knife, on Saturday evening, March 23. He survived until Tuesday morning. He was 67 years of age, and leaves a wife. The only cause assigned for this act was the fear of pecuniary troubles, which had no real foundation.

Died in this town, in May, Mr. Nathaniel Ewer, aged 77. He ate his dinner as usual, and, going out of his house, suddenly fell and died.

The grocery and provision store of W. Odlin & Co., in this village, was broken into one night last week, and about twenty-five dollars in money stolen therefrom. It was probably entered by means of a false key.*

On Friday, November 15, upon the Poor Farm in this town, two men were engaged in blasting rocks, and while one of them was charging a seam from a keg of powder which he held under his arm, the charge exploded, igniting the powder in the keg, and very seriously injuring and burning both of the men. Neither of them were fatally injured, but it is a wonder that both were not killed. Their names were Sullivan Davis and Corliss.

Another horrible accident occurred on the Concord and Claremont railroad on Tuesday morning, attended with the loss of two lives. As the morning train was coming through the cut at Farnum's ledge, about two miles above this village, where the highway crosses the track diagonally, it came in contact with a two horse wagon, containing a gentleman and lady coming into town. The horses had barely crossed the track, and the wagon was upon it, when the engine struck the wagon, staving it in pieces, and passing over the bodies of its occupants, horribly mangling and instantly killing the lady, and so injuring the man that he soon died. The persons were William Coult and wife, of Manchester, aged about 55 years. They had been on a journey to Vermont and Western New-York, and were just returning home, when thus suddenly called to another world.

[1851.] On Monday night, November 3, between eleven and twelve o'clock, the dwelling of Mr. David Tandy, near the Sand hill, so called, was assailed by several young men, and violence committed. The assailants on reaching the house commenced calling for the sons of Mr. Tandy, threatening violence if they came out, and that the house would be demolished if they remained within it, accompanying their threats with a volley of oaths. The sons, David and Calvin L., went out to resist the assault, when they were saluted by stones, one of which struck Calvin L. Tandy in the forehead, just above the right eye, and fractured his skull.

MISSIONARY CONVENTION. A convention was held at the North church, in this town, on the 4th and 5th of November, the object of which was to obtain more full information respecting the state of nations unenlightened by Christianity, and to awaken and diffuse more of a missionary spirit in churches. The convention was well attended by ministers and others from different parts of the country; and great interest was given to the meeting by the presence and addresses of Rev. Mr. Goodell, a returned missionary of the American Board, who has spent about thirty years in the service, and of Dr. Pomroy, one of the secretaries of the Board.

Gen. Robert Davis, of this town, sustained serious injury on Monday, October 6, by falling from the roof of his dwelling-house, whither he went to remove leaves and other obstructions in the gutter. He had a hook attached to a pole—being accustomed to ascend the roof for a similar purpose—which he applied to the ridge-pole, and descended towards the gutter. The hook became detached from the pole, and Gen. Davis was precipitated to the ground, breaking one thigh and being otherwise injured.

Mr. Stephen Chase, formerly a resident of the East Village, died in Conway a few days since, at the age of 67. Mr. Chase will be remembered by those who were boys in 1812–15, as being the man who had the honor of carrying and beating the first base drum ever seen in the world-renowned Eleventh Regiment of New-Hampshire militia, at a muster which took place on the "lower interval," as it is called, east of Federal bridge.*

The most destructive conflagration ever known in Concord took place on Monday night, August 25, about eleven o'clock. The flames were first discovered issuing from a long, three story wooden building, known as "Mechanics' Row," immediately in rear of the apothecary store of Mr. E. H. Rollins, and which was surrounded by structures as combustible as itself. The fire rapidly spread to the stable of the Eagle coffee-house; thence to a new and elegant brick building, called the "Merchants' Exchange;" near the same time enveloping wooden buildings on the south, owned by Mr. Abraham Prescott and Col. Grover, and on the north the Eagle coffee-house and the brick block occupied for stores, together with all the wooden buildings in the rear. The fire was finally arrested on the north at the building with brick ends, still standing, owned by Mrs. M. A. Stickney, and on the south by the brick building known as Low's block. All the intermediate buildings — forming the business centre on the east side of Main street — were destroyed, with much of their contents. The buildings were mostly insured. The light of this great fire was seen over nearly every part of New-Hampshire — as far as Franconia; also in Thetford, Vermont, eighty-four miles; and in Portland, Maine, one hundred miles from Concord. At Portsmouth, it is said, it appeared as if only twelve or fifteen miles distant, and at Francestown it shone into sleeping chambers like the light of the waning moon. The owners or occupants of the buildings burnt and principal sufferers were as follows: Benjamin Grover, Abraham Prescott, Prescott & Brothers, Jane Dustin, Allison & Gault, Porter, Rolfe & Brown, William Walker, Jr., E. H. Rollins, Mrs. M. A. Stickney— owners; John Gibson, of the Eagle hotel; Jacob Carter & Son, C. W. Gardner, J. & C. Munroe, C. W. Harvey, Nathaniel Evans, Jr., Page & Fay, Johnson & Dewey, Moore & Cilley, C. E. Savory & Co., Brown & Young, G. P. Lyon, Sylvester Dana, Ephraim Eaton, B. W. Sanborn, McFarland & Jenks, J. Prescott & Co., G. D. Abbot, Fogg & Wiggin, Dr. T. Haynes, David Winkley, R. C. Osgood, H. A. & A. H. Bellows, Peaslee & George, C. Ainsworth, James Peverly, Tripp & Osgood, G. Bullock, B. Gage, S. G. Sylvester, Miss A. Hamlin, Reed & Stanley, Norton & Crawford — occupants.

Discourses of a kind naturally suggested by the fire were delivered to most, if not all of the congregations here, on the following Sabbath.

Mr. John F. Brown, of this town, the well known book-seller and publisher, presented us on Wednesday with an apple raised by himself, which weighs seventeen ounces, and the greatest circumference of which is thirteen and a half inches.*

The mansion house of the late Gov. Hill was purchased on Monday, September 22, by Isaac Danforth, Esq., of Boston. The price at which it was bid off was $4,450.

* Statesman, September 27.
The freight train down over the Northern railroad, last week, consisted of one hundred and ninety-four, and on Tuesday, October 7, of two hundred and forty-two loaded cars.

[1852.] On new year's day two of our young men were removed from us by death. Mr. Marshall B. Colby, station agent on the Claremont road at the Mast Yard dépôt, was crushed to death between two cars, and Mr. Lyman Aldrich died on the same day of inflammation of the lungs, following a course of typhus fever. The funeral services of both were attended on the following Sabbath, at the West Parish church. Sermon by Rev. A. P. Tenney.

On Friday morning, January 23, between three and four o'clock, a fire was discovered in a small wooden building on the Free bridge road, within a few feet of a range of wooden buildings on Main street, owned by Mrs. Mary Ann Stickney, to which the fire was soon communicated, and the whole were destroyed. The occupants of the consumed buildings were Daniel A. Hill, furniture ware-house; David Symonds, harness maker; Day & Emerson, marble workers; William Gilman, shoe maker; Eben Hall, tin-ware manufacturer; Joel C. Danforth, whip manufacturer, and Moore & Jenkins, market house.

On Friday morning, April 23, the interval on both sides of the Merrimack river was completely covered with water, extending from immediately east of Main street to the "Dark plain." There was an unbroken sheet of water from the foot of the hill, near the Walker barn, to the East Village. In the distance Kearsarge mountain was seen white with snow.

John McAlpin, assistant road-master on the Concord Railroad, was instantly killed on Wednesday, April 21, by being thrown from a gravel train, which passed over him. He leaves a wife and four children.

On Wednesday, May 19, Rev. Augustus Woodbury, pastor of the Unitarian church in this town, while examining a jam of logs, owned by Fisk & Norcross, at the Concord lower bridge, having stepped upon the timber, fell into the water; and such was the rapidity of the stream, he was instantly carried beneath the thickly imbedded logs, to a point some sixty feet from the upper end of the jam. Fortunately he was rescued from his perilous situation—when death seemed inevitable—by two of the men in Fisk & Norcross's employ. Their names were John Crawford and Abbot Haynes, both of the State of Maine.

A fire occurred on Saturday, May 29, about five, P. M., in the large house—formerly Washington hotel—owned by Mr. Charles Smart, north end of Main street. It was extinguished without much damage.

The new jail, located about three-fourths of a mile from the Main street, at the intersection of Warren and Pleasant streets, was finished the last of May. The site, including about ten acres of land, was purchased of Mrs. M. A. Stickney for $1,100. The building was erected at an expense of $11,000. The labor was performed mostly by contract. The stone work by John C. and Francis Farnum; the wood work by Cross and Warren; the brick work and slating by James C. Whittemore; the copper work and plumbing by J. D. Cooper, and the iron work at the State Prison. The plan was designed by Messrs. George A. Pillsbury, Luther McCutcheon and John Tennant, committee, in connection with John Miller, architect.

The body of an Irishman, named John Montgomery, was discovered floating in the Merrimack river, near the Free bridge, on Wednesday, A. M., June 30. Montgomery, who was lately in the employ of Robinson & Morrill, tanners, of the East Village, was intemperate; and late on Saturday night was in company with one John Quinn and other Irishmen—the whole company having indulged, in the course of the evening, in frequent potations. An inquest on the body was held by Seth Eastman, Esq., and the following verdict returned: "That said Montgomery came to his death on Sunday morning, 27th June, by the hands of some person or persons unknown; and that John Quinn was the person last known to have been in company with him before his death."

The fourth of July was celebrated in Concord pretty much as usual. The bells were rung and salutes fired at sunrise, noon and sunset; chowder parties came off at Long pond and other favorite resorts, and the boys wound up the whole with a little fun in the evening.

Mr. P. C. Holmes, aged 20, son of Charles Holmes, Esq., of Dunbarton, clerk in the store of Mr. B. Plummer Whipple, of Concord, was drowned in the Merrimack river, under the Free bridge, on Sunday morning, between five and six o'clock, where he went to bathe with another young man. His body was found next day about four, P. M., being raised by the firing of cannon on the bank of the river.

Wednesday, August 25, is the anniversary of the great fire in Concord last year. New and elegant buildings have already been erected upon the ruins, and nearly all are tenanted, or ready for occupancy. The hotel, on the site of the old Eagle coffee-house, is to be opened on the first of November, by Maj. John Gibson, and will be the most spacious and elegant in the State.*

An elegant and lofty flag-staff, or liberty pole, near the State House yard, on Main street, was erected in August, by the “Granite Club,” at a cost, with the flag, of three hundred dollars. The main pole is ninety-three feet in length. The flag pole about sixty. The pole and staff were cut in Dunbarton.

The flag-staff erected this season in West Concord is one hundred and ten feet high.

Died in this town, September 8, very suddenly, Mr. John Park Gass, aged 58, extensively known as the popular keeper of various public hotels. Mr. Gass was named for his uncle, Stuart J. Park, Esq.† His mother was S. J. Park. In 1816 he came to Concord with his uncle, and was the overseer of the State Prison convicts, to learn them to hammer stone for the State House. After the State House was finished, Mr. Gass and Dearborn Johnson hired the prisoners to work for them, up to 1820. He then went to Columbia, South Carolina, and built locks and canals on Saluda river, and made a handsome sum of money. Returning to Concord, he bought the Columbian hotel of Maj. Peter Robertson, kept the hotel until 1826, went to Boston, kept the Back-street house, now called Salem-street, stayed there a few months, then went to New-York, and kept the Broadway house until the fall of 1829. At the request of Isaac Hill he then returned to Concord and took the Eagle coffee-house, and kept it until 1834 — having for about two years of the same time the charge also of the Columbian hotel. In 1834, in connection with his son John, he built the American house, where he continued till 1847, when he went into the grocery business in a store fitted up in the basement of the old "Emmons house," immediately north of the hotel. Mr. Gass was one of the most agreeable and popular taverners in New-Hampshire. His accommodations were always on a liberal scale, in which he himself participated; attentive to his guests, sociable and witty in his remarks, he rarely failed to give satisfaction. Mr. Gass died suddenly of apoplexy and congestion of the lungs. He left an only son, Mr. John Gass, proprietor of the American house, and three daughters. Susan, the eldest, married George Wood; Jane Park, married Sullivan H. Sanborn; Mary Ann, married Oliver Greeley.

Three hundred and eighty-two cars, loaded with live stock, passed down over the Concord Railroad on Tuesday, September 14, besides the regular freight trains, amounting in all to five hundred and thirty-four cars.*

Omnibus. Mr. George Dame, of the Pavilion hotel, has started an omnibus, which runs twice, hourly, between the north end of Main street and the dépôt. Upon the panels are views of the State House, Dépôt, and Main street, and a likeness of Gen. Franklin Pierce, painted by Mr. Wolcott, in the employ of J. S. Abbot & Co. This was the first omnibus started in Concord.

News of the death of Hon. Daniel Webster, at Marshfield, Massachusetts, on Sunday morning, October 24, twenty-two minutes before three o'clock, was received in Concord by telegraph at nine o'clock the same morning. The bells of the town were immediately tolled, flags that were on public buildings were lowered half-mast, and the several clergymen in their church services made appropriate allusions to the national bereavement.

On Monday morning, at ten o'clock, most of the stores and offices on Main street were closed, and the citizens, as if moved by a spontaneous impulse, assembled in the Representatives' Hall in the State House, to express in an appropriate manner their feelings on the mournful occasion. A large number of ladies were also present. The meeting was called to order by Edward H.

Parker, M. D., when prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. Bouton. Hon. Ira Perley was chosen chairman, and Dr. Parker secretary. On taking the chair Judge Perley made an appropriate and impressive address. A committee, consisting of W. H. Bartlett, Richard Bradley, N. B. Baker, Ezra Carter, and H. A. Bellows, was then chosen, to report resolutions appropriate to the mournful occasion. On the resolutions being offered, Gen. Franklin Pierce, then in nomination as a candidate for the presidency of the United States, made an address, in which he used the impressive words, "How do mere earthly honors and distinctions fade amid a gloom like this! How political asperities are chastened — what a lesson to the living! What an admonition to personal malevolence, now awed and subdued, as the great heart of the nation throbs heavily at the portals of his grave."*

On Monday evening, January 3, as Hon. Henry Hubbard, of Charlestown, was going from the Eagle hotel, in stepping from the sidewalk at the north end of the block his feet slipped, he fell heavily upon the ice, and struck his left arm upon the curb stone, breaking the bone above the elbow. For this accident the governor sued the town for damages, and obtained a verdict in his favor for about $800.

Benjamin, the only son of Gen. Franklin Pierce, was instantly killed on Thursday, January 6, by a terrible accident to the cars on the Boston and Maine railroad, about one mile from Andover, Mass. In company with his parents he had just left the house of his uncle, John Aiken, Esq., of Andover, for Concord. The cars, running at a rapid rate, were suddenly thrown from the track, and precipitated down a rocky embankment of twenty feet or more. At the time of the occurrence the beautiful boy was standing near his parents, and when the cars went over it was supposed he was thrown forward in such a manner as to fracture his skull and produce instant death. It is remarkable that he was the only one killed, although some were severely and many slightly injured.

His remains were conveyed back to the house of Mr. Aiken, where funeral services were performed on the Monday following, in the presence of a numerous and sorrowing assembly. Rev.

Henry E. Parker, of Concord, officiated. About sixty persons from Concord attended as sympathising friends. Twelve lads, associates and school-mates of "little Benny," attended as pall-bearers. After the services at Andover the remains of the dear boy were brought to Concord and followed by an immense procession from the Dépôt to the ancient burying-ground, at the north end of the village, where they were deposited in the family enclosure, beside those of his deceased brother, Robert, who died November 14, 1843, aged 4 years and 2 months. The silver plate on the coffin of the deceased bears the following inscription: "Benjamin Pierce, died January 6, 1853, aged 11 years and 9 months."

The dwelling-house of Mr. Isaac F. Williams, opposite the South church, took fire on Sunday, January 16, a little past noon—originating probably from a defect in the chimney. It was soon extinguished. The damage from fire and water is estimated at between two and three hundred dollars.

On the 24th of February, John Virgin,* commonly called "Uncle John," or "Old John," was found dead in a small hut near Sugar Ball, where he had lived alone about three years. He was discovered by Mr. Moses Cass and Mr. True George, upon whose information a coroner's inquest was held by Seth Eastman, Esq. When found he was lying on the floor, with only a shirt on, one hand in the stove, (in which was no fire,) and his lower limbs frozen. Virgin was a soldier from Concord in the war of 1812, and was with General Harrison at the battle of "Tippecanoe"—which was a theme for his boasting as long as he lived. He was an invalid, having an ulcerous sore on one of his legs, which was very offensive. Virgin received a pension of $96 a year from the government, and upon this he determined to live independently of every body. Refusing the offer of assistance from the town, he lived alone the latter part of his life, in his little hut, in a most wretched and filthy condition, exposed to the severities of winter, and sometimes without sufficient food, or wood to warm him. He would occasionally visit the main village, where his haggard appearance and his loud, patriotic harangues, always excited attention!† Virgin was a man of violent passions. He had no friends, because he would not have them. He lived alone, died alone, and was buried alone. At the order of the selectmen, on the evening of the day that he was found his body was taken by the sexton, Joseph Brown, and carried to the hearse-house, in the burying-ground by the old North Church. Next morning at 11 o'clock he was buried without the attendance of a single person, except the sexton.

It is but just to remark, that notwithstanding Virgin spent his last days in so wretched a condition, the selectmen repeatedly offered him assistance, and would gladly have made him comfortable. Individuals, also, from the main village sent him many little comforts; and the families near him, at Sugar Ball, particularly Mr. Samuel Clifford's and Joseph Lougee's, looked after him, and from their own table often sent him warm food, and in winter provided him with wood. When he came into Main street people treated him kindly, and even with a degree of respect. Some were always ready to listen to his eloquent harangues, and to applaud him. He had remarkable fluency and command of large words. The following is a specimen, taken from Wheler’s Directory, of 1853:

"When the 'Old Hero,' as 'Uncle John' called General Harrison, was up for the Presidency, he had no more ardent or sincere supporter than John Virgin. We remember him then; and, in imagination, we seem to see him coming down the street with his peculiar gait, staff in hand. Some one accosts him. He halts with military precision and promptness. 'Good morning, Uncle John!' 'Ah! good morning, my friend ----.' 'How is the election going, Uncle John?' And then he brings up the cane from the ground; he unconsciously assumes an oratorical attitude, and then breaks out in the following style:

'Ah! (rising inflection) the gallant General Harrison! whose name has always been allied with victory! illuminating the great American heart like the brilliant meteor, as it madly dashes through the Universe! The heroic General Harrison! whose name, that once struck terror to the hearts of his country's enemies, shall cause still greater consternation among his political foes, when, like the deep rumbling earthquake, or the irresistible tornado, he shall ascend to the throne of the people's grateful heart!

'Glory to the noble General William Henry Harrison! whose fame has already burst upon the distant nations with the swiftness of the comet and the brightness of the lightning's glare! Ever shall his name glow like the sun at mid-day, and the stars by night! [Oratorical pause.] Ah! what mighty voice is that I hear? It is the howl of the angry ocean waves, as they madly dash against the earth-bound rocks! 'Ah! 'tis the uprising of the glorious American people in their majesty, speaking in thunder-tones; reverberating from North to South, from East to West,—The gallant Harrison is our President!'

"At times some wight is hardy enough to disparage the hero of 'Uncle John's' laudation—but wo to him! 'By all the mighty cataracts!' begins the enraged orator; and before he is through with him he drives him into the knot-hole of his insignificance, and then kicks his diminished shadow in after him! But Uncle John is generally very kindly treated, whatever may be the political complexion of his audience."

On the 5th of March, Benjamin Hazen, child of Mr. Robert P. Kimball, aged 2 years and 9 months, accidentally fell into a pail of hot water, and was scalded to death.

CITY OF CONCORD.

The City Charter, which, as already stated, was granted by the New-Hampshire Legislature July 6, 1849, has been published in a permanent form, and distributed generally among the citizens. It is, therefore, deemed unnecessary here to insert it. Strongly attached as many of the people were to the usages of the town organization, and not having experienced personally much inconvenience on account of the increase of population and correspondent changes in the business affairs of the town, they were reluctant to hazard a change from a town to a city government, especially as it was apprehended that the expenses would thereby be greatly enhanced. One strong argument in favor of a city government was found in the inconvenience of the annual town meeting in one place. The number of voters having increased to upwards of two thousand, the annual meeting, in contested elections, was necessarily protracted and tedious—requiring, in repeated instances, four, five and six days to choose officers and transact the ordinary business of the town.
On the question of the adoption of the city charter, four trials were had, which resulted as follows:

Agreeably to public notice, a large number of the people of Concord assembled in the Representatives' Hall, on Wednesday afternoon, April 6, at 2 o'clock, to witness the induction to office of the Mayor elect and the two branches of the City Council.

At twenty minutes past 2, Gen. Joseph Low, mayor elect, arose from the chair of the speaker, addressed the chairman of the board of selectmen, and stated, that having been apprized of his election to the office of mayor, he appeared before his fellow-citizens to take the oath required, before entering upon the duties of his office.

The chairman of the selectmen, John C. Pillsbury, Esq., then invited Hon. Josiah Minot to administer the oath of office, which was done, after which the mayor administered the oath to the aldermen, the common council, the school committee, and the board of assessors.

The aldermen, councilmen, school committee and assessors were seated on the right and left of the speaker's desk, and the board of selectmen, chosen by the town on the 9th of March—Messrs. Pillsbury, Webster and Abbot—were at the clerk's desk, immediately in front of the mayor.

After the administration of the several oaths, Rev. Mr. Flanders, pastor of the Baptist church, read portions of scripture, when the Throne of Grace was addressed by the Rev. Dr. Bouton, senior ordained clergymen of the city.

These several ceremonies and services being concluded, the mayor arose and addressed the members of the city government as follows:

Gentlemen of the City Council and Gentlemen of the several Boards of the City Government here assembled:

Unacquainted as I am with the rules of legislation or with the municipal affairs of the town, it is with the sincerest distrust that I venture to enter upon the trust assigned to me by the suffrages of my fellow-citizens.

It is, indeed, a distinction that I may most highly appreciate, but a position that my habits of life and course of business but illy fit me to hold. I can, therefore, only promise that whatever of strength or ability I possess shall be devoted to a prompt, impartial and faithful performance of all the duties pertaining to the executive office of this corporation.

The change of government upon which we are about to enter involves duties and responsibilities that can be successfully met and performed only by the united and patient efforts of those to whom the administration of the affairs of the city have been confided. I may consider myself singularly fortunate that I am associated with so many gentlemen of tried worth and long experience in the municipal affairs of the town; and I doubt not that it will be the anxious care of every member of the government of the corporation, to have the change bear as lightly upon every section and every individual, as may be consistent with the highest good and truest interests of the city, and realized only by its convenient, economical and efficient action.

I might here, perhaps, with great propriety take a retrospective view of the rise and progress of this highly favored town, from its earliest organization, in 1725, through its seasons of weakness, privations and hardships, as well as its days of prosperity and distinction, down to the present period of mature strength and enviable position; but as the labor of writing our history is now being performed by a gentleman in every way competent to the task, and the results of which, it is understood, will soon be accessible to all, I may not properly detain you longer upon this subject.

By one of the provisions of the charter it becomes the duty of the mayor from time to time to communicate to the city council such information and to recommend such measures as in his judgment the interest of the city may seem to require; and, gentlemen, I trust that I need not assure you that it will be my anxious desire and earnest purpose, as circumstances and experience shall suggest, to discharge this duty with promptness and fidelity.

I am not aware that any considerable change or unusual outlay will be required to accomplish all the objects for which the city charter was obtained — nor do I apprehend, gentlemen, under your administration, any augmentation of burthens, or material increase of taxation, consequent upon its adoption.

Our fire department, composed as it is of our most active and efficient fellow-citizens, has at all times answered the most sanguine hopes of its friends, and received the commendation and liberal support of the town; and I am happy to say on this occasion that no further considerable appropriation will at present be required on account of this department.

The management and improvement of our schools is an object of paramount interest, and in my estimation immensely transcends in its beneficial consequences to the children and youth of our city, and the welfare and prosperity of any community, all considerations of mere dollars and cents; and as I have so often spoken in the hearing of the town of the importance of an improved and more elevated standard of education in our primary schools, I may not on this occasion, with propriety, further allude to this most important subject, otherwise than to express my fullest confidence that a liberal and enlightened policy will always characterize your acts in connection with this great interest.

In regard to the expenditures upon our highways, respecting the construction of common sewers, the draining and grading of our streets, the substantial construction of our roads and the improvement of our side walks, I will only say, they are subjects that especially belong to you, gentlemen, to consider, and which you are so fully competent to decide that I will not venture upon your judgment any suggestion of my own.

The town farm, so valuable in itself, and which has so largely contributed in by-gone years to the comfort and support of the unfortunate and destitute, will, I doubt not, receive at your hands that provision and consideration its importance and reasonable expectation demand.

I avail myself of this opportunity to call your early attention to the importance of providing a house of correction for the security of vagrants, truants and disorderly persons, where they may be made, in some good degree, to contribute by their labor to their own support.

It is already seen that a slight amendment must be made in the city charter, in order to the convenient arrangement and limits of one of the wards. I would therefore suggest the propriety of an early examination of all its provisions and defects, with a view to an application to the approaching session of the Legislature for such alterations and improvements as its practical working has thus far shown to be desirable.

It becomes us at all times to realize and acknowledge our dependence upon the great Maker and Governor of the universe, for life and for all its blessings; especially does it become us now, as we are about to enter upon new and untried duties and responsibilities, involving the dearest earthly interests of our citizens, to remember our accountability to Him in whose hands our breath is, and whose are all our ways, and at all times to look to Him for guidance and direction.

It may not, gentlemen, be inappropriate for me, in closing, to remark, that in my inexperience I must rely largely upon your kindness and support for a successful discharge of the duties that devolve upon me, and that I shall at all times take pleasure in the fullest cooperation with you in every measure calculated to advance the interest or promote the convenience of every section of our city and of every class of our citizens.

At the close of the address the common councilmen retired to another room, and the boards organized separately. In the board of aldermen, Messrs. Harvey and Stevens were appointed, with such as the council should join, to report rules for the city council; and Messrs. Davis and Tallant, with such as the council should join, to procure rooms for the various branches of the city government.

In the common council, Thomas Bailey, Esq., the oldest member, took the chair, and they proceeded to elect a president. On the first ballot there was no choice—George W. Brown had one, Ezra Carter six, and Cyrus Barton seven. On the second ballot Cyrus Barton was chosen, having twelve votes to two for Ezra Carter, and on taking the chair returned thanks for the honor conferred upon him.

W. H. H. Bailey was chosen clerk pro tem. of the common council. Messrs. Minot, Moore and Barton were joined to the committee to report rules.

Messrs. W. H. H. Bailey, Shute and Thomas Bailey, were joined to the committee to procure rooms.

The two boards met in city council, and alderman Stevens was elected city clerk, pro tem.

Both boards then adjourned to meet at the Court House on Saturday, April 9, at 2 o'clock, P. M.

At this adjourned meeting John F. Brown was elected city clerk, and William H. Bartlett city solicitor. Amos Hadley was elected clerk of the common council.

The city government being thus in due form fully organized, proceeded to the transaction of business, according to the provisions of the charter; for which reference must be had to the original records in the office of the city clerk.

CHAPTER XVII.

ANCIENT MATTERS.

Relative to the entire period of our history which has been gone over, are various matters which could not be conveniently classed under any general head, nor placed in chronological order, but which are of sufficient importance to require a separate chapter.

ANCIENT GRAVE-STONES IN THE OLD BURYING-GROUND.

The late David George, who died in 1838, aged 71, lived nearly all his life close by the ancient grave-yard; often visited it, and inspected the grave-stones. He said he could remember when there were only six grave-stones in the yard with inscriptions on them, and these were probably put up prior to 1790. They are thick, clumsy stones, not prepared either with taste or skill; the letters are ill shaped and not deep enough.

1. At the grave of James Osgood, who died April 6, 1757, aged 50.

2. At the grave of Jeremiah, son of Thomas and Anna Stickney, who died December, 1763, in the 3d year of his age.

3. At that of Mary, daughter of Thomas and Anna Stickney, who died December 5, 1763, aged 8 years.

4. At that of Jeremiah Stickney, who died April 11, 1763, in the 61st year of his age. By the side of these a large granite monument has recently been erected.
5. At that of Ezra Carter, Esq., [Doctor,] who died September 17, 1757, in the 48th year of his age.

6. At that of Jeremiah Hall, who died October 8, 1770, in the 24th year of his age.

There are also several misshapen stones without inscriptions, and a few on which there were probably inscriptions, now illegible.

Mr. George also was accustomed to point out other stones, erected since 1790, to the memory of persons who died many years before, viz.:

1. At the grave of Dolly Hutchins, wife of Col. Gordon Hutchins. She died December 17, 1777, aged 41 years.

2. At that of Sarah Walker, wife of Rev. Timothy Walker, who died in 1778, in the 77th year of her age.

3. At that of Rev. Timothy Walker, who died in 1782, aged 78 years. These were not erected till many years after.

4. At that of Mary Wilson, wife of Mr. Thomas Wilson. She died 1773, aged 31 years.

5. At that of Mary, the second wife of Mr. Thomas Wilson. She died in 1796, aged 44.

6. At that of Dea. Joseph Hall, (senior,) who died April 8, 1784, in the 77th year of his age.

7. At that of Deborah Hall, wife of Dea. Joseph Hall. She died October 5, 1801, aged 96.

8. At that of Dea. Joseph Hall, (junior,) who died June 10, 1807, in the 70th year of his age.

9. At that of Lot Colby, who died April 2, 1790, in the 73d year of his age.

All the nine foregoing stones are slate slabs, and they form what may be called the second era of grave-stones: — the first being of granite, or other coarse stone. Ornamental cuts on some, represent human or angelic heads, with wings; on others, an urn overhung with cypress.

ANCIENT BURIALS.

The ancient mode of carrying coffins to the burying-ground was to select twelve men as bearers, who carried them on a bier from every part of the town — sometimes the distance of six, seven and eight miles. In this way it is remembered that the body of
HISTORY OF CONCORD.

Mrs. Rachel, first wife of Daniel Abbot, was carried from the west side of Long pond to the old burying-ground by the meeting-house.

There is a tradition* that on the death of a man on the east side of the Merrimack river, opposite the Rolfes, his neighbors were afraid his body would be attached for debt—as the law then allowed. To avoid this, the body was concealed in the cellar for a few days; then, on the advice of Dea. George Abbot, a litter-bier was constructed, to be carried by men on horseback; a grave was dug at sundown on Sabbath evening, and soon after the company started with the body from a Mr. Blanchard's house, ferried it across the river, and taking it on the litter proceeded as fast as they could to the old burying-ground. By some delay, however, they did not reach the spot till near sunrise, when they found the grave was too short. Just then, discovering an officer riding on horseback up Main street, they pitched the coffin end foremost into the grave, which they immediately began to fill up. The officer, supposing the body to be buried, turned about and went away. Afterwards they dug the grave longer, placed the coffin in, and buried it in a proper manner.

Lieut. John Webster, who was a famous mast-master, in his latter years was involved in debt. He died in a small house situated in the lot back of Mr. Ezra Ballard's, at Little pond. His body was at first concealed in a potato hole, which was covered over with straw, and logs laid on it. At the time of the funeral the bearers rode on horseback, with drawn swords, which, the sheriff perceiving, he dare not molest them.†

MARBLE MONUMENTS.

The first marble monument erected in the old burying-ground, probably, stands at the grave of Rev. Israel Evans, who died in 1807, aged 60.

Another, supposed to be the second, stands at the grave of Col. Gordon Hutchins, who died in 1815, aged 85.

BURYING-GROUND AT MILLVILLE.

The land for the burying-ground at Millville was given by Mr. Warren Bradley. The first person buried there is said to have been Mrs. Sally, first wife of Mr. John Dimond, about 1797. Mr. Ezekiel Dimond was the second. He selected the spot for his own grave, and was buried in February, 1800.

In the burying-ground at Horse-hill, the first person buried was Miss Rebecca, daughter of Mr. Oliver Hoit, in 1819, aged 28.

ANCIENT VEHICLES FOR RIDING.

The following notices of ancient vehicles are derived from conversations at different times with aged inhabitants of the town, as within their memory, or known by tradition.*

The Rev. Timothy Walker rode in a chair, as it was called. It seems to have had no top or covering, and was wide enough to carry two persons.

The first chaise owned in Concord belonged to Col. Benjamin Rolfe; was purchased probably between 1767 and 1770. It had a standing canvass top, and probably cost about fifty dollars. Dea. Joseph Hall, the elder, about the same time purchased a chaise like Col. Rolfe's.

Col. Peter Green, at the death of his father-in-law, Col. Bulkley, of Groton, Massachusetts, had a chaise, belonging to his estate, which he brought to Concord and used. This was between 1770 and 1775.

Benjamin Thompson (Count Rumford) who married the widow of Col. Rolfe, 1772, bought a curricle, which was much the most expensive carriage at that time known in these parts. Thompson sometimes rode in this with two horses, and sometimes with one.

Robert Harris had a chaise when he came to Concord, and always afterwards. He had also a coachee, or Philadelphia wagon, in 1793 or 1794, which probably cost about $300.

William Duncan and Edward St. Loë Livermore married daughters of Mr. Duncan. Each of them had a chaise.

Dea. David Hall owned a chaise, probably previous to the year 1790, but he did not keep it many years.

Rev. Israel Evans, who settled in Concord, 1789, then owned a chaise, in which he rode with one horse. Afterwards he owned a carriage with four wheels, in which he rode, sometimes with one horse and sometimes with two.

* For these traditions I am greatly indebted to Moody Kent, Esq.
In 1791 or 1792 the late Judge Walker purchased a chaise at Cambridge, Mass., made for him by Mr. Prentice, of that place. Previous to 1800 there were very few carriages or wagons in town. The people generally rode on horseback or went on foot. There were very few sleighs. In heavy snows, horse or ox-sleds were commonly used to convey people from one place to another.

OLD CLOCKS.

Rev. Mr. Walker brought the first clock into Concord from England. Dea. Joseph Hall, senior, owned the second clock. When people who had no time-piece saw the deacon coming from the "Eleven Lots," on the Sabbath, they knew it was time for them to go. Ephraim Potter made wooden clocks, which were set up in some houses about 1775, and later, and which kept good time. Levi and Abel Hutchins set up the clock-making business about 1785, which they carried on till about 1819. Their clocks were noted as good time-keepers, and are still found in many of the old families. Major Timothy Chandler also manufactured excellent clocks, which are seen now and then among the ancient things.

ANCIENT DWELLING-HOUSES STILL STANDING.

Mr. Richard Herbert, when in his 94th year and in possession of all his faculties, said, that all the houses in Concord main village, except sixteen, were built within his recollection, viz.:

1. The house of Joseph B. Walker, Esq., which remains as it was when he (Mr. Herbert) was a boy, except alterations made a few years ago.

2. Capt. Coffin's house; was built one story, with two rooms. The back part and one story have been added since.

3. The house owned by Mr. Charles H. Stearns; was built by Capt. Benj. Emery, who sold it to Dr. Carrigain. Capt. Emery afterwards built the house where Capt. E. S. Towle lives. His wife was reluctant to move, and said she "had rather watch the hogs three hours a day, than go up into the woods to live!"

4. The house of Mr. Shadrach Seavey; was built by Capt. Nathaniel Abbot, one story, and stood where the new North church stands. It was the residence of Capt. Joshua Abbot. Mr. Herbert remembered when the back part was added.

5. The "Dearborn house," recently moved from the hill where * The hogs then run at large, and were an annoyance about the houses on Main street.
the new City Hall is located; was built by Lieut. Richard Herbert, about 1756. He paid ten dollars for one acre of land there. In this house Mr. Herbert was born. In the summer of 1854 the house was purchased by Mr. Reuben F. Foster, and moved to what is now called Fosterville, north of Richard Bradley's, where it has been refitted, and stands conspicuous among other houses by its cupola, or observatory.

6. The Stickney house, now the residence of Joseph P. Stickney, was a garrison. It has since been enlarged and much altered.

7. The Edward Abbot house, which stood where Dr. Chadbourn's house now is, south corner of Montgomery street; was also a garrison. It now stands in the rear of Dr. Chadbourn's, in the humble position of a wood-shed and stable.

8. A part of Capt. Richard Ayer's house — now the Union Hotel, opposite the Free bridge road — was built before Mr. Herbert can remember; — also,

9. The old Osgood house, which was burnt down in August, 1854.

10. The Farrington house, now owned by Mr. David G. Fuller, on Pleasant street.

11. A part of the old store on the corner of Main and Pleasant streets, occupied by Mr. William P. Hardy.

12. A part of Mr. Benjamin Gale's old tavern, which stood opposite the new Phenix Hall; now forms a tenement on Warren street.

13. Dea. George Abbot's house, where Mr. John B. Chandler lives, on Fayette street. This house presents a good specimen of the ancient style of building — two stories in front, with a low, slanting roof on the back side. In this house Hon. Thomas W. Thompson formerly resided.

14. The Capt. Roach, or Arthur Rogers house, east of the house of the late Gov. Hill, built in the same style as the preceding.

15. Dea. Joseph Hall's, or Dea. Wilkins' house, at the Eleven lots.

16. The Rolfe house, or Countess of Rumford mansion; also at the Eleven lots.

DWELLING-HOUSES — DOMESTIC AND SOCIAL HABITS AND CUSTOMS.

The first order, or, as it may be called, generation of dwelling houses in Concord, was built of hewn logs. They were all situated on lots laid out in the "first and second range" of house lots, as surveyed in 1726. But as soon as saw-mills could be erected and materials provided, these gradually gave place to framed houses, one story in height, about sixteen to twenty-four feet on the ground, with from one to three rooms. The second order of houses was more scattered over the territory, and now and then appeared a house of larger dimensions, two stories in height, with gambrel roof; or two stories in front, with low, slanting roof back. The third order of houses appeared after the Revolutionary war, from 1785 to about 1800. They were built two stories, with what is called a hip-roof, with two front rooms, a door in the middle, and entry and hall running through, and an L, one story, on the back side, for a kitchen. Of this kind was the house built by Maj. Daniel Livermore, the late residence of Dr. Bouton; also, the houses owned by Rev. Israel Evans, Rev. Dr. McFarland and Charles Walker, Esq. The Evans and McFarland houses have recently been altered, by changing and raising the roof. Tradition represents that in the first, and many of the second order of houses, the windows were either of paper, or mica, or diamond-cut glass. Chimneys were built of stone, with huge fire-places, and an oven on one side running back. In the chimney, across the flue, was a lug-pole, as it was called, made of oak, from two to four inches in diameter, and on which were hung hooks and trammels, of wrought iron, so constructed as to be raised or lowered to suit the convenience of pots and kettles, suspended thereon for culinary purposes. These lug-poles were liable to be burnt by the fire which blazed beneath, or broken by the weights suspended on them, and hence in due time gave place to the crane, which was constructed of iron, and fastened on one side into the chimney-jamb, while the end swung over the fire, with the hooks and trammels on it. The first crane was introduced in 1757 by Stephen Farrington.*

The fire was made by placing a large log, called a back-log, three feet long, or more, on the backside of the fire-place; two rocks in front of it served for andirons, with a large fore-stick, resting on the rocks, and a back-stick upon the back-log. Then smaller wood, from three to four feet in length, was piled on. The whole was lighted with a pitch-knot, or other combustibles. This made a glorious fire. At each end or corner of the fireplace were small benches, on which children sat, and roasted first one side and then the other; while the old folks enjoyed the full blaze in front—and hauled off and on, as they were able to bear it! Instead of modern gas light, or oil, or even dipped candles, they used in the evening pitch-pine knots, which gave a clear and brilliant light, by which the women could see to sew or knit, and others, (if they had books,) to read. Splinters of pitch-pine were lighted, to carry about the house and into the cellar, instead of lamps and candles.

In early times every family kept close at hand a flint and steel, with which to strike fire. The fire fell on a piece of old punk, or upon tinder kept in a tin box. From the punk or tinder thus ignited a candle or pitch-pine splinter was lighted, and thence communicated to wood on the fire-place. Careful house-keepers, however, took pains to rake up the coals on the hearth at night, covering them with ashes, and thus keep fire till morning. But in warm weather this method would often fail, so that the flint, steel and tinder, were indispensable.

The preceding cut presents a fair view of the house built by Major Daniel Livermore, in 1785, with the addition of the back part, which was built by Dr. Bouton in 1840. The beautiful trees in front were set out about the time the house was finished, in 1786 or 1787. The south end of the house is nine inches over the line of the street, while the north end is exactly on the line. The reason assigned for this position by the late Richard Herbert, was, that "when Maj. Livermore was building his house he was courting one of Judge Walker's daughters, at the North end, and he wanted it skewed a little, so that he could look up that way." After the establishment of the upper Concord Bank, in 1806, the house and land was bought by the bank proprietors of Maj. Livermore, and occupied by Samuel Sparhawk, Esq., cashier of the bank. The north room, with a projection built out for the A'tault, was used for the counting-room, or bank-office. The south room was the family parlor, in which was also Mr. Sparhawk's library. At a party given by Mr. Sparhawk, about 1818, among the invited guests was Mr. S. F. B. Morse, now distinguished as the inventor of the electric telegraph, who was that evening introduced to Miss Lucretia P. Walker, daughter of Charles Walker, Esq., who was accounted the most beautiful and accomplished young lady of the town, and whom Mr. Morse subsequently married. In 1829 Rev. Mr. Bouton bought the house and land belonging thereto, of the president, directors and company of the Concord Bank, where he resided twenty-six years.

ANCIENT WELLS.

Ancient wells were dug at a distance of from ten to forty feet from the house, and water was drawn with a bucket suspended on one end of a small pole, the other end being fastened to a long well-sweep, as it was called, which was supported at a proper height by a strong, erect post, and swung on an iron or wooden pin, so balanced that when the bucket was filled with water it could be easily drawn up. Specimens of the old fashioned well-sweep, and

"Of the old oaken bucket, that hung in the well,"

may still be seen in various sections of the town: one at Mr. Jacob Hoyt's, on the Mountain; another at Mr. Jerry Abbot's, west of Long pond. Another mode of drawing water from wells was by means of a windlass, erected over the well,—the bucket being fastened on the end of a rope, or chain, of suitable length, and then lowered and raised by turning a crank. But the well-sweep and windlass have generally given place to the pump in outer sections of the town, while in the main village many families are supplied with spring water, by means of wooden or lead pipes from fountains in the adjacent upland.

The cut here subjoined presents a fair view of the residence of Jacob Hoyt, Esq., on the Mountain, in which the old "well-sweep" is apparent.

The frame of this house, of large, heavy oak, is believed to be the oldest on the east side of the river. It was first erected at "the Fort," by Capt. Ebenezer Eastman, a short time before his death, in 1748. The house being left in an unfinished state, it was sold to Ebenezer Virgin, taken down, and moved to its present location on the Mountain. Tradition relates that at the raising of the house by Capt. Eastman there was a great gathering of people, with "young men and maidens," who were to celebrate the raising by a dance in the evening. Abigail Carter, mother of Jacob Hoyt, asked her parents if she might go. They said, "Yes, if parson Walker's girls go." The parson consented that his daughters should go, and proposed also to go with them. After the raising was over, Mr. Walker's girls asked him if they might stay in the evening. He said, "Yes, yes, only come home in good season." So the girls all stayed till the dance was over, and were then waited on by young gentlemen to go home. But on coming to the ferry to their great disappointment they found the parson there waiting to take the girls under his own protection!

Mr. Ebenezer Virgin sold the house and adjacent farm, containing about two hundred acres, to Jeremiah Haskell, of Newbury, who came to Concord about 1812. Haskell married a daughter of Ebenezer Moulton, of Newburyport, into whose hands the house and farm fell by mortgage. In 1818 Haskell left Concord and went to parts unknown, and nothing certain was ever heard of him. In April, 1819, the property was sold at public auction, and bid off by Mr. Jacob Hoyt, for $2,375. On this elevated spot Mr. Hoyt has resided till the present time, having made great improvements on his farm, and keeping the old mansion in good repair. The site is one of the most desirable, and furnishes one of the most extensive and beautiful prospects on the east side of the river.

FOOD.

The ordinary food of early settlers, and of their descendants of the first and second generation, for breakfast and supper, was bean or pea-porridge with bread and butter. On Sabbath morning they had, in addition, coffee or chocolate. The bread was what is called brown-bread, made of rye and Indian meal. Occasionally wheat bread was used. For dinner they usually had baked or boiled meat, and peas or beans, with baked or boiled puddings.

For the information of our wives and daughters, I give the following ancient recipe for bean-porridge: Take one quart of beans or peas, four gallons of water, and two or three pounds of beef or pork—or, if you please, both; put them into an iron pot or kettle, and boil them together until the meat is thoroughly cooked. Take out the meat, and thicken the liquid with Indian meal, and you have the porridge.

The most approved and genteel way of eating the porridge was on this wise: The porridge was dipped out into wooden bowls, each member of the family having one, and was eaten with a wooden spoon. On the authority of my friend, George Abbot, Esq., I can add, "that this was a delicious meal. Every father at his own table was, to appearance, as happy as a king with his nobles at a banquet of wine!" Often, to close the repast, the following lines were sung or chanted by the children:

"Bean porridge hot, bean porridge cold;
Bean porridge best when nine days old!"

There was another dish, said to be a still greater luxury, viz.: baked pumpkins and milk. It was prepared in the autumn in the following manner: Take pumpkins that had hard shells; cut a hole with a gouge in the stem end, large enough to admit a large sized hand; scrape out the seeds completely; then fill the cavity almost full of new milk; heat the oven hotter than necessary for ordinary baking; place the pumpkins in carefully, and fasten up the lid so that no fresh air can penetrate; keep them in twelve hours or more; then, withdrawing the pumpkins, pour into the cavity more new milk, and with a spoon begin to eat, digging out the inside as you proceed, and leaving nothing but the shell! In this truly primitive mode Gov. Langdon used to feast on pumpkin and milk, when a boarder at Dea. John Kimball's. The governor preferred this mode, as decidedly more genteel than to scrape out the contents first and eat from a bowl!

DRINKS.

Malt beer was a very common drink in early times. Malt was manufactured from barley, which was raised more or less by every farmer. The first manufacturer of malt in Concord was Lieut. Richard Herbert, about 1765 — who had a malt-house in the rear of the dwelling which he built, where his son, Capt. Samuel Herbert, now lives. Some twenty years afterward the same business was taken up by Jeremiah Abbot, son of Capt. Nathaniel Abbot, who married a daughter of Col. Stickney. His malt-house was on or near the spot where Nathan Stickney, Esq., now lives. Abbot sold out to William Stickney, the taverner, who continued the business till about 1816. After Mr. Stickney ceased to manufacture malt, the old malt-house was used for smoking bacon. At times, in the fall and winter, from two hundred and fifty to three hundred fine legs of bacon, belonging to different families, would be hung up to smoke at once. The beautiful elm tree, now growing in the yard of Nathan Stickney, germinated in the cellar of the old malt-house, and may be called the malt-elm.

In making beer a quantity of malt was mixed with hops and boiled in water, of greater or smaller measure, as was wanted. This was transferred to a cask, or large jug, and left to ferment a day or two, when it was fit for table use.

Cider succeeded, and soon supplanted beer. This was a universal drink at every meal — morning, noon and night. In the fall farmers gathered their apples and made cider. They usually laid in from fifteen to thirty barrels for a year's stock. Mr. Reuben Abbot — now living on the old homestead, west of Long pond — says that he and his father used to put up sixty barrels every good year. Hon. Jacob A. Potter says that his father, Richard, and uncle Ephraim often laid in one hundred and twenty barrels. So free was the use of cider that the whole quantity would be drank up before the ensuing fall — scarcely enough left for vinegar! In old times — and those times coming down to 1828, and still later — there were in every neighborhood noted cider topers, who would guzzle down a quart without stopping to breathe, and, smacking their lips, hold out the mug for one drink more! Such fellows would go from house to house, and call in just to get a drink of cider — carrying, wherever they went, a bloated, red face, and pot-belly. Of one such I have heard it said he "would get drunk on cider-emptyings!"

A favorite and very common drink in old times was flip, which was made on this wise: A mug was nearly filled with malt beer, sweetened with sugar; then a heated iron, called a "logger-head," was thrust into it, which produced a rapid foam. Instantly a quantity of the "ardent," (a half pint of rum was allowed for a quart mug,) was dashed in, a little nutmeg grated on the top, and the whole was quaffed off by two men or more, as they could bear it, which had the effect often to set them at "logger-heads." Mr. Nathan Stickney says, that when a young man, in his father's tavern, he has drawn out, on public occasions, two barrels of beer a day, and made it into flip. The price of a quart mug of flip was twenty or twenty-five cents.
Another drink was toddy, which was made of rum and water, well sweetened. A stick, about six or eight inches long, flattened at the end, for crushing the sugar and stirring it up, was called the "toddy-stick." It was celebrated for the ringing music it made against the sides of a glass tumbler in olden times.

Another favorite drink was egg-nog, which was composed of an egg beaten and stirred together with sugar, milk and spirit, or with cider and sugar. The stick used for this purpose was split at the end and a transverse piece of wood inserted, which was rapidly whirled round, back and forward, between the palms of the hands. Skilful men made graceful flourishes with "toddy" and "egg-nog" sticks, in those days. Still another mode of drinking intoxicating liquor, was, to mix it with the juice of certain strong herbs, as tansy, spearmint and garden wormwood, with a little water and sugar. This was drank before breakfast, to create an appetite!

From the year 1760 to 1830, rum, brandy, gin and wines of different kinds, were used as a common beverage, more or less in every family. Every taverner and store-keeper in town was licensed to sell. The bar-room of taverns was furnished with spacious shelves, or open cup-boards, where liquors of every variety were displayed in decanters. Every store had one end of a counter appropriated to drinking customers. On this stood decanters, glass tumblers, with water, sugar, spoon, and toddy stick, all ready for use. In the families of the more wealthy and fashionable, spirits of various kinds were arranged and displayed on an elegant side-board, and every visiter was invited to drink. Farmers carried well filled bottles of rum into the field, both summer and winter, and for harvesting usually laid in from ten gallons to a barrel, under the idea that the use of it was indispensable. In 1827, when the temperance reform commenced in Concord, the writer ascertained, by careful investigation, that the whole quantity of ardent spirits sold in town in one year (not including wine) was about four hundred hogsheads, or forty-six thousand gallons; and, as estimated by the traders themselves, the amount sold to the inhabitants of the town was not less than fifteen thousand gallons; or, on an average, about four and a half gallons a year to every man, woman and child in the town!
The cost of this liquor to the consumers was not less than nine thousand dollars, which was more than twice the amount of taxes the year previous, for town, county and State expenses, and for the support of schools. One fact alone shows the extent of the temperance reformation in Concord since that time, viz.: The use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage is now as universally proscribed and relinquished as formerly it was allowed and practised. There is but one place in the whole town where ardent spirits of any kind can be lawfully sold, or where they can be safely bought, and that is by special license only "for medicinal and mechanical purposes."

The oldest form of drinking vessel was a noggin, made of wood, largest at the top, with a wooden handle on one side. This varied in size, from one to four quarts. Afterwards pewter, or earthen mugs, were used. On the table were wooden plates and platters, or, at a later period, pewter basins, porringer-s and spoons, plates and platters. When not on the table these were displayed on an open cup-board, or shelves in the room. Specimens of these are still preserved in some of the ancient families. Sarah and Lois Abbot, sisters of Nathan K., at the family mansion, west of Long pond, have a large pewter platter—bright almost as silver, bearing on the back of it the stamp of a crown—which has come down to them from their great grand-mother, Mercy Wheeler, of Rowley, and must be at least two hundred years old. They have also a wooden platter, in a good state of preservation, which their grand-mother inherited from her ancestor, Thomas Abbot, of Andover. Formerly this was used as a dinner-dish for vegetables, but in later times—that is, for eighty years—it was used for brown bread.

George Abbot, Esq., has a large armed chair, which belonged to Thomas Abbot, of Andover, 1728, and an ancient wine bottle, owned by his grand-mother, who died 1769.

As a specimen of those good old times I can state, on the authority of Mr. Nathan K. Abbot, that the house which his father (Daniel Abbot) first built, just south of the present one, was one story, with only one room and a chamber, which was reached by a ladder. The room was about sixteen feet square, with a fire-place, which would take in wood eight feet long. In this one room eleven children of Mr. Abbot’s were born and lived in close union. During a part of the time, also, he accommodated his neighbor, Jonathan Emerson and wife, as boarders, whose first child was born in the same room! Mr. Abbot built, but only partly finished, the two story house where Nathan K. and his sisters reside; but with the first occupancy of it is associated the death of his wife, on the birth of her twelfth child; both dying and were buried together — the babe lying in its mother’s bosom. Jonathan Emerson’s house, west of Mr. Abbot’s, where Isaac Emerson now lives, remained several years after he built it, without any windows.

* See History of Temperance Reform in Concord, in a discourse by Rev. Mr. Bouton, December 10, 1843.

The common ancient dress of the men was a woolen coat, striped woolen frock, tow frock, and woolen, velvet, tow, or leather breeches. The breeches, with long stockings, were fastened at the knee with a buckle; in winter, they wore woolen or leather buskins, and thick cow-hide shoes, fastened with buckles on the instep. The best hats, as worn on the Sabbath, were what are now called cocked-up hats, with three corners, and the more noted men wore wigs. Cocked-up hats continued to be worn by aged, venerable men, till within the memory of some of the present generation. Those distinctly remembered as wearing them were Rev. Mr. Walker, Rev. Mr. Evans, Capt. Reuben Abbot, Capt. Joshua Abbot, Capt. Joseph Farnum, and Col. Thomas Stickney. Col. Stickney had a hired man, named Levi Ross, who would also put on his dignity, and march with his cocked-up hat to meeting every Sabbath.

The late Gen. Benjamin Pierce, when governor of the State, in 1827 and 1829, wore his tri-cornered hat, short breeches, buckled at the knee, and high boots. The hat was the same that he wore when general of the Hillsborough militia, and was the last ever worn in Concord on a public occasion. This hat, and also the military coat which Gen. Pierce wore as brigade inspector of the militia of Hillsborough county, at their first organization, about 1785, were deposited in the rooms of the New-Hampshire Historical Society, by Gen. Franklin Pierce, in 1840.
The ordinary outer dress of the women in summer was tow and linen gowns, checked tyers, or aprons; and in winter woolen gowns and aprons, thick woolen stockings, and cow-hide shoes. The clothing was of their own manufacture. Every house might truly be termed "a home factory." The females carded and spun their wool and flax, and wove their cloth in a hand loom. They also manufactured cloth and made garments for their husbands, sons and brothers. They could all understand without a commentary or dictionary Solomon's description of a virtuous woman: "She seeketh wool and flax and worketh diligently with her hands; she riseth while it is yet night and giveth meat to her household; she girdeth her loins with strength, and strengtheneth her arms; she layeth her hands to the spindle, and her hands hold the distaff. She looketh well to the ways of her household and eateth not the bread of idleness." We credit fully the tradition of those days in which the mothers and daughters of the first, second, and even third generation, bloomed with health, strength and beauty; when their own fair hands disdained no sort of domestic labor, and they needed no "help;" when their most beautiful garments of "fine linen and wool" were of their own manufacture, by means of the hand-card and hatchel, the foot-wheel and the hand-wheel, the hand-loom and the inkle-loom. These terms now require definition and description as matters of ancient history! But our grandmothers understood them. In those days boys and girls—and they remained boys and girls till they were married—generally went bare-foot in the summer. Snow-shoes, as they were called, were then in common use by men, in traversing the woods, hunting, &c. They were also occasionally worn by females, as is authentically related of the grandmother of Dr. Ezra Carter, who lived on the hill west of Long pond, and of the wife of the elder Henry Martin, who traveled about three miles on the snow to Horse hill, to attend a sick woman; and also of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Hazeltine, whose constitution remained vigorous one hundred years. Snow-shoes consisted of a light piece of wood, commonly ash, about an inch thick, bent into an elongated curve, like an egg, about two feet long and one foot wide, till the ends met, which were fastened together so as to make a handle. About three inches from each end of the curved-bow was a thin, flat piece of hard wood, to which, with the sides of the bow, a net-work of strong, elastic leather strings was firmly fastened. On this leather netting the feet were placed for walking, and the shoes fastened on to them by strings. The material of which the snow-shoe was made was very light; the elastic leather net-work both gave a spring to the step in walking, and prevented its sinking more than an inch or two into the snow. The opinion is common that a person could walk faster and farther in a day on snow-shoes, than he could on bare ground without them.

The labor of females was almost entirely in doors. The only exception was that sometimes they assisted in pulling and spreading the flax which was afterwards to be spun and woven by their hands. As this article was formerly of great use in domestic manufacture, the method of raising and preparing it may here be stated. Nearly every farmer had a plat of ground for flax. The quantity of seed sown varied from one and a half to three bushels per acre. The stalk, or stem, when growing was of a pea green color and from two to three feet in height, bearing a blue blossom, which ripened into a ball that contained the flax-seed. When the flax was ripe it was pulled up carefully by the roots, tied up in small handfuls, left to dry on the ground a day or two, then set up in small stooks, and after being well dried was stacked in the field a fortnight or more. Then the seed was thrashed out. Next, it was sometimes immersed in water for a week or more, and then thinly and evenly spread upon the grass, to be rotted. This being sufficiently done, it was stowed away for the winter; but as soon as fair days appeared in spring, there was a general turn out of the men for dressing flax. The dressing was to separate the fibrous thread from the stalk. This was done by the use of several implements, called the brake, the hatchel, the swinging board and knife. It was a laborious and dirty process, but a smart man would dress on an average forty pounds a day. Being thus dressed and twisted together in bunches, it was handed over to the good house-wife and daughters, to spin, weave, whiten, and convert into thread, cloth, and neat beautiful garments. How they did it, I shall allow my friend George Abbot, Esq., to describe: "First, the hatchel was brought and fastened into a chair with a string or stick; and the mother, with her checked apron and a handkerchief pinned about the neck, and another handkerchief tied about her head to keep off the dirt, sat in another chair; winding one end of the flax tight around the fingers of the right hand, and holding it, she drew the flax through the hatchel until it was thoroughly combed. Then changing, she combed in a similar manner the other end. Next it was snarled or wound upon the distaff, and spun into thread, or yarn, upon the foot, or linen wheel. What was drawn out by hatcheling was called tow, and it was carded by hand with hand cards and spun upon the large wheel. This was called tow yarn. From the wheel it went to the reel; from the reel to the loom, with which about every family was provided, and every woman knew how to use. Some families, however, hired their spinning and weaving done. Old Mrs. Elliot now glories in it, that she spent many a day in spinning and weaving "for Judge Walker’s and Esquire Bradley’s folks." Many other women either "took in work" of this kind, or "went out" to do it.

The custom of rising and retiring early was universal. The former was at the dawn of morning, and the latter by eight or nine in the evening. The oft repeated adage was,

> "Early to bed and early to rise,
  Will make you healthy, wealthy and wise."

"Going to meeting," as it was called, on the Sabbath, was for seventy-five years and more the universal custom. Elderly people, who owned horses, rode double—that is, the wife with her husband, seated on a pillion behind him, with her right arm encircling his breast. The young people, of both sexes, went on foot from every part of the parish. In the summer, young men usually walked bare-foot, or with shoes in hand; and the young women walked with coarse shoes, carrying a better pair in hand, with stockings, to change before entering the meeting-house. The usual custom of those west of Long pond was to stop at a large pine tree at the bottom of the hill west of Richard Bradley’s, where the boys and young men put on their shoes, and the young women exchanged their coarse shoes for a better pair, drawing on at the same time their clean white stockings. They left the articles thus exchanged under the tree till their return, having no fear that any one would be guilty of such a sacrilege as to steal them on the Sabbath! In a similar manner the young people from the east side of the river came on foot, crossing Tucker's ferry, and exchanged and deposited their walking shoes under a willow tree near Horse Shoe pond.

Going on foot to meeting was not, however, confined to the young people. Old Mrs. Elliot says, that she "always went a foot from her house, at the Borough, about six miles; yes, and often carried a baby, too!" The first wife of Daniel Abbot, daughter of Capt. Nathaniel Abbot, used to go a foot, following a path across the woods, carrying a babe, attended by one or two children on foot. She would go early, leave her child at her father Abbot's, attend meeting; then, with babe in her arms, walk home. Married women from Horse Hill, a distance of seven miles, usually walked. This practice was indeed continued as late as 1825. The wife of the late Mr. Isaac Runnels says she has often walked from her house, seven miles, to the old North church, leaving a nursing babe at home. She would start in the morning about eight; and going out of meeting immediately after sermon in the afternoon, walked homeward till overtaken by persons who rode on horseback or in a wagon, and occasionally would get a ride part of the way, and reach home at four in the afternoon.

It is remembered with pleasure that in the old meeting-house the venerable old men sat on a seat prepared for them at the base of the pulpit, wearing on their bald heads a white, linen cap in summer, and a red woolen or flannel cap in winter. This practice continued as late as 1825 and 1830.

Among the ancient men who thus sat in the "old men's seat," the following are distinctly remembered: Reuben Abbot, senior, Christopher Rowell, senior, John Shute, Capt. Joseph Farnum, Samuel Goodwin, Moses Abbot, Reuben Abbot, 2d, Nathan Abbot, and Chandler Lovejoy.

The intermission was short—an hour in winter and an hour and a half in summer. The people all stayed except those in the immediate vicinity—and hence, as every body attended the same meeting, a fine opportunity was afforded for every body to be acquainted. Old people now say that they used to know every person in town. Thus public worship greatly promoted social union and good feeling throughout the whole community. Whatever new or interesting event occurred in one neighborhood, such as a death, birth, marriage, or any accident, became a subject of conversation, and thus communication was kept up between the people of remote sections, who saw each other on no other day than the Sabbath. Previous to about 1822 there was no stove to warm the meeting-house. The practice then was, for each family who thought it necessary for their comfort, to carry a small hand-stove, made usually of perforated tin, or sheet-iron, fastened in a wooden frame, about eight or nine inches square, in which was placed a little pan of coals. Those who traveled a considerable distance would step into some house near by, before meeting—such as Dea. Kimball’s, Judge Walker’s, Esq. John Bradley’s, Mr. Hannaford’s, Mr. Coffin’s, or Robert Davis’s, and fill up their little pan with live coals. This would keep their feet warm, and two or three dozen such stoves would, by afternoon, give a softened temperature to the whole house. At the intermission the elderly people usually stepped into Dea. Kimball’s, or some other hospitable neighbor’s, where they found a good fire blazing out from the great chimney, and, forming a circle around the room, sat and conversed of the sermon and any thing else that was fit for the Sabbath, making sure to hear and tell all the news of the week. There they would eat the lunch which they had brought, and one of the boys, at the motion of his father, would bring in and pass round a mug of cider—all relishing equally well!

On the west side of the old meeting-house was, and is, a horse-block, famous for its accommodations to the women in mounting and dismounting the horses. It consists in a large, round, flat stone, seven and a half feet in diameter, or about twenty-two feet in circumference, raised about four feet high, with steps. Tradition says it was erected at the instance of the good wives who rode on pillions, and that they agreed to pay a pound of butter, apiece to defray the expense. This horse-block deserves to be celebrated, not only for the “aid and comfort” it afforded to the elderly folks, but for the many glorious jumps off of it and sports around it, which the children have had for three generations. I believe it was an understood condition in the sale of the meeting-house that the horse-block and weather-cock should remain forever!

ANCIENT SINGING.

In the early period of the settlement, from 1730 till about the time of the Revolution, the singing on the Sabbath was led by some one appointed for the purpose; he, giving out the tune and reading two lines at a time of the psalm or hymn which was to be sung — and the singers, with as many of the congregation as were able, joining in the service. What was called "Tate & Brady's Collection" was then used. After Mr. John Kimball, subsequently deacon, came into town, some innovations were introduced. Being one of the singers, Mr. Kimball proposed to Rev. Mr. Walker to dispense with the lining of the hymns, as it was called, on the Sabbath; but as Mr. Walker thought it not prudent to attempt it first on the Sabbath, it was arranged between them to make the change on Thanksgiving day. Accordingly, after a hymn had been given out, the leader, as usual, read two lines; the singers struck in, but, instead of stopping at the end of the two lines, kept on, drowning the voice of the leader, who persisted in his vocation of lining the hymn! This was the first change.

When the meeting-house was finished, in 1784, it was fitted up with a singers' pew in the gallery opposite the pulpit. This was a large, square pew, with a box, or table, in the middle, for the singers to lay their books on. In singing they rose and faced each other, forming a hollow square. At this time the chorister used, for pitching the tune, what was called a pitch-pipe, made of wood; an inch or more wide, somewhat in the form of a boy's whistle, but so constructed as to admit of different keys. Under the ministry of Rev. Mr. Evans, who was himself very fond of music, some instruments were introduced, which was the second great innovation, and attended with so much excitement and opposition, that, according to tradition, some persons left the meeting-house rather than hear the profane sounds of "the fiddle and flute." During this period Dea. John Kimball and Capt.
David Davis are remembered as being leading singers. Master Flagg and Simeon G. Hall — the latter a son of Dea. David Hall — dressed in small clothes with knee-buckles, played the flute. About this time Watts's Psalms and Hymns were used in singing, and an old singing book called the Worcester Collection.

Mr. Asa McFarland was first introduced to Concord as a teacher of music, about 1793, and after his settlement a musical society was formed, which obtained an act of incorporation. The society was duly organized September 10, 1799, at a meeting in the old town-hall, and the following officers chosen: Timothy Walker, Esq., president; John Odlin, clerk; Jacob Abbot, Jr., treasurer; Timothy Chandler, Richard Ayer and Jonathan Eastman, trustees; Jacob Abbot, Jr., chorister; Thomas Stickney, Jr., assistant chorister.

At an adjourned meeting, October 7, 1799, Nathan Ballard, Jr., was elected 2d assistant chorister; Thomas Stickney, Jr., collector, and Jacob Abbot, Jr., librarian; and a tax of twenty-five cents laid on each member.

To this society Dea. Joseph Hall made a donation of five hundred dollars, as a permanent fund,"* from a desire to encourage and promote the practice of sacred music in the town of Concord," which fund, safely invested, has proved highly conducive to the proposed end; the interest annually accruing therefrom being devoted to the object. The following persons have

* Whereas I, Joseph Hall, of Concord, in the County of Rockingham and State of New-Hampshire, gentleman, from a desire to encourage and promote the practice of sacred music in said town of Concord, have thought proper to make a donation to the "Concord Musical Society" of the sum of five hundred dollars in the funded debt of the United States, bearing at this time an interest of six per cent. per annum. Now, to the intent that a full understanding of my will in respect to the said donation may be known to the members of the said society and all others, whom it may concern, I do hereby voluntarily enter the same on the record of the said society.

been appointed choristers by the Society, who were also leaders of the choir in the old North meeting-house, viz:

1799 — Jacob Abbot, Jr. 1806 — James Ayer.
1800 — Timothy Chandler. 1810 — George Hough.
1801 — George Hough. 1811 — James Ayer.
1802 — Thomas Stickney, Jr. 1816 — George Hough.
1804 — Timothy Chandler. 1822 — Samuel Fletcher.

When the addition was made to the meeting-house, in 1802, the old singers' pew was taken away, but seats assigned them in the same relative position opposite to the pulpit. They stood in singing, but did not turn round. The musical instruments which were used for many years, more or less, were the violin and bass-viol, the flute and clarinet.

The first organ used in town was in the Unitarian meeting-house, and which was burnt with the house in 1854; the second in the Episcopal church; the third in the South Congregational; the fourth in the New North; and the fifth in the First Baptist meeting-house.

Music has for a number of years past been cultivated as a science. In this, as in every considerable place, there are gentlemen wholly devoted to it, as a profession.

In the families of the original settlers, and also in those of their descendants of the second and third generation, religious order was maintained. The late aged Mrs. Hazeltine gave the writer the names of all the families that lived on Concord Main street when she was a little girl — about 1746 — and says they all had "family orders" — that is, attended family prayer. Having very few books, the Bible was daily read, and the Assembly's Shorter Catechism committed to memory and recited by the children, who were also trained to habits of strict submission, and obedience to parental authority. Most of the heads of families also were members of the church, either on the "half way covenant," or in full communion, and their children were baptized. Commonly each family had a nice white blanket, called the "baptism blanket," in which their children, in succession, were carried out.
to meeting for baptism. George Abbot, Esq., and his sister Betsey, wife of Amos Hoyt, have the white linen blanket, about a yard square, which was used as the baptism blanket for all of Dea. George Abbot’s family, nine sons, and of his son Ezra’s family, eleven in number. It has been used for the baptism of children to the sixth generation, besides being borrowed for the same purpose by neighbors. It is now more than one hundred years old, and not a brack in it!

The social manners and customs of the people in early times were simple, friendly and unceremonious. Visiting was common and frequent among neighbors, and often without formal invitation. When a company of neighbors was invited, the women went early and “spent the afternoon,” taking their knitting or other handy work, and their babies with them. Their husbands either accompanied them, or went in season to take supper and return early in the evening. Tradition relates that on one occasion the women who lived near the meeting-house made a visit to their friend, Mrs. Elizabeth Hazeltine, living about three miles distant, on what is now called the Silk Farm, to assist her in quilting. Being young mothers, they took their babies and reached the house early, expecting to finish the quilt so as to be home by sundown. But night came on and the quilt was not out. Candles were then wanting, for the lack of which Mr. Hazeltine went to his wood-pile, and, picking out a large pitch-pine stump, placed it whole on the fire. The light was wonderful—all but equalling the orb of day—enabling the women to finish “the flowers” in the quilt in the handsomest style. The husbands being now present, all partook of a well cooked supper, and at such an hour as a modern party begins, this closed. The babies were wrapped in their warm blankets, and each one placed in its mother’s arms after she was seated on the nice blue pillon behind her husband; and all started for “home—sweet home!”

The suppers on these occasions consisted of plain, wholesome food—new bread, pies, dough-nuts, sometimes roasted meat, or turkey, with good cider for the men, and a cup of tea for the ladies. The ancient customs of the early settlers are still preserved in a considerable degree in the “West Parish,” and in the eastern section of the town. But in the main village the change is entire. This, however, was gradually brought about. The customs of old families—the Ayers, Bradleys, Walkers, Kimballs, Stickneys, &c., were modified and new ones introduced by new families that moved into the village. Among these may be mentioned the Harris and Duncan families, previous to 1800, who were reckoned genteel and fashionable. Col. William A. Kent, a gentleman of highly social qualities, and his wife, a lady of accomplished manners; Peter Green, Esq., and at a later day Hon. Thomas W. Thompson and family, took a lead in the fashions of society. The hours for parties were changed from early after dinner, to late in the afternoon; then from six o'clock to seven, eight and nine; and the hour for retiring till ten, eleven, and still later. Of course the knitting and other handy work which formed a part of the social entertainment of olden times, is not considered genteel at this day!

In the social gatherings of young people, of both sexes, dancing was a favorite amusement. Old Mr. Herbert says, "The young folks always danced, sometimes with a fiddle, and sometimes without, but when there was no fiddler they sung and danced to the tune;" but he adds, "we always went home by nine o'clock." On particular occasions, such as ordinations, new year, and other times, there were evening dancing parties, in which not only the young, but elderly and married people participated. Although the parson, deacons, and other members of the church, did not "join in the dance," yet they would "look on," and admit that there was "no harm simply in dancing, though the time might be more profitably spent."

The amusements and recreations of young men were mostly of the athletic kind. "Playing ball" was always practiced, as it still is, in the spring and fall. Wrestling was very common; but this took place at social and public gatherings, especially at raisings, when, after the labor of raising the building was over, stimulated by the good treat which all hands had received, they were disposed to show their strength in raising or prostrating one another. First, the sport would begin with youngsters trying their strength in the centre of a circle formed by spectators. Then older and stronger ones would come into the ring. Wagers would be laid, and a little more stimulant taken in would give wonderful elasticity and strength to the parties. By and by defiant and angry words would be heard, and it was well if a fight did not end the sport. The most famous wrestler and fighter of old times was Ephraim Colby.* The last wrestling match that is remembered to have taken place in the Main street was at the raising of Capt. Joseph Walker's large barn, about 1831.

It should be added that it was customary at all large raisings, after the ridge pole was fairly in its place, for the master-workman to celebrate or dedicate the whole, by dashing upon it a bottle of rum, with three hearty cheers from the company. Atkinson Webster, Esq., says the last rum-ceremony of this kind that he remembers, was at the raising of the first Eagle coffee-house, in 1827.

ANCIENT TRAVEL.

For more than eighty years Concord was the great thoroughfare for travel from the northwestern and northern parts of New-Hampshire and adjoining portions of Vermont, to Portsmouth, Salem, Newburyport and Boston, which were the principal market places. Wagons in summer and sleds in winter, loaded with produce of various kinds, were drawn to market by oxen or horses. The former were the more common as late as 1780. From Plymouth to Portsmouth the road run through Sanbornton, Canterbury and the northeast part of Concord. In that section of the town, Mr. John Hoyt, father of Jacob, built a log house (in which Jacob was born) and kept a tavern that was very celebrated in that day. The oven in it was so spacious that a boy twelve years old could go in and turn round. Mr. Hoyt charged half a pistareen, or about nine cents, for keeping a yoke of oxen over night. One night thirty-three teams, or sixty-six oxen, put up there. The barn was large and well filled with hay, which was chiefly cut from a meadow of natural mowing belonging to the farm. Mr. Hoyt also raised his own stock — cattle, sheep, &c., and his table was well supplied with fresh meat; but travelers usually carried their own bread and cheese. This tavern was kept there from 1780 till Mr. Hoyt's death, in 1805. Wolves and bears were common in that section, within the memory of his son Jacob, now eighty-three years of age.

village passed over "Kimball's ferry" or over "Merrill's ferry," to Newburyport, Salem and Boston. Since 1800 the travel in the winter with loaded sleighs, drawn by two horses, was so great that it was not uncommon to see fifteen, twenty, thirty and more passing through Main street in a line, at a time. As Concord was a convenient stopping place, consequently good taverns were established in sufficient number to accommodate the travel. At the north end were Mann's, Hannaford's, afterwards Barker's, tavern; George's, Herbert's and Stickney's. In the middle of the street Kinsman's, Osgood's, Gale's, Hutchins's, and at a later period others; at the lower end of the street was Butters's. These were well kept and well supported. The stables were very capacious, tables were amply furnished with provisions and cider, while the bar was always well stocked with every sort of spirituous liquor.

After the boating business was established at Concord, immense quantities of produce of every kind were conveyed to Boston market by boats; and goods in return, taken from the landing place and conveyed into the interior in heavy loaded wagons, drawn by four, six and eight horses. Thus business continued till the opening of the Concord railroad in 1842.

ANCIENT MASTING.

Concord was formerly famous for the noble mast trees which it furnished, not only for his "Majesty's royal navy,"* but at a later period for ships and vessels of various kinds built along the seashore. The best masts were drawn from the northwesterly section of Horse-hill, conveyed to the Contoocook river, at what is now called the Mast-yard, thence floated down to the Merrimack river direct, or they were drawn by teams from the Borough to the sand-banks, or below Sewall's falls, and there thrown into the river. The first mast-master we have particular knowledge of was Lieut. John Webster. He once lived in a small house on the spot where Samuel A. Kimball, Esq., lives, and carried on masting operations in Concord and neighboring towns. Mr. Timothy Walker remembers that Lieut. Webster cut a mast in Northfield which measured thirty-eight inches diameter at sixty feet from the butt, and took one hundred and four oxen, or fifty-two teams, to draw it.

* In early times the large white pines suitable for masts were marked as they stood in the forests, "G. R."

The next famous mast-master was Capt. Reuben Kimball. The manner in which he carried on the business was as follows: Taking a strong team in the winter, of twenty yoke of oxen or more, with sleds and an adequate number of men, he went into the woods and camped. His men were divided into sections for particular parts of the work, called swampers, teamsters, choppers, peelers and tailsmen. The swampers cleared the way; choppers cut down the trees; peelers peeled off the bark; teamsters drove the oxen; and two tailsmen walked by the side of the hind team, and in case at any time the tongue of the sled, in passing a hollow place, run so high as to lift the hind oxen up by the neck, then the tailsmen seized the tails of the oxen and drew them outward, so that in coming down the tongue of the sled would not strike them.

In going on to the ground the mast-master usually rode on horseback and gave his orders. In drawing the logs on a sled the mast-master, or other principal man, road on the sled and thence gave out his orders.

Among other mast-masters of olden time the following are well remembered: Ezekiel Carter, of the West Parish, John Bradley, Esq., and Jonathan Eastman. The late Jeremiah Pecker was extensively engaged in rafting logs down the river.

ANCIENT PORK BARRELS.

Mr. Joseph P. Stickney has now in use in his cellar, two pork barrels that were brought into Penacook by his ancestor, Lieut. Jeremiah Stickney, about the year 1731; which have been in use every year since, and still appear to be sound. They were made of what is called heart-pine; require to be hooped once in about twenty years. Their remarkable preservation so long is attributed to the salt and brine which are constantly in them.

AN ANCIENT PEAR TREE.

Standing on the farm of Nathan K. Abbot, and a few rods south of his house, is a pear tree that is known to have stood over ninety-five years. It grew up a seedling, but the fruit, which ripens in September, is large and of excellent quality, nearly equal to the modern "Bartlett pear." It bears more or less every year, but abundantly every other year. Besides supplying the family with pears, it is estimated that at least four hundred dollars worth have been sold for cash. When the tree was owned by the late Thomas Abbot, his practice was in the season of the fruit to invite his friends to visit him and "eat pears," which they did do with good relish!

THE OLD HAY SCALES.

The old hay scales, as they were called by way of eminence, were located in the valley southeast of the Town Hall, and of which the annexed cut presents as good a view as could be obtained by a description from memory.

These scales were the wonderment of boys throughout the village thirty-five and forty years ago, and the process of weighing loads of hay always attracted more or less of them, who watched the movements of Mr. Ayer* with the utmost interest. Great skill was requisite in the driver, in order to check up his cattle when the cart-wheels reached their assigned position; but they very often shot over, and then he was compelled to drive around—making a wide radius, and entering the establishment with greater caution than before. When the load reached its exact position, the cattle were detached, the cart tongue suspended by a chain, one end of which was made fast beneath the roof, and the crank turned by which to raise the load from the ground. Then the crank was made fast, when Mr. Ayer went into the little projection at the east end, and, looking first at a printed table upon the wall, and then working upon his slate, summed up the weight, to the amazement of the boys and the satisfaction of the owner of the hay. The whole affair was a perfect puzzle to village urchins, and will not soon be forgotten.†

DESCRIPTIVE AND PERSONAL.

In the preceding chapters we have given, in chronological order, whatever pertains to the civil affairs of the town, with numerous miscellaneous incidents and anecdotes relative to ancient and modern times. The limits assigned to our work require that the remaining portions, embracing, each, a distinct subject, should be more condensed, in matter and form.

PHYSICAL HISTORY.

The most striking physical features of Concord are its Rivers, Ponds and Streams; its Diluvium Plains and Granite Hills.

The Merrimack river, which, properly, is formed by the confluence at Franklin of the Pemigewasset and Winnepiseogee branches, receives on the northern line of the town the Contoocook river from the west, and thence flows, gently and gracefully meandering through the whole length of the township, dividing it near the centre into eastern and western sections. Above Sewall's Island is a considerable fall, but no available water power is afforded until it reaches Turkey and Garvin's Falls. Subject to freshes, or overflowings of its banks from heavy rains and sudden melting of snows, the whole adjacent interval is sometimes covered with water, as far as the eye can reach. These freshes more commonly occur in the spring and autumn. After a great rain the river attains its greatest height in about twenty-one hours. Sometimes extensive damage is done to bridges, mills, lumber, &c., but the freshes, by their alluvial deposit, enrich the intervals for a future crop.

Within the past fifty years great changes have taken place in the bed and course of the river. In 1853, at the request of the New Hampshire Historical Society, Dr. William Prescott made an examination and survey of these changes, assisted by Richard Bradley and Jonathan Eastman, Esqs. In his report to the Society Dr. Prescott specifies these changes, which he attributes to three causes: 1. To abrasions, or the wearing away of the bank on one side of the river, and a corresponding filling in of the other. 2. To freshes. 3. To artificial operations along the river. By the first process the channel becomes more and more crooked; long curves and short bends are formed, until only a narrow neck of land remains at some point, which is cut through at the next great overflow, thereby forming a new channel, while the old one is left, either dry or studded with stagnant pools. In this way, no doubt, in ancient times, Horse-shoe pond and the Frog ponds were formed. Previous to 1825 the river, passing the bluffs at Sugar Ball, had flowed in a remarkably circuitous channel along the banks by Fort Eddy, sweeping easterly, southerly and westerly, so as to form a respectable ox-bow. A great freshet, in 1826, swept away a large mass of bank on the east side, and in 1828 it cut a channel directly through from Sugar Ball, forming, on the west, an island, now owned by Richard Bradley. The first week in January, 1831, the river swept straight across Hale's Point, cutting off the old ferry road. Other changes are visible above and below Farnum's eddy; in the vicinity of Squaw lot; above and south of the Free bridge, where the whole width of the channel has been changed from east to west,* and at the curve in the vicinity of the Frog ponds, where much new and valuable land has been formed on the west side, by washings and deposits from the eastern bluffs.

In the construction of the Northern Railroad, in 1846 and 1847, Farnum's eddy was filled up and rubbled, thus throwing the current of the river to the east side. At Sewall's Island, where the river flowed around it, the whole course was turned east. At Goodwin's Point, around the west end of which, close under the great sand bank, the river formerly flowed, about forty acres were cut off by excavating a new channel on the east side, and forming an island. In excavating this channel the workmen, at the depth of about twelve feet, struck upon a bed of vegetable matter, consisting of leaves, twigs, branches and trunks of small trees, the form of which was perfect, and the limbs and bark distinct. This vegetable deposit was imbedded in a stratum of fine, blue sand, from one to three inches in thickness. Hence it is inferred that this place was, at some remote period, the bed of the river; and that, in fact, the whole of what now constitutes our rich and beautiful interval, has been produced, or manufactured out of the adjacent uplands, by the ceaseless action and deposits of the river.†

The Contoocook river rises in or near Rindge, N. H.; flows north-erly, nearly parallel with Merrimack river, through Peterborough, Antrim, Hillsborough, Henniker and Hopkinton, about fifty miles, and as it approaches its junction with the Merrimack—from the “Mast Yard” to its mouth — it runs through, and, indeed, constitutes a fertile section of Concord, and affords fine mill privileges for more than a mile in its course, at the Borough and at Fisherville.

The Soucook river rises in Gilmanston, and, entering Concord near the line between Loudon and Chichester, furnishes the water power at “Dickerman’s Mills,” so called; thence constituting the boundary between Concord and Pembroke, it flows east of the “Dark Plain,” affording mill privileges along its course, till it empties into the Merrimack below Garvin’s Falls. This river, after it enters Concord, is very crooked and rapid, requiring seven bridges to be maintained for convenience of crossing it.

The Ponds in Concord are — 1. Turkey Pond, in the south-west part of the town, containing about one hundred and seventy acres, by survey of Capt. Benjamin Parker — so called from a fancied resemblance in its form to a turkey, with its ample body and bended neck. Surrounded with bogs, the waters of this pond are of a dark color, imparting their hue somewhat to the fish with which it abounds. Northerly of this principal pond, and united with it by a small stream, is Little Turkey pond, which, in the summer season, is a place of delightful resort by people from the main village. The outlet of both is Turkey river, a considerable stream, affording valuable mill-sites. Here was the first grist and saw-mill ever erected on the west side of Merrimack river.

2. Horse-shoe Pond, at the head of Main street — in form resembling the shoe of a horse — was, no doubt, anciently the bed of Merrimack river. It encloses a fertile tract of land, owned by Joseph B. Walker, Esq. The house lots west of this tract were, in the original survey, called the “Island range.” This pond is crossed by the track of the Northern Railroad. The outlet and inlet of it is called Wattanummon’s brook. Connected by the brook with Merrimack river at the east end, the water in the pond rises and falls according to the flow of water in the river. This pond abounds with perch and pickerel, larger than are found in any other place in town.

3. Long Pond is a beautiful sheet of water, in the west part of the town, one mile and three fourths in length, half a mile in the widest part, and its mean or average width 75½ rods. As lately surveyed by George Abbot, Esq., it contains an area of two hundred and sixty-five acres. Its greatest depth, as measured by Reuben K. Abbot, in the summer of 1852, was eighty-four feet. Fed by streams that gush from neighboring hills, the water in the pond is cool, pure, clear as crystal, and abounds with perch and pickerel, whose color is bright and sparkling. Only one trout was ever caught in this pond; it weighed about five pounds. From the north end issues a never-failing stream, that affords valuable mill privileges. It is said that no person was ever drowned in this pond. Should the city of Concord, in its main village, ever require “Croton,” or “Ochituate water,” like the smaller cities of New-York and Boston, we cannot doubt it will be supplied from Long Pond.

4. Little Pond, on the hill easterly of Long Pond, lies quietly in a basin, concealed from view by a thick grove on the west and south, and by an overshadowing hill on the north.

5. On the east side of the river, towards the Loudon line, is Turtle Pond, supposed to derive its name from the unusual quantity and size of turtles found there. It is nearly surrounded by bog and swamp land. When the pond is frozen over there is occasionally heard issuing from it a deep, low, groaning sort of sound, which elderly people in the neighborhood describe, by saying—"The pond has the belly-ache — there will soon be a change of weather." Its waters are discharged by Mill-brook, through the valley, southerly, into the Merrimack, furnishing excellent water privileges in the East village for mills and factories. On this stream the first grist and saw-mill in Concord was built, in 1729.

6. Snow Pond, north-west of Turtle Pond, on the westerly side of Oak Hill, derives its name from an early settler by the name of Zerobhabel Snow. According to a recent survey, by Capt. Benjamin Parker, it contains about twenty-five acres. Jacob Hoyt, Esq., says that near this pond Mr. Snow, on a hunting excursion, was treed by a pack of wolves just at night. He fired away at them all the balls he had, and then cut off buttons from his coat and discharged them; but the wolves kept round the tree till broad day light next morning, when they went off, and he escaped. On the north-west issues a small stream, sufficient to carry a shingle-mill. Unitting with Hackett's brook, this stream flows into the Merrimack river above Sewall's falls bridge.

North-east of Snow's pond, in a deep valley at the base of Oak Hill, on the Concord and Loudon line, is a pond measuring thirty-one rods across it, called Hot-hole Pond, the bottom of which, it is said, has never been reached.

The Interval land that borders Merrimack river, from a quarter of a mile to a mile in width, is distinguished for its extent, beauty and fertility. Though of unequal quality in different places, yet, taken together, it yields bountiful crops of grass, corn, oats, potatoes, and sometimes wheat. The soil throughout is a rich alluvial, believed to be equal to any on the Connecticut river, within the limits of New-Hampshire, except that at the "Ox-bow," so called, in Haverhill. Large solitary trees of elm and walnut, scattered over the interval, add greatly to the beauty of the prospect, as surveyed from adjacent uplands.

On the east side of the Merrimack the "Dark Plain," extending from Turkey Falls to Mill-brook, about five miles in length, and from the eastern bluffs of the Merrimack to the Soucook, three miles, was formerly covered with a heavy growth of pitch-pine. Though the growth on this plain has been repeatedly cut off and burnt over, it still remains a "dark pine plain;" thin, sandy soil, incapable of much improvement by cultivation. When the pine growth is cut and subdued, shrub oaks spring up; or, what is much better, a rich growth of blueberry and whortleberry bushes. Opposite to this plain, on the west side of the river, is another, extending from Turkey falls to Main street, and from the banks of the Merrimack southwesterly, to the Iron Works. In the West parish is a plain, which extends from the burying-ground, near the meeting-house, to Fisherville northerly, and from the banks of the Merrimack to the Contoocook river west. One portion of this is dry, sandy soil, and another portion wet, heavy bog.

Of the up-lands in Concord there is considerable diversity of quality, generally uneven, rough and hilly; of hard, granite soil, a large part covered originally with a heavy growth of hard-wood; but, when cleared and cultivated, forming excellent farms and good pastures. On the east side, northerly of the Dark Plain, is a tract of hard-wood and pine, of gravelly soil and not very productive. The tract bordering Turtle pond is valuable for pasture and tillage. Westernly to Oak hill is a growth of hard maple, from which sugar is manufactured; and a chestnut orchard, belonging to the Potter family, annually yields from sixty to eighty bushels of chestnuts, which sell from $2.50 to $3.00 a bushel. Westernly and northerly of Oak hill—which is famous for its heavy growth of hard wood—in what is called "Snaptown," and "the Mountain" districts, are some of the best upland and most productive farms in the town.

On the west side of Merrimack river the "Horse-hill" district is especially noted for its rich pastures, and for the excellent dairies which furnish the market with butter and cheese. The whole of the West parish district is an uneven tract, composed of wood, pasture and arable land; which latter, cultivated by the patient and persevering industry of hardy yeomanry, richly rewards their labors. More attention is paid to raising fruit in this section than in any other part of the town. Not only excellent apples, but peaches, pears and plums, of various kinds, are raised here. Owned by the Flanders family is a valuable chestnut grove. The Abbots, Carters and Farmums, now living in the West parish, retain and cultivate the old homestead farms which have descended to them from their ancestors. Mr. Stephen Carlton supplies the market with the best of early vegetables and fruit, and Dea. Ira Rowell with the purest of milk—sending in on Saturday evening a generous supply for the Sabbath. What is true of the section westerly of "Long Pond" is applicable equally to the "Little Pond" district, where beautiful and productive farms are seen. The scenery in the vicinity of Long Pond, especially in summer and autumn, is highly picturesque, beautiful and attractive.

The remaining sections in the westerly part of the town, including "Beech," "Dimond" and "Stickney Hill," present a fine growth of wood and timber; are rich in pasture, and, under cultivation, fertile. The section known as the "Bog Road," formerly the "Great Swamp," now cleared and cultivated, yields an abundant reward for the labor bestowed upon it. The "Iron Works" section is well cultivated and productive.

Granite is found in every part of the town in ledges, or cobblestones on the surface, in inexhaustible quantities, but varying in quality and texture in different locations. West of the Main village is a hill range, of the primary formation, running from north to south, about three miles in length. This is covered with a thin soil, overgrown with wood of every variety, but beneath the surface composed of granite ledges. The range rises to its highest point in the geographical centre of the town, about two miles from the main village, where it is computed to be five hundred and eighty feet above the high water mark of the river. The more northerly section of this range belongs to the town farm; the central portion to John and Simeon Abbot, and to Moses II. and Benjamin Farnum; the southern and “Summit ledge,” as it called, belonged to the estate of the late Charles Walker, Esq. It was purchased in 1834, by Luther Roby and William Green,* by whom, under the superintendence of Mr. Roby, it has been extensively wrought.

Near the Summit, on the eastern declivity of this range, are localities known as the old Rattlesnake Dens. Particular rocks have also received names from circumstances connected with them; such as “Sheep rock,” “Old Phebe,” “Sow rock,” “Raccoon” and “La Fayette.” Mr. Simeon Abbot and Mr. Luther Roby have furnished some interesting and amusing facts and anecdotes, derived from tradition and personal observation. Mr. Abbot says: “My father bought thirty-six acres of the hill, which I and my brother John now own, for fifty cents an acre, or $18. He sold a single rock, called the ‘Phebe Rock,’ to Gass and Johnson, for $110. They sold it on a contract, at the State Prison, for $1540. It was wrought there for the New-Orleans market, and sold for $6000.” This ‘Phebe rock’ lay upon the surface, and derived its name from the Phebe bird, which built its nest annually under its lofty sides. On this the first experiment of seam shot blasting was tried. Joseph Parker and Jacob Badger were the managers. Having made a seam by means of wedges through the depth of the rock, they began at the outer edges and poured in sand, which, running obliquely, filled the crevice sufficiently for the purpose. They then deposited a keg, or twenty-five pounds of powder; in the middle, overspreading the same with sand and pressing it down as hard as could safely be done. For a fuse they inserted a thistle-stalk, and then set a slow match of tow, extending a considerable distance. The explosion produced a shock like a little earthquake; the huge mass was thrown over, to the amazement and joy of the beholders! When split and worked up it was found to contain 11,000 feet of dimension stone, beside a large quantity of cellar and refuse stone. The “Sow rock” contained six thousand feet, and was so called from the fact that a sow found a secure retreat under its sides for a litter of pigs in rattlesnake times. The “La Fayette rock” was so named about the time Gen. La Fayette visited this place, in 1825. Its splitting qualities were so remarkable that the workmen frequently exclaimed, as the pieces were split off—“as true as the leaves of the Bible”—meaning exact and regular. From this portion of the hill the stones were obtained for the first gristmill built in Concord, in 1729, by Nathan Symonds.

* Lately sold to the New-York and Concord Granite Company.

In 1819 Messrs. John P. Gass and Dearborn Johnson made a contract with the State, and hired the convicts at the prison, for the purpose of supplying a foreign market; and the products of their labor, by means of the Concord and Boston Boating Company, which had just commenced operations, reached Boston, New-York, Philadelphia and Baltimore.

In 1820, and for quite a number of years afterwards, the business was successfully carried on by the warden of the prison, Capt. Moses Pillsbury, the successor of Capt. Dearborn, by whose efforts and perseverance stone splitting and cutting was reduced to a system. Stones were furnished to the prison in the rough at twelve and one half cents per surface foot, or fourteen cents per cubic foot. From 1819 to 1834 the foreign trade was pursued with vigor and profit, giving employment to many of the inhabitants of Concord.

Mr. Roby, who has carried on the business of cutting, splitting and hammering stone for the last fourteen years, relates that in 1842 he got out of his ledge stones for the Concord dépôt that weighed from twelve to fourteen tons. One of the largest of these stones, about seventeen feet long, he drew from the top of the ledge the back way — that is, by Little Pond road — having the power of forty yoke of oxen to draw it. The stone was placed on two strong, new sleds, in the month of March. The chain which he used, weighing about five hundred pounds, with studded links, was broken soon after the first start, and the sleds run back to the brow of the ledge against a large oak tree. One sled was entirely demolished, and the hind beam of the other broken. A second attempt, with new chains and sleds, was successful.

From this ledge, at the expense of the State, was furnished the block for the Washington Monument, four feet and two inches wide, and eighteen inches thick. It is polished and lettered, New-Hampshire.

From the summit of Granite hill, above Roby's ledge, is a magnificent view of the main village, the interval of the Merrimack, and a large portion of the eastern section of the State. Westerly and northerly the prospect is bounded only by the distant horizon — taking in the Monadnock, Kearsarge, Moosehillock, and, in fine weather, mountains extending to the White hills.

There is a valuable granite ledge on the hill south-west of Richard Bradley's, owned by Joseph B. Walker.

On Horse-hill, near the Mast Yard dépôt, is a locality of porphyritic granite. Boulders, also, of porphyritic granite and of other kinds, some of mica slate, are found, supposed to have drifted from localities at the north.

A short distance from the West Concord meeting-house, on the line of the railroad, is a locality of quartz and feldspar.

Iron Ore in small quantities was found at an early period, in the south-westerly part of the town, and at the bend in the river, south-east of the main village, above Concord bridge. The surface of the soil still indicates the existence of ore.
Excellent clay, for making bricks, is found on the Hopkinton road, three miles from the State House; also, westerly of Turkey falls; on the London road, near Turtle pond, and various other places.

Of the Quadrupeds, Birds, Reptiles and Fishes of Concord, little more can be said than that they are such as are common to the northern parts of New-England.* Bears, wolves, deer and beaver, formerly here, like the original natives, have become extinct, or withdrawn from the face of civilized men. The partridge is common, but the quail is a rare bird in Concord. After a residence of thirty years, the writer has yet to see the first one. Rattlesnakes are no more: the war against the varmint, and especially the premium offered for their "tails," has resulted in their extermination. Formerly, the good people caught their own shad and salmon, which annually, in the spring season, passed up the Merrimack to their summer resorts—in the Winnepiseogee and Pemigewasset waters; but factories, and dams across the river, have impeded their course, and left us to lust in vain for their flesh. It is a curious fact, well attested, that formerly, as the shad and salmon reached the confluence of waters that form the Merrimack river, at Franklin, the former always went up the Winnepiseogee branch to the lake of that name; and the latter, the Pemigewasset branch to the Squam and Newfound lakes—there respectively "to lay their young." A few salmon, in old times, went up the Contoocook river, and in ascending the falls where Fisherville now is, were caught in pots and nets. When President Monroe visited the town, in 1817, he took an excursion, in a small steamer, down the river as far as the locks and canal at Garvin's falls, and in passing through the canal a large salmon was caught, which was taken on board and introduced to the President, who expressed his great gratification, and said it was the first live salmon he had ever seen.

Concord has never been distinguished for its fruits. The apple flourishes well, and was formerly raised in considerable quantities for the purpose of making cider. Within the last twenty-five years many of the old apple orchards have been cut down; others have been renovated by being grafted with scions of a superior quality. Young orchards are found in every section of the town.

The pear and peach do not flourish so well in the main village as on the uplands east and west of the river. Vegetables common to New-England are abundant here. Native grapes are found; but the more delicate exotic grapes are not sure of coming to maturity before they are nipped by frost. Various kinds of wild berries—the strawberry, blackberry, blueberry, whortleberry, raspberry; also, the hazel nut, oilnut, chestnut, walnut, (in less quantities,) are found in every section of the town.

Trees. Concord is distinguished for the elms and other beautiful trees which ornament the principal streets of the main village. The Rev. Timothy Walker, and his son Timothy, with the help of "Prince," about the year 1756, set out four elms standing in front of the house of Joseph B. Walker, and the one standing now in the yard in front of the house where Mr. Walker was born; and, also, one elm standing at the easterly corner of the house of the venerable Timothy Walker. One elm, a little north of the four first named, was probably set out about thirty years afterwards. These elms, taken together, are the most stately in town.*

* See a list of these, severally, in the Documentary Chapter, furnished by William Prescott, M. D.

Ezekiel Walker, brother of James, set out three elm trees in 1760, in front of the Hannaford house, so called, now belonging to Professor Stephen M. Vail, of the Biblical Institute.

Capt. Enoch Coffin, and his brother, Col. John Coffin, about the year 1782, set out the elm now standing in front of the house of Samuel Coffin, Esq., — a tree admirable for its fair and magnificent proportions, as represented in the above cut, though not equal to the original. The elegant elm tree close to the house of the late Abiel Walker was set out about the same time.

* Circumference of first, at three feet from the ground, sixteen feet; at six feet from the ground, fourteen feet. Trunk divides into branches at twelve feet from the ground, and the diameter of the top, measured up and down Main street, is one hundred feet; and measured at right angles with Main street, is one hundred feet.

Circumference of second, at three feet from the ground, twelve feet and nine inches; at six feet from the ground, twelve feet and three inches.

Circumference of third, at three feet from the ground, nine feet; at six feet from the ground, nine feet and three inches.

Circumference of fourth, at three feet from the ground, thirteen feet; at six feet from the ground, twelve feet.

Circumference of the fifth, at three feet from the ground, eight feet and two inches; at six feet from the ground, seven feet and nine inches. This tree was planted at a later date.

Tree in front of Timothy Walker's house. Circumference, at three feet from the ground, twelve feet and nine inches; at six feet from the ground, twelve feet and two inches.
RESIDENCE OF THE LATE COL. THOMAS STICKNEY.
Ephraim Colby set out an elm tree at the corner of the burying-ground, near a house owned by David George, now burnt down. He also set out the four elm trees in front of the house owned by the late Dr. Peter Green — since burnt down — now partly shading the house of Henry A. Newhall, opposite the Court house. It is supposed that these trees were set out by Colby about the year 1787.

The six elms now standing in front of the old house of Rev. Dr. Bouton, were set out about 1787, by Major Daniel Livermore, who built the house in 1785. The wide-spread elms in front of the mansion of the late Col. Thomas Stickney [see view] are said to have been set out by Ephraim Colby, about the year 1787. The late Mr. Jeremiah Stickney, who died in 1850, aged 85, used to say that when the trees were set out he was big enough to help hold them up.

This house, it will be recollected, was formerly a garrison house. From time to time it has been enlarged and modified, but still retains its venerable appearance. It has been occupied from the beginning by successive generations of the Stickney family. [See genealogy.]

Mrs. Mary, widow of John Odlin, Esq., and daughter of Col. Thomas Stickney, now the oldest native woman in town, was born in this house, October 30, 1766. The house is now owned by Mrs. Mary Ann, widow of Thomas Stickney, jr., and is occupied by herself and her son, Joseph P. Stickney. The beautiful engraved view of the house and trees was executed by Mr. Herrick, now of New-York, son of Mr. Israel E. Herrick, formerly of Concord.

The noble trees at the Thorsndike place, so called, on Main street, by the residences of Charles and George Hutchins and Stephen S. Sweet, are said to have been set out by Timothy Walker, brother of Isaac, grandfather of Abiel Walker, who formerly resided near that spot in a garrison house.

A majestic elm, with brawny limbs, thin foliage and defiant aspect, stands nearly opposite the residence of the late Col. Wm. A. Kent, that looks as if it had been in battle with the elements a hundred winters, but whose age is not certainly known. Other specimens of this superb tree, out of the main village, are equally worthy of note. On Stickney hill stands one, near the road, and close to the residence of Capt. John Sherburne, that spreads its cooling shade in summer over a diameter of one hundred and seventeen feet. Its trunk measures seventeen feet at four feet from the ground. Another elm, distinguished for its height and circumference of over-hanging branches, stands close to the road, near the house of Moses H. Farnum, about one mile and a half from the main village, on the Boscawen road. Of elms and other beautiful shade-trees of a more recent period, in the main village, those in front of the house of Samuel A. Kimball, Esq., were set out by Hazen Kimball, brother of Samuel A. About the year 1818, Samuel A. Kimball, Esq., took charge of setting out the rows of elms which adorn the sidewalk opposite his house. In 1831, being highway surveyor, he set out a row of willows on the south margin of Horse-shoe pond.

* This house since purchased and occupied by Dr. Bouton.
Charles Walker set out six elms in front of his office and garden, now the residence of Joseph H. Pearson, about the year 1802, and five more a little later, on a line with them, in front of his house, now owned by Cyrus W. Paige. There is a lofty elm in the house-yard of the late James Buswell.

The elm trees before the new North Church were set out in 1818, by old soldier John Elliot, who brought them from the West parish by hand, two at a time, on successive days. The premises were then owned by the late Mr. Robert Davis, 2d, and David Davis, then a clerk in his brother’s store, paid Elliot twenty-five cents apiece for the trees, and assisted in setting them out.

The elms about the old North church, or Biblical Institute, were procured and set out under direction of the late Mr. John D. Abbot, of Brooklyn, N. Y., son of Nathaniel Abbot, in the spring of 1832.
Mr. Abbot raised a subscription for the purpose, and the trees cost upon an average two dollars apiece.

Centre street is ornamented with a beautiful row of maples on each side, now of about twenty years’ growth. The maples and elms which shade and beautify the State house yard are the growth of about thirty years. Nearly all of the younger ornamental trees in Concord main village were transplanted, when of small growth, from the adjacent forests, at the order of individuals who wished for them, and were dug up and set out by laborers, at an average price of from half a dollar to two dollars apiece, according to their size. In the summer a portion of the elms at the north end of Main street extend their waving branches till they meet and form an arch over the middle of the highway, far more beautiful and splendid than ever graced the triumph of a Roman conqueror.

Of the forest trees it need only be added that they are of every variety such as is common to the northern parts of New-England.*
The abundant growth which formerly covered the plains and hills, and which still forms a marked feature of the town, led the fathers to discuss the question, whether the township was to be valued more for its rich intervals, or for its well wooded uplands.

The climate and temperature of Concord are favorable to health and longevity, as the statistical tables will show. In the extreme heat of summer the thermometer occasionally rises to ninety-six and even one hundred degrees, while the mean temperature in June, July and August together, is about sixty-three degrees. In the extremest cold of winter — that is, in December, January and Feb-uary — the thermometer occasionally sinks to twenty-five and thirty degrees below zero, but the average for those months is about twenty degrees above. The mean temperature of the year is about forty-two and a half degrees.† Good sleighing commonly lasts from about the BIOGRAPHY.

The following brief biographical sketches relate to individuals of every class and condition in life, whose names are either particularly prominent in the annals of the town, or who are remembered as distinguished for peculiar characteristics or positions in society. Some things are related of individuals which, perhaps, family friends might prefer should be left out; but, in such cases, the facts are stated for general instruction and entertainment, and never designed to disparage the individual. In this difficult part of my work I have been studious to avoid all partiality. The sketches which have been furnished me are inserted as written, subject only to such correction and abridgement as was judged necessary. The sketches, it will be seen, relate only to persons deceased. Their names are arranged in the chronological order of their death. More might have been added, but it must not be inferred from the omission of a particular name that his merits are less appreciated.

It should further be noted by the reader, that, for special reasons, it was judged best, in many instances, to give a biographical sketch in other portions of the History; for example, under the head of ministers, lawyers, physicians and graduates; and, also, in the body of the work, at the time of an individual's death—to all which reference may be had by the index of names.

CAPT. EBENEZER EASTMAN.

In addition to the many interesting facts respecting Capt. Ebenezer Eastman, which the preceding history furnishes—the part he took in the first settlement of the town—the services he rendered, and the offices of trust and honor which he held—it may be stated that, having considerable property, and coming as he did at the earliest period of the settlement, with six sons, the oldest of whom was 15 years of age, and able to work, Capt. Eastman became in a few years the strong man of the town. In 1731 his house and home lot were in better order, and more land under cultivation than any other in the settlement. From his youth he had been inured to hardship and to bold and daring enterprises. When 9 years of age (1698) his father's house and buildings, in Haverhill, were destroyed by Indians. At the age of 19 he joined the regiment of Col. Wainwright in the expe-ition against Port Royal. In 1711, when the British fleet, under Admiral Sir Hovenden Walker, destined against Canada, arrived in Boston, the land forces that were to accompany the expedition were organized with great dispatch, and Eastman, then about 21 years of age, had command of a company of infantry, which embarked with others in one of the transports. In going up the river St. Lawrence they encountered a violent north-east storm, in which eight or nine of the transports were wrecked and about one thousand men lost.* Jonathan Eastman, Esq., great-grandson of Ebenezer, relates as a tradition derived from his ancestor, "That, as night came on, the orders were that all the transports should follow the admiral's ship, which had a large light hoisted at mast-head for a signal. Capt. Eastman had been somewhat acquainted with the navigation of the river, having sailed up and down before. In the night the light of the admiral's ship was not to be seen, and that was at the time when the fleet was doubling a very dangerous and rocky point or cape. When the admiral's ship had fairly doubled the point and got into line, the light appeared in such a position as to draw the line of shipping directly on to that dangerous point. Aware of the danger, Capt. Eastman went to the commander, informed him of the peril, and begged him to alter the course of the vessel; but, being then under the influence of liquor, this the captain positively refused to do, saying that 'he would follow his admiral if he went to h—l.' 'Well,' said Capt. Eastman, 'I have no notion of going there, and if you won't alter the course of the vessel I will.' 'If you do,' replied the captain, 'your head shall be a button for a halter next morning.' Informing his company of their danger, and relying on their support, Capt. Eastman ordered the captain below, and the helmsman to change his course. Thus they escaped the wreck which befel other vessels of the fleet, and by which so many lives were lost. The next morning the humbled captain on his knees acknowledged his deliverer and begged his friendship. On the following day Admiral Walker came on board, and, on seeing Capt. Eastman, abruptly said: 'Capt. Eastman, where were you when the fleet was cast away?' 'Following my admiral,' replied he. 'Following your admiral!' he exclaimed; 'you Yankees are a pack of praying devils — you saved yourselves, but sent my men to h—l.'"

Capt. Eastman, March 4, 1710, married Sarah Peaslee, of Haverhill, daughter of Col. Nathaniel Peaslee, the ancestor of Gen. Charles H. Peaslee. On settling in Penacook his "house-lot" was number nine, second range, on Main street, which was about where the house of Mr. J. H. Pearson now stands. But in the second survey, in 1727, Mr. Eastman had lot number sixteen, containing four and a half acres, on "Mill Brook range," east side of the river, where he finally settled, and had a garrison around his house.

Among many traditionary anecdotes it is related, that soon after settling in Penacook, he made a journey to Haverhill on horse-back, and purchased a barrel of molasses, which he intended by some

* See Holmes's Am. Annals, 1711, vol. i. means to convey home with him. He contrived what was called a car, that was formed with two shafts, one end of which was fastened to the horse and the other to the drag on the ground. Lashing the barrel of molasses on his car with ropes, he proceeded on his journey homeward along the path through the wilderness. He got along very well until he came to Soucook river. After crossing, the hill was very steep, and, in ascending, the horse with his drag would stop to rest a few moments. Having nearly reached the top of the hill, on starting, the rigging gave way and down went the barrel full speed, and was dashed in pieces against a tree — the molasses overspreading and sweetening the ground in all directions. The captain, summoning all the patience he had at command, exclaimed, "Oh dear! my wife will comb my head — yes, and harrow it too!" It was truly a hard case.

As an illustration of the force and energy of his character in carrying on his farming operations — In 1729 Capt. Eastman took a lease of the farm laid off to Judge Sewall, containing five hundred acres, with the island, for a period of thirty years. He was to pay, as rent, ten shillings in good bills of credit, or silver money, the first year; twenty shillings the second year, and so to advance ten shillings every year till it should reach fifteen pounds, which sum afterward should be annually paid. As conditions of the lease Capt. Eastman was required and agreed to improve the land, by good cultivation, "to the value of £100; to build a timber house and barn, which should be worth another £100; to leave on the farm £100 worth of good fences, of stone or timber;" "to plant five hundred apple trees in a regular manner for an orchard, and, also, to set out one hundred more of fruit trees, as cherry, pear, quince, apple and plum trees."*

Capt. Eastman went to Cape Breton twice — the first time, March 1, 1745, in command of a company, and was present at the reduction and surrender of Louisburg, June 16. He returned November 10, 1745. Early the next year he went "again, and returned home July 9, 1746."†

At the time of the massacre in Penacook, August 11, 1746, Capt.
Eastman and family were in a garrison, on the east side of the river.
Subsequently he erected, on or near the spot, a large two story house;
but before the house was finished Mr. Eastman died, (July 28, 1748,) aged 59.

medicine with Dr. Ordway, of Salisbury, and came to this town about 1740. In 1742 he married Ruth, only daughter of Capt. Ebenezer Eastman, who, at the time of her marriage, was but 13 years of age. According to family tradition their first child was born before she was 14 years old. After marriage Ruth retained her love for childish sports; and, on one occasion, the doctor, on returning home, found his wife playing with other children on the hay-mow. Connected with Capt. Eastman’s family, being respectably educated and a good penman, Dr. Carter soon became prominent in town affairs, as well as distinguished as a physician. In March, 1747, he was first chosen town clerk, in place of Benjamin Rolfe, Esq. The same year he was authorized to present a petition to the General Assembly of New-Hampshire for means of defence against the Indians; and as long as he lived he continued to hold important offices in the town, as moderator, town clerk and selectman. He held a commission as justice of the peace, and hence sometimes, in the records, he has the title of esquire. When matters of complaint were brought before him by his fellow citizens his first endeavor was to induce an amicable settlement, offering, if they did so, to give in his fees: thus he acquired the name of peace-maker. Dr. Carter was of a kind and benevolent temper, of quick wit and pleasantry in conversation, and a general favorite among all classes of people. His practice as a physician extended into neighboring towns.

Among the anecdotes related of him are the following: Having occasion to go in haste from Concord to old Salisbury, on Saturday, and to spend the Sabbath, he found it convenient to borrow a pair of boots of his neighbor, Dea. George Abbot. Attending public worship next day, he was unexpectedly called on by the clergyman, who knew him, (in the absence of the deacon, whose duty it was,) to give out the lines of the hymn to be sung. At first he said he was “considerably flustered, and could n’t tell A from B;” but, recovering himself, he read the hymns and led the singing to general satisfaction. On returning the boots he said, “Dea. Abbot, here are your boots; but I never will borrow them again, for a minister will smell a deacon’s boots all over the meeting-house.”

On a certain occasion Dr. Carter was called to visit a sick family in Bow. The family were a long time sick. The doctor was their constant attendant; and, on their recovery, the poor man felt new troubles coming upon him. “How, doctor,” said the unhappy man, “am I to pay you for all your kindness, your attention and medicine? You see here a large family, destitute of every thing save the bare necessaries of life.” “I have been faithful to you,” replied the doctor, “and am I not entitled to a reward?” “You are, doctor, oh, you are!” said the trembling wife, “but do wait a little; we can’t pay you now.” “I can inform you, my good friends,” said the inexorable physician, “that I am knowing to your having property enough to satisfy my demands; and, moreover, that I shall have it before leaving the house.” The poor family were thunder-struck; they knew that no friendly feelings subsisted between the proprietors of Rumford and Bow, but had always heard the doctor applauded as a man of benevolence and mercy. They knew not what to do. At this moment, away scampered a flock of kittens across the room, which the doctor seeing, caught one of them and put it in his pocket. "I told you I should have my pay," said the doctor; "I have got it. Good bye, and God bless you!" Many anecdotes of this kind are related of him, and one of the last acts of his life was equally noble. Just before his decease he looked over his accounts, filled out receipts against all poor persons who were indebted to him, with directions that his executors should deliver them to those concerned immediately after his death. This was accordingly done.*

Fond of social entertainments himself, and, according to the custom of those times, receiving from the families which he visited all the civilities due to a respected physician, it is more a subject of regret than of wonder that his convivial habits were unfavorable to long life. He died in the meridian of manhood, September 17, 1767, aged 48. On a plain, old-fashioned grave-stone, erected on the brow of the ascent, after you enter the burying-ground, on the south side, his name is engraved — Ezra Carter, Esq.

Benjamin Rolfe, Esq.

Benjamin Rolfe, whose name appears in the early records of the town more frequently than that of any other person, was a son of Henry Rolfe, Esq., of Newbury, who was one of the original proprietors of Penacook. Benjamin was born in 1710; was graduated at Harvard College, in 1727; was chosen "clerk of the proprietors and grantees of Penny Cook," in 1731, and continued in the office till 1770. He was also town clerk of Rumford. In 1737 he was chosen clerk of the commissioners appointed to determine the boundary line between Massachusetts and New-Hampshire, which met at Hampton. In 1745 he held the commission of colonel in the Province. He was the first one chosen to represent the District of Rumford in the General Assembly of New-Hampshire; and, during his life-time, he held every important and responsible office in town in the gift of his fellow citizens to bestow. Though he was not, strictly speaking, a lawyer, yet he acted as an adviser, and discharged the various duties of a magistrate in civil affairs. Intimately associated with the Rev. Timothy Walker in all that concerned the interests of the town during the long controversy with the proprietors of Bow, he enjoyed the full confidence of that reverend gentleman; and to him, more than to any other man, except Mr. Walker, is the successful issue of that conflict to be ascribed. Of sound judgment; prudent, upright, capable—minutely acquainted with all the affairs of the town—he ever sought, in the use of all honorable means, to advance its interests. By inheritance, and by his own industry and prudent management, Col. Rolfe acquired a large property in lands. He lived a bachelor until he was about 60 years of age, when he married Sarah, the eldest daughter of Rev. Mr. Walker, whose age was 30.* Before his marriage he lived in a one story house, but afterwards built and lived in the house still standing at the "Eleven lots," and known as the "Rolfe place," or the residence of the late Countess of Rumford. There was born, August 4, 1770, their only son and child, Paul Rolfe, who inherited the whole of his father's estates. Col. Rolfe died December 21, 1771, in the 62d year of his age. Sometime in the year 1773 his widow married Benjamin Thompson, afterwards distinguished as Count Rumford.† Mrs.

Thompson died January 19, 1792, aged 52 years. No grave-stones mark the spot where either Col. Rolfe or Mrs. Thompson lie buried.

Col. Rolfe was accounted the richest man in Concord at the time of his decease. He left no will, but an inventory of his estate was taken in due form April 1, 1772, by Capt. John Chandler and Joseph Hall, Jr. Timothy Walker, Jr., Esq., administered on the estate.
From the inventory of his estate, in the office of probate at Exeter, the following minutes were taken:

In the latter part of Col. Rolfe's life warm discussions would sometimes rise in the meetings of the proprietors, between the Colonel and Philip Eastman. A meeting was held in the afternoon of the day on which the Colonel died. On returning home, Mr. Eastman said to his wife, "Well, Abiah, I have been to a meeting of the proprietors to-day and have not had one word of dispute with Col. Rolfe!" On expressing her gratification, he said, "There was a good reason for it, for he died this morning."

REV. TIMOTHY WALKER.

More than any other single person, Rev. Mr. Walker is entitled to the appellation of father of the town. After his settlement, in 1730, he first lived in a log-house which stood on the brow of Horse-shoe pond hill, but, in 1733 and 1734, built the two-story gambrel-roof house,‡ in which he afterwards resided till his death. This house,

‡THE WALKER HOUSE.

This house is the oldest two-story dwelling-house between Haverhill, Mass., and Canada. It was erected by Rev. Mr. Walker on the lot drawn to the first minister, in the year 1733-4, the town having generously voted [see p. 142] him "fifty pounds for building a dwelling-house in Pennycook." Its dimensions were forty by twenty feet, two stories in height, with an ell adjoining on the east, of one story, both parts being covered by a gambrel-roof. The chimneys were very large, and of stone. One of them, which remained, as originally built, until 1847, was found upon its removal to be about five feet square, and constructed of flat, ledge stones, laid in clay mortar and plastered on the inside with a composition of clay and chopped straw. Only the ell part was entirely finished at first, and contained but three rooms on the first floor. The front part remained in with some modern improvements, overshadowed by the stately elm trees which Mr. Walker set out in 1756, is well represented by the fine engraving which is here subjoined.

A few aged people who still remember Mr. Walker, say that he was full middling stature and size; not corpulent, but portly in form, and of dignified manners. His eyes were blue and complexion light. Naturally, his temper was quick, but well restrained and governed. If at any time he was betrayed into hasty expressions or acts, he was prompt to acknowledge the fault, and ask the forgiveness of any one injured. He was exact and precise in all his domestic arrangements and business transactions, keeping a memoranda for every day an unfinished state until 1757, when, with the assistance of Lieut. Webster, of Bradford, a joiner of high repute in those days, it was also completed. The wood-work being near to completion, it appears, from a letter dated the 9th of September, 1757, addressed by Rev. Mr. Walker to his son Timothy, then teaching school at Bradford, Mass., that a grave question arose as to the propriety "of painting ye outside." The decision arrived at is not now known, but, either at that time, or a few years subsequent, it was painted a light yellow, which continued to be its uniform color for at least seventy years. The interior was finished in a style similar to that found in the better class of houses of that period. Most of the partitions were of wooden panel work; the front hall was dadoed with paneling, and the front stairs were in three short flights, conducting to broad landings, and guarded by a moulded rail, supported upon curious wrought balusters. The rooms were painted various colors; the north parlor in a year, in a little book done up in the form of an almanack. Though not talkative, he was agreeable in social intercourse, and occasionally facetious. According to the custom of the times he wore a large, powdered wig, and a three cornered cocked-hat, short clothes, and shoes with large buckles. He was held in high respect by all his parishioners. After service on the Sabbath, both morning and afternoon, the whole congregation stood until Mr. Walker went out— he respectfully bowing to those on each side as he passed down the broad-aisle.

Mr. Walker served the town, as a wise counsellor, in relation to every matter of public interest; and, in connection with Benjamin Rolfe, Esq., who married his eldest daughter, drew up the first petitions for help against the Indians, addressed to the government both of Massachusetts and New-Hampshire, and also many of the papers used in the long controversy with the proprietors of Bow. As fully related in the History, he thrice visited England, as agent for the town in that vexatious litigation, and through his judicious and persevering efforts, and his personal influence with his counsel, Mr. Murray— afterwards lord chief justice Mansfield—secured forever the rights of the proprietors of Rumford.

As a preacher, Mr. Walker was instructive and practical, dwelling more on the duties than on the doctrines of religion. He was calm and moderate in his delivery; his sermons— of which a considerable number still exist— were mostly written out in full, on sheets of paper folded in the 18mo. form, and would occupy about thirty minutes. Sometimes we find extracts of considerable length from favorite authors, such as Tillotson, Foster, Poole and Brackett. His style was good for that period, perspicuous and didactic, with but few illustrations, but well supported with quotations from Scripture.

In his theological views Mr. Walker was "Orthodox," according to existing standards. He received the Westminster Assembly's Catechism, which was then also used in the families and schools of the town. In distinction, however, from those preachers who in his day were called "New Lights," he was accused of being an Armniou, but called himself a "moderate Calvinist." He was highly conservative, as it regarded innovations and new measures. Hence, in the period of the great Reformation, under the preaching of Rev. George Whitefield and others, Mr. Walker was among those ministers who did not favor the excitement which was generally awakened. In January, 1743, he preached and published a sermon to his people, entitled, "The way to try all pretended Apostles," from the text Rev. 2:2. In this sermon he dwelt at length on the evils produced by itinerant preachers; especially the divisions which they caused in established churches and societies. Hence he warned his people not to go after them, or hear them preach. "Nothing," he says, "I am well satisfied, has so much contributed to the evils that do so cloud the present day, and look with such a direful aspect upon us, as the indulging an unmortified itch after novelties, and having the persons of strangers, whom we know nothing of, in admiration, and setting them up above the place of instruments. If, therefore, you would not become accessory to the guilt of those who are endeavoring the subversion of our religious Constitution, keep out of the way of temptation as much as may be; ponder well the first step that leads to a compliance with these errors."

At this time all of Mr. Walker's hearers were of one way of thinking in religious matters; and his object was to keep them together, and make them steadfast in the "religion and church order which was very dear to our forefathers." Conscious of the power he had over his people, he not only charged them not to go after or to hear these pretended Apostles preach, "but," said he, "if any of you think yourselves unable to manage a controversy with them, invite them to accompany you to my house, and I will gladly undertake this, or any other service I am capable of, for the benefit of your souls."

In 1771 Mr. Walker felt himself called on to give his people another warning against innovations, and what he counted disturbers of the peace and order of the churches. A Baptist elder, Hezekiah Smith, of Haverhill, had preached in the vicinity, and awakened much interest in his peculiar views. To counteract this influence, Mr. Walker preached a discourse, May 12, 1771, entitled, "Those who have the form of Godliness, but deny the power thereof, described and cautioned against." The text was 2 Tim. 3:5. The sermon was "published at the desire of many of the hearers." It is dedicated "to the church and congregation under the author's pastoral care, having been composed and delivered solely for your benefit, without the most distant view of its farther publication, is now respectfully inscribed by him who esteems it his highest honor and greatest happiness to serve your best interest. TIMOTHY WALKER."*8

During his ministry of fifty-two years there is no regular record of church proceedings after 1736; but in his memoranda there are entries made of those who owned the covenant, were admitted to communion, baptized, married and died, together with notices of private affairs, the weather, journeys, &c.*

From the memoranda kept by Mr. Walker it appears that he did not confine his labors to his own people, but performed what may be called missionary labors in destitute places. In 1706 he visited the Pigwacket country, which included Conway and Fryeburg, which towns were originally settled in part from Concord, about the years 1764 and 1765; there he preached and baptized their children.

During his long ministry Mr. Walker enjoyed remarkable health. Tradition says that he was able to preach every Sabbath, except the one previous to his death. Probably this is not quite correct; for in the warrant for a town-meeting, March 3, 1778, four years before his death, we find the following article: "To see if the parish will vote to hire preaching, if the Rev. Mr. Walker remains unable." The article was not acted on, and Mr. Walker resumed and continued to perform the duties of his office till near his death. A short time (two or three weeks) before this occurred, he set out to attend a funeral of a Mrs. Simonds, in the south part of the town, at what was called the Iron Works, but on his way, as was supposed, he became bewildered, or had a slight paralytic shock. It seems that, in fording a stream, he dismounted from his horse, and, taking the bridle in his hand, attempted to lead him, while he walked on logs laid across it; but the horse refused to go, and got away. Failing to attend the funeral, his absence created alarm, and word was sent to his family. Immediately his son Timothy, with others, went in search, and found Mr. Walker lying on the ground, his clothes wet, and he much exhausted. They helped him mount his horse, but he rode home with difficulty. The next Sabbath he was prevailed on by his family not to preach. About two weeks after this, on Saturday afternoon, he visited his aged relative, Mr. Isaac Walker, who had long been sick, and who lived in a house near where Abiel, his grandson, now lives, and conversed and prayed with him. On leaving, Mr. Walker bade his aged friend farewell, saying, "I do not expect to see you again."

For convenience, in his old age, Rev. Mr. Walker slept in the north front room of his house, and his hired man, Philip Abbot, was near by, to assist him whenever necessary. On Sabbath morning, September 1, he woke early and said, "Come, Mr. Abbot, build a fire, for I am tired of lying." A fire being made, Mr. W. rose, partly dressed himself, and with his loose gown of green baize on, sat down in his armed chair, as usual, before the fire to tie his shoes and complete his dress. Abbot perceived that he slipped forward in his chair, and quickly going to him, he found him nearly helpless. He was laid back on his bed, the family called, and a physician sent for, but in a very short time Mr. Walker expired.

The people from the West Parish were on their way to meeting before they heard of his death. It was so sudden and unexpected that they could hardly credit the report; but supposed it must be Mr. Isaac Walker, who had long been sick, and who also died the same day. Gathering, however, at the meeting-house, the report of their aged minister’s death was confirmed, and the day was to them all a day of sadness.*

On the plain slate slab which stands at the head of his grave in the old burying-ground, is the following inscription:

ANECDOTES OF REV. MR. WALKER.

Tradition has handed down a number of anecdotes of Rev. Mr. Walker, of which the following may be worthy of a place in our history.

* See funeral services, &c., p. 284.
In time of peace Indians frequently called at his house, where they were hospitably entertained. On one occasion a number of the warriors, with their guns, encamped near his house. Mr. Walker being absent, his wife was under great apprehensions of injury. The Indians, perceiving this, said, "minister's wife afraid." Upon this one of them delivered her all the guns, and said they would call for them the next day. This they did, and treated her with great civility.*

One Sabbath afternoon Mr. W. preached from the text: Ecclesiastes 5:4, 5, "When thou vowest a vow unto God, defer not to pay it," &c. In the discourse he showed that all the vows which we make should be paid. An Indian was present, and listened very attentively. After meeting, the Indian came to him and said, "I vow I will go home with you." "Very well," said Mr. W., "you may go home with me." "I vow," says the Indian, "I will have some supper." "Yes," was the reply, "you may have some supper." "I vow," says the Indian, again, "I will stay all night." By this time Mr. W. saw the joke, and instantly replied, "I vow you shall go away in the morning."

Mr. W.'s dignified deportment and manners were such as to command universal respect. The noted Ephraim Colby, who worked much for him, used to say, that "Parson Walker was the only man the Almighty ever made that he was afraid of."

Going out to work one day with his hired man, John Evans, with a team and cart, they had to pass a very wet and muddy place. In passing it, John sat on the cart tongue, or neap, while Mr. W. was in the cart. When about mid-way of the muddy place, John slyly pulled out the pin which held the cart down, and dropped it, to make Mr. W. think it worked out accidentally; up went the cart, and out went Mr. Walker into the mud and water. He got up, and said, "John, this is a bad accident, but drive on, and I'll go back." A few days after; Mr. Walker having been absent from home, he went late in the afternoon into the field where John was at work. When it was time to go home, Mr. W. told John that he would drive the team, and accordingly took his seat on the cart tongue, while John was in the cart. At about the middle and deepest part of the muddy place, Mr. Walker pulled out the pin, and down went John into the mud and water, and was thoroughly soused. When he got up, Mr. W., holding up the pin, says to him, "John! John! here is the pin: "I didn't throw it away!" A hearty laugh ended the joke.†

Mr. Walker was a patriot. Having encouraged his parishioners to join Gen. Stark's regiment, to oppose Burgoyne, he waited the issue with great solicitude. When the late Capt. Jonathan Eastman returned from Bennington, bringing intelligence of the victory, Mr. Walker came running out to meet him, eagerly inquiring, "What news, friend Eastman, what news?" The captain related the joyful tidings, and the old patriot exclaimed, "Blessed be God! the country is saved—I can now die in peace!"

Having one day hired a number of men to mow for him, they came, but seemed to hesitate on account of appearances of unfavorable weather. However, Mr. Walker directed them to go on to the island and begin their work. Perceiving from the hill that they still hesitated and were looking about, he went over to them and inquired, "What is the matter?" They said they were observing the clouds. "Clouds, clouds," said Mr. Walker, "what have you to do with the clouds? I hired you to cut my grass—He who made the clouds will take care of them!"

As a specimen of his prudence and good sense, it is related that the Rev. Elijah Fletcher, of Hopkinton, once requested an exchange with him on the Sabbath, and that he would preach upon the subject of witchcraft, which at that time was making trouble among some of Mr. F.'s parishioners. Mr. W. accordingly prepared a sermon for the occasion, and preached. He told the people "that the most they had to fear from witches was from talking about them; that if they would cease to talk about them, and let them alone, they would soon disappear!" The hint had its desired effect.

A ludicrous story used to be told by the late Col. John Carter. Before the meeting-house was finished there was, opposite to the pulpit, an elevated seat for the singers, where boys also sometimes took a seat. Dogs in those days attended meeting, but to keep them in due order was the business of "the dog-whipper." A huge dog had planted his fore paws on the top of the singers' seat, near where young John Carter was sitting, and thus stood looking over on the congregation. In the absence of the dog-whipper, John undertook to administer discipline. Looking carefully about, and supposing that no one saw him, he quickly seized the dog by the hind legs and threw him over, much to the astonishment and disturbance of the congregation. Nothing was said at the time, but soon after Parson W. called at the house of old Mr. Carter, and after conversing freely for some time with the father—John being present—turned to the latter and said in a low tone of voice, "John, I didn't blame you at all for pitching that dog over the seat, a few Sabbaths ago!"

Mr. Walker left a will, dated August 10, 1782, by which he made the following distribution of his property to his children:

To Mrs. Sarah Thompson, [wife of Count Rumford], £10
To Sarah Thompson, his granddaughter, to be paid at her marriage, or at the age of eighteen, 140
To Mrs. Mary Goss, [wife of Dr. Eben'r Flanders Goss], 150
To Mrs. Judith Rolfe, [wife of Nathaniel Rolfe], 150

(Both to be paid in one year after his decease.)

All the real and personal estate remaining, to his son, Timothy Walker, who was appointed executor of the will.

JOHN STEVENS.

John Stevens, or, as he was usually called, "Merchant Stevens," came to Concord from Charlestown, Mass., and first went into trade with Col. Andrew McMillan. When he brought his wife into town he rode about the village with her, and said, "Select the house or spot which you like best and I will buy it." She pointed out the house built by Stephen Farrington—David G. Fuller's—as the handsomest in Concord. Stevens bought it, with the adjacent field. He traded in the store on the corner of Pleasant street, building an addition to it, and fitting up the upper story as a hall for the House of Representatives, which met there several times in after years.

Being suspected of toryism he was arrested, as related, in 1777,* and cast into Exeter jail. There he refused to take the oath of allegiance to his country, because, he said, he was as good a friend to his country as any, and felt that he had been insulted and abused. He accused Capt. Benjamin Emery of setting a trap for him, by calling on him in the night and persuading him to sell tea and pewter plate—which were interdicted articles—on pretence that he wanted them for one of his daughters who was about to be married. The Legislature ordered his discharge from jail, but required him to keep within the limits of Concord for one year. He did so. The next Legislature gave him a full discharge, and, as a sort of compensation for what he had suffered, conferred on him a commission of justice of the peace. Stevens bore a bitter revenge towards Capt. Emery, and challenged him to fight. Stevens was small and slender, but quick and full of nerve. Emery was heavy and clumsy. They agreed to meet at Mother Osgood's tavern. Stevens, dressed in light clothes and coat off, was on the spot beforehand. As soon as Capt. Emery entered the front yard Stevens sprung upon him with such violence as to knock him over, and then leaped on him; but, being much stronger, Emery soon got him under. The bystanders then interposed and ended the fight.

Stevens never forgave the town for accusing and confining him as a tory. Some time before he died he said to his wife—"Wife, I am a justice of the peace, and I wish you to make oath, before me, that when I am dead you will see that I am buried between those two apple-trees in the garden—pointing them out—that no citizen of Concord shall follow me to the grave;—no minister be present;—that you will pay one crown apiece to the four men who bear out my body and bury it." His wife demurred from taking the oath, but promised to do as he wished. He was buried accordingly. His bearers were Zenas Wheeler, Job Page, Daniel Page, and—. Mr. William Manley, who was an Englishman by birth, and who was a trader in town, and one other foreigner, it is said, followed his corpse to the grave.† Several years afterwards, when the house owned by Col. Wm. Kent, (since by Col. Paul Wentworth,) was moved on to the spot where it stands, in digging a vault for a privy the bones of Stevens were dug up, put in a box and reinterred in the back part of the same lot, where they remain unknown to this day.

The following notice of his death appeared in the "Mirror," December 25, 1792:

FROM A CORRESPONDENT.

Died, on Tuesday morning, the 25th instant, after a short sickness, John Stevens, Esq., of this town, in the 45th year of his age. He was a gentleman of good education, and possessed a general knowledge of manners and mankind; the first he obtained by a liberal education at the University of Cambridge; the last, by leisure observations; which, as he lived in affluent circumstances, he had uncommon opportunities to make, both in Europe and America.

We tender the tear of sympathy to a distressed wife and family, the one, by this unfortunate stroke of Providence, bereaved of an endearing consort; the other, of an affectionate father. He was a firm and faithful friend.

By his particular desire he was interred on his own land, by four men, whom he appointed himself while living, and ordered them a generous reward for their service. These four men were the only persons present at the interment.

JACOB SHUTE.

Jacob Shute was the ancestor of the Shute family in Concord. There is a tradition in the family that his father was a French Protestant, or Huguenot, who formerly resided in Paris; but, on revocation of the edict of Nantz, fled to Ireland to escape persecution. Jacob was born about 1702, and was apprenticed by his father to a stocking-weaver in Dublin. Disliking the trade, at about the age of seventeen he left, in company with one Dawen, and took secret passage in the hold of a ship for this country. They remained concealed until driven out by hunger. Arriving at Newburyport the captain demanded pay for their passage, but as they had nothing it was necessary to sell themselves—that is, their service—for a time, in order to meet the demand. They were both bought by Capt. Ebenezer Eastman, of Haverhill, and served him till twenty-one years of age. Before he bought them, Eastman asked Dawen "if he would be a good boy and work well, provided he would pay his passage?" Dawen said, "Yes; the Lord bless him!" He then asked Shute; he said, "No—he would n't do any thing." On trial, however, Shute proved an industrious, faithful hand, while Dawen was indolent and deceitful.* Shute, as more fully related in another place, drove Eastman's team from Haverhill to Penacook, in the fall of 1727; the first that ever came into town. Here Mr. Shute settled. He married Sarah, George, of Haverhill, who had a daughter Sarah, born there, and John and Elizabeth, born in Penacook. His wife Sarah died in January, 1743, and, as appears from Rev. Mr. Walker's journal, was buried January 16. May 7, 1749, Mr. Walker says: "Abigail, second wife of Jacob Shute, admitted to full communion. She was widow Evans, mother of John." By his second wife he had two daughters, both of whom died young. Mr. Shute died February 16, 1794, aged 94 years.

COL. ANDREW MCMLLAN.

Col. Andrew McMillan, whose name often occurs in the town records previous to 1775, was an intelligent, enterprising business man, and a worthy citizen. He came to this country from Ireland, about the year 1754; received a lieutenant's commission, dated Lake George, June 26, 1758, from Gen. James Abercromby, "in the independent company of rangers," of which Jonathan Burbank was captain, and is said to have been with Rogers in the expedition against St. Francois, in 1759. He married Hannah Osgood, of Rumford, daughter of the widow James Osgood, November 12, 1761. The same year he commenced trade in the store that now stands on the north-east corner of Main and Pleasant streets, which was then a small one-story shop, standing as it now does, partly on the street. Here he continued to trade for several years; one year in partnership with Timothy Walker, Jun., and afterwards with John Stevens, who added a second story to it. In 1767 or 1768 he and Gen. Stark received each a grant of land from the Provincial Government, in consideration of their services in the old French war, located in the town of Conway and vicinity. In August, 1774, he removed to Conway, to take possession of his extensive landed property, where two of his wife's brothers† a few years before had preceded him. Here, in the cultivation of one of the most valuable farms on Saco river, (where his only remaining son, Gilbert McMillan, Esq., now resides,) he passed the remainder of his life,— repeatedly representing the town in the State Legislature, and faithfully discharging his duty as a citizen and a magistrate. He died November 6, 1800, aged 70 years. His wife died in 1827, aged 84.*

* FLORENCE McCALLUT.

Florence was a colored free man, a soldier in Capt. Joshua Abbot's company; and as he had a strong attachment to Col. McMillan, it is but just in this connection to give him the meed of praise which is his due. When he came to Concord, or from whence, is unknown. He probably lived with Col. McMillan some time before he joined the army. He could not write; but just before he left Concord for the Continental service, he made a will in due form, and, in case of his decease, gave "a suit of clothes" to the Colonel, as a token of gratitude for past favors.

Florence survived his Continental campaign, and for many years was a faithful servant in Col. McMillan's family, where his devotion to its interests was in striking contrast with the less praiseworthy habits of the "boy Cæsar"—before mentioned as Col. McMillan's slave, (pp. 519-51,)—producing a state of feeling between them not always the most friendly. The following anecdote is characteristic both of the cunning trickery of the one, and honest simplicity of the other. "Old Florence," as he was called, was very proud of his skill as a marksman—that he pretended to have acquired from Gen. Stark himself. The Colonel had a valuable bay colt that he was rearing with great care. Cæsar, in passing the stable at twilight, saw through the open window this colt, in a position in which his tail only was distinctly visible. He told Florence to run for his gun, as "there was something in the stable that looked like a fox." The report of Florence's gun that soon followed, convinced Cæsar that he had carried the joke too far—that his master's favorite horse was probably killed. The Colonel was absent, and would not return for several days. The result of the conference between the parties in the stable was, that as the colt appeared to be mortally wounded, the only safety for Florence was in flight, and that Cæsar, the innocent party, should remain and make the necessary explanation to the family and the Colonel on his return, which he did so successfully as to throw, of course, all the blame on Florence. But such was Florence's attachment to the family that he could not stay away, and in a few weeks returned, when Cæsar, fearing the effect of Florence's account of the affair, thought it most prudent for him now to decamp, and he never after was known as heretofore, a constant inmate of the family, but wandered wherever he could get employ.

† James and Benjamin Osgood, of Concord, when he kept tavern, in 1746, stood on the spot where Dea. Hosea Fessenden’s house now stands,* (the remains of the old cellar being still visible.) Here the widow kept tavern a while after her husband’s death. She afterwards built the house immediately north of Dea. Fessenden’s, known as the old “Wiggin house,” and but recently standing where the “Merchants’ Exchange” is erected, and which was the scene of much good cheer in those days of “punch” and “flip.” The widow was highly respected in her vocation. She kept a good table, and maintained order in her house. Hearty in the American cause, she rejoiced in the victory of our arms. When the news of the capture of Gen. Burgoyne reached town, she partook so largely of the general joy, as to join in the shouts of her fellow-citizens, “Hurrah!” “Hurrah!” When very earnest in giving orders to persons in her employ, she would emphatically repeat, “Lord, help you!” “Lord, help you!”†

REV. ISRAEL EVANS.

Mr. Evans was a native of Pennsylvania, and a graduate of Princeton College, New-Jersey, in 1772. His father and grandfather were settled ministers in this country, and his great-grandfather was a minister in Wales. He was ordained at Philadelphia, in 1776, as a chaplain in the United States army. From 1777 til the close of the war he was chaplain to the New-Hampshire brigade, at first under the command of Gen. Enoch Poor. His connection with this brigade was the means of his introduction to this place. The Rev. Joseph Eckley, of Boston, who preached the sermon at the installation of Mr. Evans, and who was his classmate in college, thus spoke of him to the people: “In consequence of the long acquaintance I have had with your pastor elect, I have the pleasure to congratulate you that we this day settle a gentleman with you who, added to the natural gifts and improvements of his mind, has afforded every reasonable evidence of his being a sincere friend of our common Lord.” As Mr. Evans was stationed at different posts with the army during the war, he became acquainted with the principal officers, and was known to most of the soldiers. Several sermons which he preached and published while in the army, were distinguished for their patriotic spirit, and acquired for him an honorable reputation through the country. Of these, one was addressed “To the officers and soldiers of the Western army, after their return from an expedition against the five nations of hostile Indians.” Another was “delivered near York, in Virginia, on the memorable occasion of the surrender of the British army to the allied forces of America and France,” and was dedicated “To the honorable Major General, the Marquis de la Fayette, whose disinterested services in the cause of America prove him to be the friend of mankind, and whose well known amiable virtues render all panegyric needless." Another was delivered in New-York, December 11, 1783, on the day set apart by Congress "as a day of public thanksgiving for the blessings of independence, liberty and peace." He also delivered an oration on the occasion of the death of Gen. Poor, in September, 1780. In 1791 he preached the Election sermon, which was printed. These performances were at the time eminently popular. They were written in a flowing, redundant, martial style, full of patriotic ardor, and suited to the state of public opinion.*

With the feelings and habits acquired in a seven years' service in the United States army, Mr. Evans entered upon the duties of a pastor among this quiet, industrious and unostentatious people. His manners were a perfect contrast to those of his predecessor. His sentiments and style of preaching were also different. After continuing his labors about eight years, Mr. Evans announced his "intention of resigning to the town their pulpit, and of finishing the work of the ministry in this place on the 1st of July," 1797. The proposal was accepted. An ecclesiastical council was called by Mr. Evans and the church, to dissolve the pastoral connection, "if it should be thought expedient." The council, "after solemn prayer for direction and assistance," dissolved the pastoral connection between Mr. Evans and the church; and, "as no charges had been exhibited against his ministerial or Christian character, they recommended him to the churches and to the work of the ministry, wherever God in his providence might open a door."

Mr. Evans bought of Stephen Kimball the house where Hon. Samuel Morril now lives, in which he resided till his death, March 9, 1807, in the 60th year of his age. Mr. Evans was a gentleman of fine personal appearance, of dignified and martial manners. On all public occasions he wore his tri-cornered hat. Was fond of a good horse, good music, and good living. Out of the pulpit he was less serious and devout than is usually expected of ministers, but a ready, fluent and earnest preacher.† An excellent portrait of him is still preserved. When Gen. LaFayette visited Concord, in 1825, he was shown this portrait, and, on seeing it, immediately exclaimed—"It is our worthy chaplain."

Mr. Evans married Miss Huldah Kent, sister of the late Col. Wm. A. Kent, of Charlestown, Mass., who survived him many years. After his death she purchased the Farrington house, still standing nearly opposite her brother's, where she lived with her venerable mother, Mrs. Mary Kent, who died December 5, 1827, aged 90 years.

She afterwards built the house on the corner of State and Pleasant streets, now occupied by Col. Wm. Kent. In the latter years of her life she drew a pension from the government, by virtue of her husband's office as chaplain, and lived retired and cheerful, in elegant simplicity, highly esteemed by all who knew her. She died October 19, 1846, aged 84.

† Tradition affirms that his preaching was sometimes attended with violent action, so as "to make the dust fly from the old pulpit cushion," and there was, moreover, a suspicion that he was more spirited than spiritual. Old Lieut. Richard Herbert, in his characteristic way, would sometimes say, after meeting—"I wonder what Parson Evans eat for his dinner!"

Madam Evans used to relate that, after their marriage, she rode in a chaise, with her husband, to visit her friends in Charlestown, Mass., it requiring then two days to make the journey. On returning they were belated, so that in approaching Concord, on the Bow road, by what is now called Rogers's Mills, it was so dark that Mr. Evans could not see his horse. She got out of the chaise, threw a white handkerchief over her bonnet, and thus walked in the road before the horse, to enable him to see where to drive. They had no children.

By his will, after giving legacies, amounting to about two hundred dollars, to a sister in Philadelphia, her daughter and grandchildren, and making suitable provision for his widow, he gave the balance of his property "to the trustees of Dartmouth College, for the support of a Professor at said College, to be called and known in his office as the EVANS Professor of Oratory and the Belles Lettres."*

It is related of Mr. Evans that on one occasion, just before the army was going into battle, he prayed—"O, Lord of hosts, lead forth thy servants of the American army to battle, and give them the victory! or, if this be not according to thy sovereign will, then we pray thee—stand neutral, and let flesh and blood decide the issue!"

He retained his military spirit even in death. In his last sickness his successor, Rev. Mr. McFarland, visited, and in praying with him, asked, "that when he should be called from this to the eternal world he might sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven." Mr. Evans, who was a great friend and ardent admirer of Washington, said, "and with Washington, too!" He could not bear the thought of being separated from Washington in the eternal world.

Ephraim Colby.

The name of Ephraim, or, as commonly called, Eph Colby, is noted in traditionary history as a wrestler and fighter. His parentage is not exactly known. He appears to have been an ensign in Capt. Abbot's company, 1774, in the war of the Revolution, and spent most of his days in Concord. He was rather short, but a stout, broad-shouldered fellow, and was the "bully" of all the region, far and near. He served some time in town as a constable. He was sure to be present at all public gatherings, and gloried in such occasions as raisings and military musters. When a large building was to be raised it was customary to send an invitation to the strong and stout men of neighboring towns;—such as the Heads and Knoxes of Pembroke, the Chamberlains of Loudon, Lyfords and Cloughs of Canterbury, and Jackmans and Flanders of Boesawen. When the raising was completed they had a wrestling match; and after all others who chose had entered the lists, and tried their strength, then Colby would step forward and defy them all. Being all well stimulated and warmed up with rum, that was free as water at such times, it was not uncommon to end the wrestling sport with a serious fight. Colby at such times was insolent and provoking. No one liked to engage him alone, and yet they could not well brook his insults. At the raising of Major Livermore's house, 1785, Colby got into a quarrel with the Ellists, from the Borough—Joseph and his two sons, Barnard and John. The two latter attacked him together. John sprung upon him like a cat, clasping him round the waist, while Barnard seized him behind. In the wrestle they all fell together, when John Elliot bit Colby's nose half off. Pained and infuriated by the bite on his nose, Colby rose, shook John off and dashed him on the ground; then, seizing Barnard by his neck and bottom of his pants, tossed him head first into West's brook; and turning, kicked the old man off the ground. This fight is well remembered by Benjamin Gale and Richard Herbert, and was related as above by the late Isaac Shute.

At another time Colby had a fight in Pembroke with one of the Heads—a powerful man, yet not equal to the former in muscular strength. Enduring Colby's insolence for some time, Head's friends at last persuaded him to show resentment. Picking up a good sized stone, that he could cover with his hand, Head watched his chance, and struck Colby such a tremendous blow on the face as to fracture his jaw-bone. This laid him up for about six weeks, and pretty nearly cured Colby of his fighting propensities.

Colby worked a number of years for the Walker family. He said that "Parson Walker was the only man the Almighty ever made that he was afraid of." He was employed to set out many of the older growth of elm trees that are now the ornament of our Main village. Marrying late in life, he moved to Rumford, Me., where, living unhappily with his family, he became poor, and received assistance in his last days from the late Capt. Joseph Walker. The time of his death is unknown.

SIR BENJAMIN THOMPSON, OR COUNT RUMFORD.

Mr. Thompson's connection with Concord, and the circumstances in which he left it, have already been related.* His subsequent fortunes are the most remarkable that ever attended any person whose name is recorded in our history. Driven by unreasonable suspicions from his home, his wife and infant child; forsaking his native country for a foreign service, he became the associate of princes, the honored favorite of kings, and the commander of armies. As the promoter and founder of public institutions of learning and beneficence, his genius shone resplendent among the literati and philosophers of Europe. His name, invested with the honors which royalty alone can confer, is transmitted to posterity as that of the "Friend of mankind."

The events in the life of Count Rumford, after he left Concord, are so numerous as not to admit of recital, in detail, in the brief space allotted to this notice.* Suffice it to say, that in January, 1776, he was entrusted by Gen. Gage with dispatches to Lord Germaine, in England, then Secretary of State for the department of the colonies. In 1780 he was appointed under secretary in that department. Towards the close of the Revolutionary War he obtained the commission of lieutenant-colonel, and was sent to New-York in command of a regiment. In 1784 the King conferred on him the honor of knighthood. Subsequently he went to Germany, and at Strasbourg was introduced to Prince Maximilian, and then to His Serene Highness the Elector Palatine, reigning duke of Bavaria. From the Elector he received all the honors that could be conferred, and, among others, that of Count "of the holy Roman Empire," to which Mr. Thompson added the title, Rumford, in remembrance of his former residence. Under the patronage of the Elector, Charles Theodore, he introduced great improvements in the condition and discipline of the army. At Munich, in 1790, he suppressed the system of mendicity which widely prevailed, and provided houses of public industry, in which beggars were supported and required to labor. Two thousand and six hundred of this class were put in in a single week, and the industrial establishment for them, which at first was supported by voluntary contributions, came to yield to the State a net income of one hundred thousand florins.† In grateful remembrance of his services and benefactions, a monument is erected in Munich to his honor. Inscribed beneath his bust is the following:

"To him
Who rooted out the greatest of public evils,
Idleness and Mendicity;
Relieved and instructed the Poor,
And founded many institutions for the education of our Youth.
Go, wanderer,
And strive to equal him
In Genius and Activity; and us,
In Gratitude."

On the other front is inscribed —

"Stay, Wanderer!
At the creative flat of Charles Theodore,
Rumford, the Friend of Mankind,
By Genius, Taste and Love inspired,
Changed this once desert place
Into what thou now beholdest."

†Cuvier's Eulogy.
He became almost the object of idolatrous regard by the poor. At one time, when dangerously ill, they formed processions, and went to the church to pray for his recovery. When sick at Naples they devoted an hour each evening to join in supplications for his restoration to health. About 1794* he sent to this country for his daughter, who met him in England, accompanied him to Munich, and for several years afterwards shared his fortunes. For his services in Bavaria the Elector settled on him a pension for life of nearly two thousand dollars, one half of which descended to his daughter, as Countess of Rumford, during her life. Returning to England, he assisted in putting in operation the society known as the Royal Institution, in London, about 1799. He afterwards located himself at Paris, married the widow of the celebrated chemist, Lavoisier, and with her resided at Auteuil, on the estate of her former husband, where he died of fever, August 21, 1814, in the 62d year of his age.

He bequeathed the annual sum of one thousand dollars to Harvard College, with other reversions, now aggregating about $30,000, to found the Rumford Professorship. To the “American Academy” he previously presented funds which now amount, it is said, to $24,500.

The personal appearance of Count Rumford, in early manhood, is described “as a model of manly beauty; his stature nearly six feet; figure erect, limbs finely formed, eyes bright blue, features chiseled in the Roman mould, and hair dark auburn.” There is a tradition that after he became affianced to Mrs. Rolfe, (who was by some years his senior,) seated in his carriage and dressed in the brilliant scarlet attire of those times, he drove out from Boston to present his intended bride to his mother; but was completely non-plussed by her exclamation on first meeting him, “Why, Ben., my child! how could you spend your whole winter’s wages in this way?” His distinguished military promotions, it is said, were primarily owing to his splendid appearance when mounted on horseback. Among the qualities that most characterized him were order and method, which he termed the “only possible instrument of true happiness, and almost a subordinate divinity in this lower world.” In the eulogy pronounced before the Institute of France, January 9, 1815, Cuvier says, “In his own person he was in every respect the model of perfect order. His wants, his pleasures and his labors were calculated as rigidly as his experiments. He drank nothing but water, ate meat roasted only, and allowed nothing superfluous, not even a step nor a word.” “His veneration for the Deity was never diminished. In all his works he has constantly taken occasion to express his religious feelings, and to point out to the admiration of others the innumerable precautions which Providence has taken for the preservation of his creatures.”

SARAH, COUNTESS OF RUMFORD.

In connection with the foregoing notice of her honored father we place the portrait of the daughter, engraved on steel, with a brief sketch of her eventful life. She was born in the family mansion—the Rolfe house—October 18, 1774.* A portion of her early life was spent with her paternal grandmother, at Woburn. After the death of her mother, in 1792, she went to Europe, at her father's invitation, and was introduced into the polite and fashionable circles of Bavaria, of Paris and of London. Between the death of her father and her own decease she visited this country two or three times; but her principal residence was at Brompton, near London, in a house which she inherited from her father. A portion of her time she spent in Paris, where she had funds invested. In 1845 she returned to the spot where she was born, to live and—to die. Here she remained in great retirement, having, as her only companion and the solace of her declining years, a young lady† whom she adopted when a child, at Brompton. Occasionally the countess attended public worship at the North Church, and visited her family relatives and friends, but spent most of her time in adorning the grounds about her house and fitting things to her taste. By her habits of strict economy the property she inherited, together with her pension of about $1,000, had accumulated to a very considerable sum at the time of her decease—all which she disposed of by will, partly to family connections, but mostly for charitable objects.

She left a legacy of $10,000 to Joseph Amédée LeFebre, a son of her natural brother, Capt. LeFebre, of the French army, on condition that he would assume the name of Joseph Amédée Rumford. The executor of her will was James F. Baldwin, Esq., of Boston, who was a neighbor and personal friend of the countess in youth, and her financial agent in later years. The paintings which she inherited from her father, consisting of a portrait of the Elector of Bavaria, and Prince Maximilian, afterwards King of Bavaria; also, of several ladies of the court, and several of Count Rumford, representing him at different periods of life—were given to Joseph B. Walker, Esq., to descend at his decease to his son, Charles Rumford Walker.

A beautiful marble monument is erected to her memory in the old burying-ground, near the Walker family.

JOHN BRADLEY.

Hon. John Bradley was justly esteemed one of the most upright, useful and honored citizens of the town. His name is conspicuous in town affairs, on almost every page of the preceding history, from the age of twenty-one till his death, in 1815; and it may hereafter be the pride of his descendants to collect into a summary all the recorded acts of his public life — while the virtues which shone in his private character, and in domestic relations, will ever be worthy of their imitation.

At the period of the tragic event of his father's death, August 11, 1746, he was under three years of age, but he remembered, in after life, that his mother, overwhelmed with grief, took him down to the place where the dead body of his father lay in blood, with the others slain — the sight of which produced an impression of horror which he never entirely lost. He was baptized by Rev. Mr. Walker, six days after his birth. Under the care of his mother, a woman of superior gifts and excellent qualities, he was often reminded of his father, and the scenes through which others of the family had passed in conflict with the Indians; at the same time the principles of patriotism, of morals and religion, were instilled into his youthful heart. Living with his widowed mother, in the house of his grandfather, Abraham, he inherited, by his grandfather's will,* the house and homestead, together with the negro slave, Pompey, with whom John, in childhood, had been a particular favorite. In the war of the Revolution Mr. Bradley took a noble stand on the side of his country. In 1775 he received from the Committee of Safety of the Colony of New-Hampshire, signed by Matthew Thorn-

* The following is a copy of the Will, which possesses unusual interest.

In the name of God, Amen. ton, chairman, a commission of first lieutenant in the company for the continental service, of which Benjamin Emery was captain.*

Besides representing the town in the State Legislature several years, he was elected to the State Senate five years in succession, viz., from 1804 to 1808 inclusive. He early become an extensive land owner in the Province of Maine, and in adjacent parts of New-Hampshire, and encouraged the settlement of towns in the Piggwacket country. Three of his own sons, Robert, John and Samuel A., settled at Fryeburg. Under his patronage the late Abiel Chandler — the magnificent donor of Dartmouth College — commenced his career;† Mr. Bradley giving bonds to Harvard College for the payment of his bills. His house was the abode of hospitality. Enterprising and successful in his affairs, he was able to give his children a respectable education; and two of them, Samuel A. and Moses Hazen, were graduates of Dartmouth College.

In the war of 1812 and 1815, a volunteer company of exempts from military duty was formed, of which Mr. Bradley, then at the age of seventy-one years, was one. This company voted to provide themselves with forty-eight rounds of ball cartridges, suited to the bore of the guns which they carried. Lead being very scarce, Mr. Bradley applied from house to house in the village, to procure a sufficient quantity of lead for his bullets; not succeeding, he said, "One thing I can do: in my pantry are the old pewter-platters that belonged to my grandmother — I will melt them up for balls;" — and he did so.

About this time a Mr. Gerrish, of Boscawen, who had the reputation of affording "aid and comfort to the enemy" by furnishing beef cattle for the Canada market, called on Mr. Bradley and inquired — "Esq. Bradley, have you any beef cattle to sell?" "I have cattle in good order," was the reply. "I should like, then, to look at them, for I want to buy some for market." "What market?" inquired Mr. Bradley. "Well," said Mr. G., "I don't know as that concerns you — but the money is in my pocket, and if you will sell I am willing to pay a good price." Looking searchingly at him, Esq. B. said, "If you wish for my cattle to drive to Canada to feed the enemy in time of war, you have not money enough to buy them!" Upon which Mr. G. went his way, and purchased of those less scrupulous.

Mr. Bradley was tall and slender, but of great muscular power. At one time he and the late Jonathan Eastman owned Sewall's Island, where they had a barn. Going to the barn early one spring, he discovered a wild cat in it. The animal secreted itself behind a pile of boards. Not having a gun, Mr. Bradley, with a pair of leather mittens on his hands, seized the creature by the nape of the neck and small of its back, and choked it to death.

Though not a member of the church, Mr. B. was a firm and liberal supporter of religious institutions, a constant attendant on public worship, and of exemplary life. He passed the evening of his days in retirement and honor, in the old family mansion, greatly respected by his fellow-citizens, and died July 6, 1815, in the 72d year of his age, leaving his house and homestead to his youngest son, Richard.

"The Gambrel Roof," as the Bradley mansion is sometimes called, is well represented by the above cut. It was built by Hon.
JOSEPH WHEAT, THE STAGE-DRIVER.

BY G. K.

Of Joseph Wheat, who will be recollected as almost or quite the first stage-driver into Concord, and whose nose, especially, will be remembered long, I have two or three anecdotes—some of them not quite fit for publication. On their complaining, at Amherst—through which town his stage then passed—that he did not give notice of his approach by the usual mode of blowing a tin horn, he replied through the Amherst Cabinet, that he was aware of his deficiency in the usual notice; that he really was too poor to supply himself with a horn; but that in future, "whenever they should see the nose, they might expect the stage in about ten minutes." On another occasion, stopping for breakfast, one frosty morning, and coming in from the cold, taking his seat at the table on the opposite side of rather a dainty passenger, a drop was observed as pendant from the driver's proboscis, which the passenger noticed, and requested him very rebukingly and sternly to wipe off. Wheat, with the utmost sang froid, instantly replied, "Wipe it off yourself, if you please, sir,—you are the nearest to it." As illustrative of the great and commendable change in the public taste since the old "pod-auger" and dram-drinking times, I have in mind, as impressing itself upon my youthful recollection, a conclusion of one of Wheat's public advertisements, on establishing what he called "a new line of stages."

"Come, my old friends, and take a seat
In this new line, with Joseph Wheat;
And when to your journey's end you've come,
Your friend will treat with good old Rum."

How would this call—this toper-graphical, not "Macedonian" cry—sound now-a-days, as echoed through the public prints? Wheat was noted for his ready versification, of which a specimen has already been given on page 350, on the marriage of one Ball, an ardent-spirit soldier of the war of 1812, to Nancy Cumore, or Cumoe, a dingy lass of some five and forty, living at service in Capt. Ayer's family.

Respecting the adventures of Wheat's nose, Samuel A. Kimball relates that on one occasion, driving the stage from Concord to Hanover, Wheat met the President of the College, John Wheelock, riding in a carriage; and as he passed, took hold of his own nose, and pulling it one side, said, "Mr. President, I think you will be able to pass now."

Mr. Wheat removed hence to Charlestown, Mass., where he resided many years. The date of his decease is not known by the writer.

REUBEN ABBOT.

Reuben Abbot, son of James Abbot, was born in Andover, and came to Penacook when a lad, with his father, about 1735. He was one of the most extraordinary men of his generation. Tradition affirms that when he was born he weighed but four pounds, and, as an object of curiosity, was put into a quart tankard and the lid shut down. His head and ears could be covered with a common sized tea-cup.

When a young man he was distinguished for activity, strength, enterprise and energy. As particularly related in another place, he drove the ox-team that conveyed the dead bodies of the Bradleys and others, who were massacred in 1746. He and his brother James cleared and settled on land west of Long pond, which was given them by their father, about 1754. Reuben built the house where his grandson Reuben, and great-grandson Reuben Kilburn, now live. During his long life he was one of the most energetic and enterprising men in that section of the town. He was six feet in height, robust and strong, with bright blue eyes, and in old age very venerable in appearance. When eighty years of age he could swing a scythe and mow his swath with any man. At ninety years he shaved himself with a razor which he had owned seventy years. In shaving he never used a glass, but sat in his chair, and after lathering, placed the back of his razor carefully on his face, and turning it, shaved off the beard. He would often relate the dangers and hardships he endured in the early period of the settlement.* He said he used to kill deer enough to give him fresh meat through the winter, and also to salt down for summer. The deer-skins he dressed for mittens and for leather breeches, which, with a cocked hat, he continued to wear as long as he lived. Among the stories of his exploits, which used to puzzle the children and grandchildren, were these: "That he once shot a deer with a single ball, and made six holes through its skin;" and at another time "he shot and killed a deer without making any hole in its skin, or even drawing blood." After guessing in vain how it could be, the old man gratified the curiosity of his listeners by saying that in the first instance the ball passed through the fore legs and brisket of the deer, thus making six holes in the skin; and in the second, the ball entered one eye of the deer and lodged in its head. Once, while in a boat on Long pond, fishing, Mr. Abbot discovered a bear swimming towards him. Having his gun, he shot and wounded the bear, which thereupon, terribly enraged, still made for the boat. With the oars he defended himself, beat the bear off, and escaped without injury.

Mr. Abbot was a Puritan, of strict religious principles, a member of the church under Rev. Mr. Walker, constant at public worship, and careful to "command his children and household after him to keep the way of the Lord." He retained his mental faculties in a good degree till the close of life. In his ninety-fifth year he related the incidents of the massacre in 1746, with surprising accuracy; and living long enough to see descendants of the fourth generation bearing his own name, Reuben, in the house which he built, he died May

BIOGRAPHICAL.

13, 1822, aged 99 years and 10 months—being the oldest man that ever lived in Concord.

HON. TIMOTHY WALKER.

Hon. Timothy Walker was the only son of Rev. Timothy Walker, and was born upon the paternal farm, in Rumford, June 27, 1737. He is said, when a boy, to have been a great favorite with the Indians living in the vicinity. Entertaining a deep reverence and affection for his father, they naturally inclined to him, and, as tradition says, were wont to take him with them on visits to their wigwams—assuring his mother, who did not altogether relish such civilities, that "Indians no hurt minister's pappoose." This promise was never broken, and he was always returned in safety, although oftentimes modified somewhat in appearance, from the Indians having painted his face in glowing colors, and garlanded his head with gaudy feathers.

His father gave early attention to his education, and sent him, when fifteen years of age, to Harvard College. He remained there during the regular course, and graduated in 1756. The two years ensuing he spent in teaching school at Bradford, Massachusetts. Upon leaving Bradford, having in the mean time chosen theology as his profession, he commenced a course of study, and pursued it, most probably with his father. Having completed his theological studies, he was examined at an Association Meeting* in Haverhill, Massachusetts, and licensed to preach, September 11, 1759. He was never settled as a pastor, but preached occasionally for about six years. During the last absence of his father in England, in 1762—3, he supplied his pulpit at Rumford, and also preached as occasion required in various other places. In the summer of 1765 he preached six Sabbaths at Piggwacket, now Fryeburg, Maine. This seems to have been about the last of his preaching, and he soon after relinquished the profession of the ministry.

From his diary it appears that on the 25th of November, 1765, he concluded a partnership agreement with Col. Andrew McMillan, and commenced trade with him in Rumford, in the southerly part of the village. They continued in business together but for a single year. Soon after their separation Mr. Walker opened a store near the residence of his father, and there continued his mercantile pursuits until the beginning of the Revolution.

He was married sometime previous to 1765, to Susannah Burbeen, daughter of Rev. Joseph Burbeen, of Woburn, Massachusetts, who died in Concord, September 28, 1828, at the aged of 82. They had fourteen children, ten of whom lived to grow up.

Upon the commencement of hostilities with Great Britain, Mr. Walker warmly espoused the patriot cause, and seconded with zeal the measures adopted for the security of American liberty. His whole time seems now to have been devoted to the service of his country. The town of Concord chose him a member of the First Provincial Congress, which assembled at Exeter on the 17th of May,

1775, and he took an active interest in the very important measures which came before that body. On the 20th of May he was appointed a member of the Committee of Supplies, constituted to act in conjunction with the Committee of Safety, and procure supplies for the New-Hampshire troops—at this time in the vicinity of Boston. On the 30th of August he was sent to the army, with Ichabod Rawlings, Esq., to ascertain the losses sustained at the battle of Bunker Hill by each of the officers and soldiers of the New-Hampshire forces, and in behalf of the colony to make them compensation; also, to secure to them supplies, and advance a month’s pay to such as had enlisted in the continental service. The action of the Provincial Congress upon the report subsequently made of their doings, affords evidence that those duties were done to their acceptance. About the 1st of September of this year the New-Hampshire Congress passed an act creating four regiments of minute-men, equal in number to about one fourth part of the then existing militia of the colony. They were to meet to drill once in every two weeks, and to be ready for service at a moment’s warning. Mr. Walker was commissioned colonel of the third regiment, September 5, 1775, and exerted himself to train and fit for duty the forces under his command. From the 4th to the 16th of October we find him acting as paymaster of the troops at Winter Hill, commanded by Colonels Stark, Poor and Reid, and again, on the 27th of December, he was appointed by the second Provincial Congress paymaster of the same forces. The second Provincial Congress was succeeded, January 6, 1776, by the first House of Representatives, organized under the temporary constitution and composed of the same members. Its journal shows Col. Walker to have been one of the committee appointed “to make a draft of the declaration of this General Assembly for independence of the United Colonies.”* A draft was soon reported, which was adopted and a copy of it sent to the Continental Congress, in session at Philadelphia. At a date not long subsequent Col. Walker was appointed upon the committee to devise a systematic plan of finance, by means of which the payment of the debts of the State might be provided for, and funds raised for present and future purposes. When, on the 14th of March, 1776, the Continental Congress sent out the Associated Test, to be signed by those friendly to the patriot cause, Col. Walker most cheerfully signed the copy sent to Concord, and it was through his influence, in part at least, that of the one hundred and fifty-six to whom it was presented for signature in that town, not one declined subscribing to it his name. Col. Walker was this year one of the Committee of Safety, and served in that capacity until the 20th of June, 1776. During the next three years, viz.: from December 18, 1776, to December 15, 1779, he was a member of the Council—associated with Meshech Weare, Josiah Bartlett, Nicholas Gilman, and others of a like character—men of the purest patriotism, whose names New-Hampshire will ever cherish. On the 26th of March, 1777, he was chosen by the Legislature of New-Hampshire a delegate to the Continental Congress, and again, at three subsequent times, in 1778, 1782 and 1784; but it is not certain that he ever attended. He was sent from Concord a delegate to each of the New-Hampshire Constitutional Conventions of 1778 and 1781, and also to that of 1791, to revise the Constitution.

In 1777 he retired from the more stirring scenes connected with the war, and accepted the office of a justice of the Court of Common Pleas, which he continued to hold until 1809 — being for the last five years a chief justice. The courts were held alternately at Exeter and Portsmouth, and Judge Walker made his journeys to and from those places on horseback.

Upon the organization of the Republican party in New-Hampshire in 1793, Judge Walker was selected for its first candidate for governor, and was run against John Taylor Gilman, who had already been an incumbent of the office in previous years, and was one of the strongest men of the Federal party, at that time greatly in the majority throughout the State. Gov. Gilman was the successful candidate, receiving 9,397 votes out of the whole number of 12,158 thrown, and Judge Walker 7,34. Twice afterwards, viz.: in 1800 and 1801, he was the Republican candidate for governor, receiving the former year 6,039, and the latter, 5,249 votes — the whole number of votes cast being between 16,000 and 17,000.

Although mingling largely in State affairs, he did not withhold himself from a participation in the management of the more limited business of his native town. In this sphere he was also prominent. He was chosen moderator of the town meeting in 1769, and every year afterwards, with the exception of seven, until 1809 — serving in that capacity no less than twenty-one years. He was also town clerk from 1769 up to and including 1777, and one of the selectmen of the town for twenty-five years, between 1769 and 1802 — being chairman of the board every year except four. He ever took a lively interest in every thing tending to advance the prosperity of Concord. Being a representative to the Legislature which was holden at Exeter in 1781, and finding some dissatisfaction among the members relative to accommodations furnished them there, proposed, if they would adjourn to meet at Concord, they should be as well served, and at one half of the expense. The proposal was accepted, and upon his return home he informed his townsmen of the manner in which he had committed them, and they pledged themselves to make good his engagement to the best of their abilities. The next year the Legislature assembled in Concord for the first time. In 1798 we find him greatly interested in the improvement of the sacred music of the town; and the records of the Concord Musical Association, established about that time, show him to have been its first president.

In person Judge Walker was of medium size, being about five feet and ten inches in height, and having rounded and well developed limbs. In later life he was a little inclined to fulness. He had a placid, open countenance, a nose somewhat prominent, and a mild blue eye. His walk was ever erect, and his bearing dignified. He possessed an active, vigorous mind, and a well balanced judgment. He had keen perceptive faculties, which, aided by the experience gained in long intercourse with men, enabled him to form quickly correct opinions of the characters and motives of those with whom he came in contact. While cautious, he was yet of a sanguine temperament; hopeful, also, when others despaired, and rarely given to despondency. Careful in the choice of his plans and patient in their execution, he was generally successful. Democratic and genial in his feelings, he was on familiar terms with all about him. Rejoicing in the welfare of his townsmen, he was ever ready to do them kind services. He manifested a particular interest in the young men of the town, and not a few just starting in life received from him counsel or encouragement, or pecuniary aid, which assisted them greatly in overcoming first obstacles, and nerved them to exertions which secured for them the foundations of future prosperity.

When at length old age came upon him he met it cheerfully and manfully. For several years previous to 1822 he became a good deal infirm, but still enjoyed life in a good degree. His children were prosperously and respectably settled in life, and a part of them near about him. He had frequent evidence of the respect entertained for him by his fellow citizens; he had an inward consciousness of having done what he could to be useful in his day and generation; he had entire confidence in the revelations of the sacred Scriptures, and an humble hope that the infinite atonement of the Son of God might attach to him. On the 5th of May, 1822, in the bosom of his family, he died—a virtuous and a happy old man—in the 85th year of his age. Truly, “The hoary head is a crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness.”

REV. ASA McFARLAND, D. D.

The Rev. Dr. McFarland was a native of Worcester, Mass.; born April 19, 1769. He was graduated at Dartmouth College in 1793; was employed the two following years as Preceptor of Moore's Charity School at Hanover, and the two next as Tutor in College. His limited pecuniary resources rendered special exertions necessary to defray the expenses of his education, and his vacations were generally employed in teaching music. By that means he was first introduced into this town. In 1809 he was appointed a Trustee of Dartmouth College; in 1811, President of the New-Hampshire Missionary Society; in 1812, he received the degree of Doctor of Divinity, from Yale College; and for twenty-seven years he was Clerk of the Ecclesiastical Convention of the State. Dr. McFarland possessed a vigorous and active mind; was discriminating in reasoning and sound in his judgment. His sermons were formed with logical precision; contained more of doctrinal than of practical instruction, and were delivered in a plain, direct manner, with a full, heavy, yet agreeable voice. His labors as a minister were very arduous, and the fruits of his industry are abundant. He left 2054 manuscript sermons, which make an average of 76 each year. The following is a list of his publications:

1. Sermon before the Franklin Lodge, at Hanover, June 24, 1797. 8vo. pp. 16.
2. Sermon at Concord, March 11, 1798, the Sabbath after his ordination. 8vo. pp. 32.
4. Oration before the Society of the Phi Beta Kappa, at their anniversary at Hanover, August 25, 1802. 4to. pp. 32.
5. Sermon at the Ordination of Rev. William Rolfe, at Groton, Nov. 9, 1803.
6. Sermon at Concord, June 22, 1806, the next Lord's Day after the total Eclipse of the Sun. 8vo. pp. 16.
8. Signs of the Last Times; a discourse delivered at Concord, July 24, 1808. 8vo. pp. 32.
9. Sermon before the Executive and Legislature of New-Hampshire, June 1, 1808. 8vo. pp. 32.
10. Sermon at Concord, December 2, 1810, on the importance of Family Religion and Government. 8vo. pp. 28.
12. Sermon on the Sabbath, April 15, 1813. 8vo. pp. 15.
13. Sermon before the Moral Society, September 14, 1814.
17. Sermon at Concord, December, 1822, from Canticles 6: 10—entitled "The Moral Beauty and Glory of the Church."
18. Sermon at the ordination of Rev. Mr. Woodward.

Besides preaching two written discourses on the Sabbath, he usually attended a third service at the town hall, or at a school-house, when he preached extemporaneously. In seasons of revival he preached frequently in outer districts of the town, sometimes spending a day or two in visiting from house to house, and attending meetings in the evening without returning home. Three years and a half he officiated as chaplain in the State Prison—preaching to the convicts once on the Sabbath.

Dr. McFarland was a leader in vocal music. Besides doing much to promote good singing in the church, he was a member of the Merrimack County Musical Association, and for some time President of it. His voice was admirably fitted for bass, which he sang with great power; as tradition says, "making the house tremble."

Dr. McFarland was married three times. His first two wives were Nancy and Clarissa Dwight, of Belchertown, Mass. The third was Elizabeth Kneeland, only daughter of Mr. Bartholomew Kneeland, of Boston, who survived her husband eleven years. Her children were as follows: Asa; Susan K., married to Gilbert McMillan, Esq., of Conway; Elizabeth,* married to Rev. Edward Buxton, of West

*Deceased.
Boscawen; William; Sarah A., married to Mr. George N. Guthrie, of Putnam, Ohio; Andrew; Miriam P.;* and Clarissa,* married to John W. Noyes, Esq., of Chester.

During the greater part of his ministry Dr. McFarland enjoyed the confidence of the town and the affections of the church. His regard for the interests of both were sincere, and lasting as his life. When, in 1824, in consequence of bodily infirmities, he concluded to resign his ministerial charge, he acted from a full conviction that the religious interests of the people required it.† He did it not only unsolicited, but in opposition to the advice of some of his substantial friends. Closing his contract with the town he cordially united with the Church in seeking a candidate to be his successor, towards whom he always acted the part of a faithful counsellor and friend.

Dr. McFarland was subject to depression of spirits, which increased with the failure of health and the infirmities of age. The immediate cause of his death was paralysis, to which he seemed constitutionally subject,—as some of his near kindred before him died with it. From December, 1823, to February, 1827, he experienced seven strokes of paralysis,—all except one on the Sabbath. He expired on the morning of the Sabbath, February 18, 1827, in the 58th year of his age and 27th of his ministry. The neighboring ministers attended his funeral as bearers, and a sermon was preached by Rev. Walter Harris, d. d., of Dunbarton, from Heb. 9: 27.

After his dismissal from the pastoral office, in March, 1825, the following testimonial, drawn by Samuel Fletcher, Esq., was unanimously adopted by the Church, April 25, 1825, and entered upon the records:

Whereas, the pastoral relation subsisting between the Rev. Dr. McFarland and this Church, has, at his request, and on account of ill health, been recently dissolved, and his faithful and arduous labors, during the term of twenty-seven years, have been remarkably blessed to the enlargement and prosperity of the church and the harmony of the town, under his ministry; Therefore—

Resolved, That this Church do cherish a grateful remembrance of his faithful services and extensive usefulness; That they look back with delight to the interesting scenes through which they have passed; to the seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord, which under his ministry they have been permitted repeatedly to experience; to the many instances in which they have taken sweet counsel together, and in which they have listened to his kind and faithful instructions; And while they deplore the necessity of the separation that has taken place, they fervently implore the blessings of Providence and the approving smiles of his and their Master to descend and remain upon him.

The likeness which accompanies this brief sketch was copied from a painting executed in 1818 by the celebrated Prof. S. F. B. Morse.

NATHANIEL HAZELTINE CARTER.

Nathaniel H. Carter was a son of Mr. Joseph Carter, and born in the south-west part of the town, at what is called the Iron Works. His father at one time lived on the spot where Mr. William Abbot now lives, where, it is understood, Nathaniel H. was born, 1787.

* Deceased. † See his Letter of Resignation, p. 385.
Subsequently Mr. Carter lived with the late Mr. Levi Abbot, who married his daughter, in a house still standing, built by Nathaniel Abbot, 2d — the back part of which, now occupied as a shed or store-room, is built of logs, in the ancient manner.* The baptism of Nathaniel Hazeltine, son of Joseph Carter, by Rev. Israel Evans, is recorded October 11, 1789.

Evincing at an early age a desire for a superior education, he at first attended a private school in Concord, kept by the late Rev. Abraham Burnham, d. d., of Pembrooke; then he went to Phillips’ Academy, Exeter; graduated at Dartmouth College in 1811; taught school in his native town; then in Salisbury, and in Portland, Me. He was professor of languages in Dartmouth University; afterwards went to Albany; read law a while, and, under the auspices of DeWitt Clinton and Professor D. Pembroke; commenced a paper, which was subsequently moved to New-York, and called the New-York Statesman, of which he remained one of the editors till 1829. This paper was conducted with great ability, and in particular was distinguished for candor and its literary merits. In 1825 he made a tour in Europe, and was absent till 1827, when he returned, and published in two octavo volumes his well known "Letters from Europe."

In his tour he visited England, Ireland, Scotland, France, Italy and Switzerland. His health becoming impaired he went to Cuba, where he spent the winters of 1827–8. His last visit to his native town was in the fall of 1828— at which time he met a cordial welcome from many associates of his youth, and was regarded with high respect and esteem by all who knew him. He attended church for the last time in the old North meeting-house, where his pale face, emaciated form and brilliant eye, attracted the notice and awakened the sympathy of the preacher, to him then a stranger. He also visited the old Court-room, while the court was in session, where he received a most respectful notice from the members of the bar, of whom then present were the late Ezekiel Webster, George Sullivan, Jeremiah Mason and Levi Woodbury. But during this last visit to his native town he went to the spot where he was born, and roamed once more along the banks of the "Turkey river," to which the following beautiful lines, composed by him at that time, may give a classic immortality:

TO MY NATIVE STREAM.†

Hail! hail again, my native stream,
Scene of my boyhood’s earliest dream!
With solitary step once more
I tread thy wild and sylvan shore,
And pause at every turn, to gaze
Upon thy dark meandering maze.
What though obscure thy woody source,
What though unsung thy humble course;
What if no lofty classic name
Give to thy peaceful waters fame,
Still can thy rural haunts impart
A solace to this saddened heart.

HISTORY OF CONCORD.

Since last with thee I parted, time
Hath borne me on through many a clime,
Far from my native roof that stood,
Secluded by thy murmur' ring flood;
And I in distant lands have roamed,
Where rolled new streams, new oceans foamed;
Along the Shannon, Doon and Tay,
I've sauntered many a happy day,
And sought beside the Cam and Thames
Memorials of immortal names;
Or mingled in the polished train
Of fashion, on the banks of Seine.
And I have seen the azure Rhone
Rush headlong from his Alpine throne;
Green Minicius and silver Po
Through vine-clad vales meandering flow;
Sweet Arno, wreathed in summer flowers,
Linger amidst Etrurian bowers;
And the old Tiber's yellow tide
Roll to the sea in sullen pride.
In climes beneath the burning zone,
'Mid tangled forests, deep and lone,
Where fervid skies forever glow,
And the soft trade-winds whispering blow,
My roving footsteps too have pressed
The loveliest island of the West.
There Yumuri winds, deep and calm,
Through groves of citron and of palm;
There, on the sluggish waves of Juan,
My little boat hath borne me on;
Or up Canimar's silent flood,
Strown with the blossoms of its woods.
Yet not the less, my native stream,
Art thou to me a grateful theme,
Than when, in heedless boyhood's prime,
I wove for thee the rustic rhyme,
Ere other realms, beyond the sea,
Had spread their fairest charms for me.
E'en now, alone I sit me down,
Amidst thy woods, with autumn brown,
And on the rustling leaves recline,
Beneath a copse of whisper' ring pine,
To watch thy amber current run,
Bright with November's parting sun.
Around with eager eye I trace
The charms of each remembered place —
Some fountain gushing from the bank,
At which, in youth, I knelt and drank —
Yon oak, its hoary arms that rears,
Scene of my sports in boyish years.

Farewell! farewell! though I no more
May ramble on thy rural shore,
Still shall thy quiet wave glide on,
When he who watched its flow is gone,
And his solo epitaph shall be Inscribed upon some aged tree.

Concord, N. H., November, 1828.
With the hope of benefit to his declining health, in the fall of 1829, Mr. Carter, by advice of his physicians, sailed for France. He arrived at Marseilles, and died January 2, 1830, aged 43. After his death, in his vest-pocket was found a scrap of poetry, and on the back of the scrap a note, intimating that those lines were but part of an article, the beginning of which was to be found in his secretary—telling at once of his feebleness at the time of his last writing—unable to go to his secretary to put the scraps together—and that he was expecting that the ocean would be his grave. This last specimen of his poetic genius is here inserted. The two parts, as found, are separated by a dash:

TO

THE CLOSING SCENE—BURIAL AT SEA.

From his room to the deck they brought him, drest
In his funeral robes by his own request—
With his boots and stock and garments on,
And naught but the breathing spirit gone:
For he wished that a child might come and lay
An unstartled hand upon his clay.
Then they wrapped his corse in a tarry sheet,
To the dead, as Araby’s spices sweet,
And prepared him to seek the depths below,
Where waves never bent, nor tempests blow.
No steeds with their nodding plumes were here,
No sable hearse, and no coffin bier,
To bear with pomp and parade away
The dead—to sleep with his kindred clay.
But the little group—a silent few,
His companions, mixed with the hardy crew,
Stood thoughtful around, till a prayer was said
O’er the corse of the dead, unconscious dead.
Then they bore his remains to the vessel’s side,
And committed them safe to the dark blue tide.
One sullen plunge, and the scene is o’er—
The sea rolled on as it rolled before.

In that classical sea,* whose azure vies
With the green of its shores, and the blue of its skies,
In some pearly cave, in some coral cell—
Oh! the dead shall sleep—as sweetly, as well—
As if shrined in the pomp of Parian tombs,
Where the East and the South breathe their rich perfumes;
Nor forgotten shall be the humblest one,
Though he sleep in the watery waste alone,
When the trump of the angel sounds with dread,
And the sea, like the land, gives up the dead!

The opinion will not, I trust, be deemed invidious, that Nathaniel H. Carter stands preëminent among the sons of Concord in literary merit.

GEORGE HOUGH.

Mr. Hough was extensively and well known as the first printer in Concord. He died February 8, 1830, aged 73. “He was descended,”

*The Mediterranean, on which sea he was then voyaging.
said the late John Farmer, "from an ancient and respectable family, who emigrated at a very early period from Lincolnshire, in England, and settled in Massachusetts; from whence the branch from which he descended removed to Connecticut, where, in the town of Bozrah, formerly Norwich, he was born on the 15th of June, 1757. His father was Mr. Jabez Hough, who lived to the advanced age of ninety-three. The art of printing he acquired in an office belonging to two Scotchmen, of the name of Robertson, who had established themselves at Norwich, and were well known for their skill in typog-raphy. From this office was issued the Norwich Packet, a paper which, as published by them, and subsequently by a Mr. Trumbull, advocated the principles of the Revolution, and did much towards extending those principles in the region where it was circulated. In 1783 Mr. Hough went to Windsor, in Vermont, and there, in con-junction with the late Alden Spooner, Esq., established the Vermont Journal, in which they were jointly concerned until 1789, when Mr. Hough removed to Concord, and set up the first printing press in this town, in the month of September. While in Vermont he was elected one or two years treasurer of the county of Windsor. The first work which he printed in Concord, and the first printing done in the county of Merrimack, or in any part of the old county of Rock-ingham, out of the towns of Portsmouth and Exeter, was the Chris-tian Economy. This fact may be deserving of remembrance in the typographical annals of the State. In January, 1790, he commenced the "Concord Herald and New-Hampshire Intelligencer," which, with several alterations of the title, he continued until October 30, 1805. This paper was circulated in the interior central parts of the State, and was the means of diffusing a knowledge of our political and civil relations at a time when, compared with the present, but few newspapers were distributed. In 1792, a post-office having been es-tablished in Concord, he was appointed the first post-master, and his commission, signed by the Hon. Timothy Pickering, the Post-Master General, is dated in June of that year. On Mr. Jefferson's accession to the presidency, in 1801, and the appointment of Mr. Granger to be Post-Master General, Mr. Hough, in common with many others, was superseded in office. In the years 1815 and 1816 he was chosen one of the two representatives of the town of Concord in the Gen-eral Court. In January, 1819, he commenced the "Concord Ob-server," a religious newspaper, and the first of the kind printed in New-Hampshire. In 1828 a number of the enterprising mechanics of Concord formed an association for the purpose of mutual aid and improvement in their respective vocations, and Mr. Hough, from his age and long devotion to the typographic art, was selected as the first president. To this office he was re-elected about a month prior to his decease."

In the various relations of life the subject of this notice was dis-tinguished for the urbanity of his deportment, the fidelity of his friendship, and the uprightness of his dealings. To his uniform character for honesty and integrity, Mr. Hough added, within the last fifteen years of his life, the higher and holier sanction of the Christian profession.

Mr. Hough's first wife was the widow of Dr. Fay, of Windsor, Vt., by whom he had one child, George H., afterwards a Baptist missionary in India. His second wife was Miss Lucinda Jones, who died before her husband, September 26, 1826, aged 64, leaving no children. An adopted niece, Miss Mary Silsby, married Moses G. Atwood, formerly of Concord, but now of Alton, Ill.

Mr. Hough is remembered as remarkably moderate, exact and precise in every thing. He had become so accustomed to correct proof, that in his ordinary reading of a newspaper or book, he would stop to punctuate according to his own notions. He made excessive use of the comma, always placing one before the conjunction and. In counting over bank bills he invariably smoothed out all the wrinkles as he proceeded. At a time when the "lower Concord Bank" was run upon for specie payment of its bills, Col. Kent employed Mr. Hough to count small coin, while an express man was sent to Boston to obtain the sum requisite to meet the demand! His usual precision to ascertain the exact value of the small pieces gave ample time for the messenger to return and save the bank from dishonoring its paper. It was a common saying respecting Mr. Hough, that he "seemed to put a comma after every step he took." An intimate friend of his says: "Although very deliberate and apparently considerate in speech, he used to be caught 'tripping on the tongue,' by frequent Irishisms. Riding with him across the Pine plain one summer evening, when and where will be noticed, as crossing your path, an occasional vein of air, warmer than the surrounding atmosphere, he remarked upon the singularity of the 'warm and cold heats.'" With reference to the health of his wife, he replied, one day, to the inquiry of a friend concerning her,—"Mrs. Hough got up down sick, and she has been abed ever since she got up." Upon Col. K.'s reminding him of his addictedness to Irishisms, (of which he seemed to be fully conscious,) and asking him the cause, he replied very seriously—"I don't know how in the world it happened, unless it be because I served my time with a Scotchman."

CAPT. RICHARD AYER.

Died, in this town, on Saturday, December 17, 1831, Capt. Richard Ayer, in the 75th year of his age. He was born May 12, 1757, at Haverhill, Mass., where his ancestors, from the early settlement of that town, had resided, and where they possessed a good share of wealth and influence. He came to this town in 1777, having the same year married Miss Susan Sargent, grand-daughter of Rev. Christopher Sargent, of Methuen, and settled in the village, where he resided until his death. He was in early life employed in the affairs of the town; served in the office of selectman, and in 1814 and 1815 represented his fellow-townsmen in the State Legislature. He possessed a vigorous and powerful frame, a sound judgment, and in the various offices he held, and several relations of life, exercised a good share of discrimination. He had thirteen children, nine of whom survived him.*

JESSE CARR TUTTLE.

Mr. Tuttle is well remembered as a printer and a miller. He married Zerviah, a daughter of the second Reuben Abbot. Mr. Tuttle was an indentured apprentice to the printing business, with Mr. George Hough. He was always fond of an out-door life, to the neglect of his proficiency in the printing art. On being remonstrated with for his inattention, and told that, without more diligence in the office, he would never make a printer, he is said to have remarked very gravely, that “Mr. Hough was bound by his indentures to learn him the trade—and he did n’t care.” After he became, in a certain sense, a printer, and a publisher of one of the only two newspapers then printed in Concord, he found fault with one of his apprentices for following copy, and setting up that “Bonaparte was in great jeopardy” during his campaign in the north of Europe,—insisting upon it that, instead of lower case, he should have set up “great jeopardy” with capital initial letters, as it was a place somewhere in Russia. Relinquishing the printing business, Tuttle became a miller, and lived a while at Dickerman’s mills,† and brought his meal for customers into Concord Main street. He was an honest, hard-working and driving man,—but somehow, in his business, failed to work it right. He brought up his family very creditably, and died December 10, 1834, aged 55, leaving a widow and children, living much respected for several years afterwards in Concord.

JONATHAN EASTMAN, ESQ.

Jonathan Eastman, senior, Esq., was a son of Philip Eastman, who married Abiah Bradley. He was a man of robust frame, and distinguished during his life for health, activity and enterprise. He was an ardent patriot; was in Capt. Joshua Abbot’s company of volunteers that marched to reinforce the northern army, September, 1777, and was ready any time afterwards to fight for his country! Esq. Eastman, as he was usually called, lived on the east side of the river, on the spot near the old garrison-house of his grandfather, Capt. Ebenezer Eastman, where he brought up a large family.‡ He had but little early education, but learned to write on birch bark, and in late years was well posted up in all political and public matters, by reading newspapers. As illustrations of his enterprise and force of character, it is related that when a boy, fifteen years of age, he was sent by his father, on foot, to Conway, driving two cows and two

* See Ayer family.
† Mr. Enoch Dickerman, who has lived in Concord since 1836, was a hired hand with Tuttle, and drove his team about a year. His father once owned “Dickerman’s Mills.” Mr. Dickerman is now a sort of “fixture” in Concord, known by his long cotton striped frock, his spectacles, and his bending posture, as if he was looking for pins or money. He was one of the last tenants of the old garrison house, owned by Dr. Chadbourne, before it was moved back for a stable. [See picture of him in Wheeler’s Directory, 1853.]

shotes the whole distance, and going by way of Saco, Me. Near a solitary cabin in the woods, about half way to where he was to stop, he met a bear in the path, which he faced, till old bruin, put out of countenance, filled off. He lodged in the cabin alone at night, and reached Conway in safety the next day. When a young man he was engaged in a party with Andrew McMillan, Esq., of Conway, in “running out land” in Rumford, Me. On one occasion, a severe storm coming on, they started for Fryeburg, but before they reached it, it was so cold that they were in danger of freezing. The flint of their only gun was lost, and they could not “strike fire.” In this predicament the fact occurred to them that there were quartz pebbles on the bottom of Keaser Pond, near by, in not very deep water. Hastening to the pond, they broke the ice, and cast lots to decide who should go in to get the pebbles. The lot fell on Eastman; and, stripping off his clothes, with a rope fastened to one leg, he dove in and fetched up a pebble. With this they struck fire and made themselves comfortable.

Esq. Eastman was a great friend of Parson Walker, and also of the ministers who succeeded him. He was regular in his attendance at meeting, but if any thing occurred to prevent his going, his old horse, named “Pomp,” had formed such a good habit, that he would leave his pasture, go to the meeting-house, stand at his post all day, and after meeting return home with his neighbors. The many useful offices which Mr. Eastman filled in town, and the services which he performed as a citizen, may be seen by reference to the history. He died October 19, 1834, aged 87. The accompanying likeness of Esq. Eastman, which is very perfect, was taken from an original painting by Hon. Jacob A. Potter, about 1831.

STILSON EASTMAN.

Mr. Eastman's service in the French War, 1757, has already been related, on page 195 of our History. He was also in the Revolutionary service, and on the surrender of Burgoyne, after the soldiers had stacked their guns, he contrived to exchange his gun for a Hessian rifle. This was preserved in the family many years, and is now in possession of Mr. Meshech Lang, who obtained it of Amos Eastman, son of Stilson. This gun, which I have seen, is a beautiful rifle—having only a new stock since Mr. Lang owned it. After the war, Eastman owned and lived on the farm subsequently owned by the late Isaac Emery, Esq., in East Concord. Not being of strictly sober life, and becoming embarrassed in pecuniary matters, Eastman's farm fell into the hands of Simeon Brackett, who married his daughter Betsey. In old age he and his wife went to live in Rumford, Me., with their son Caleb. There, at 80 years of age, he was awakened to religious concerns under the preaching of a missionary, Rev. Jotham Sewall. When 90 years old he would ride on horseback, with his wife behind him, several miles to meeting. Being once asked how old he was, he replied, “I am now four years old; for I consider all my past life, before I found a Saviour, as nothing. It is now four years since I began to live!" He died in Rumford about 1837, in the 100th year of his age.

JOHN FARMER, ESQ.

John Farmer, Esq., came to Concord from Amherst in 1821; formed a business connection with Dr. Samuel Morrill, and opened an apothecary store—whence he received the title of Doctor, though he never entered the medical profession. He remained in Concord till the time of his death, August 18, 1838. Soon after his decease the following brief, accurate and just tribute to his memory appeared in the Portsmouth Journal.*

"John Farmer, Esq. was born at Chelmsford, Mass., on the 12th of June, 1789, and was the eldest son of John Farmer, of Chelmsford, and a lineal descendant of Edward Farmer, son of John Farmer, of Ansley, in Warwickshire, who came to this country and settled in Billerica as early as 1672.

"Mr. Farmer was distinguished as an antiquarian and genealogist, and his researches, some of which are embodied in his publications, are sufficient to enroll his name among the most distinguished historians of the age in which he lived. His Notes and Illustrations of Belknap's History of New-Hampshire are scarcely less valuable than the text itself; and his Genealogical Register of the First Settlers of New-England is a monument of great labor and much patient research. In connection with Mr. Moore, of Concord, he published in 1823 the Gazetteer of New-Hampshire, spoken of at that time as a model by the critics, and since followed by similar works in several other States; and in conjunction with the same gentleman he published several years since three volumes of Historical Collections, embodying a large amount of rare and valuable matters. Mr. Farmer also contributed largely to the published Collections of the N. H. Historical Society, of which he was one of the founders, and a most useful member—having been one of the publishing committee, and corresponding secretary from 1825 until the day of his death. He was also a contributor to the volumes published by the Massachusetts Historical Society, and latterly to the Quarterly Register—a valuable statistical work, published in Boston. For the last year or two he has been engaged in collating and arranging the records, manuscripts, and files in the office of the Secretary of State, and most richly did he merit the compliment bestowed upon his labors by the Governor in his last annual message. It is gratifying to learn that the most difficult portion of the task confided to Mr. Farmer has been accomplished, and that it will be in the power of the Executive, under the wise and liberal resolve of the Legislature, to secure to this State probably the most perfect set of public records in the Union.

"Mr. Farmer was an honorary member of various learned and literary societies abroad; a correspondent of the most eminent living historians, scholars and antiquaries of the age—and enjoyed, what is a rare blessing, the entire confidence and esteem of men of all parties in religion or politics. He had no enemies, and many friends. He was a conscientious and ardent friend of the slave, and, as corresponding secretary of the New-Hampshire Anti-Slavery Society, he was greatly beloved by its members. His death was peaceful and tranquil. His funeral was attended on Wednesday morning by a large concourse, at the North church, where a most affecting tribute to his memory and worth was paid by Rev. Dr. Bouton, and his body consigned to its place in that mighty congregation of the dead, over whose history it was his delight to ponder while living."

* A more full notice of him is found in Vol. VI., of N. H. Historical Collections.

To the above it may be added that Mr. Farmer was a man of feeble constitution, slender and tall; bright blue eyes, sandy complexion and hair, with a prominent forehead, and a mild, but very intelligent expression. He had a faculty of attaching to him the young, and exerted over them a pleasing and salutary influence—generally inspiring them with a love of reading and research. Among the young men who were thus under his influence, were the late Prof. Henry L. Low and Cyrus P. Bradley, of Concord, and others still living. Mr. Farmer never married. He died of a lingering consumption, at the house of Mr. Daniel Clark. Among his particular friends were Gen. Joseph Low, of Concord, and Isaac Spalding, Esq., of Nashua,—of whom the latter was administrator of his estate; and the former has inscribed, on his family monument, in the old burying-ground, the name of Mr. Farmer, with the following inscription:

JOHN FARMER,
Died August 13, 1838,
Æt. 49.
Born at Chelmsford, Mass.,
Honored as a man,
Distinguished as an antiquarian and a scholar,
Beloved as a friend,
And revered as a christian philanthropist,
And a lover of impartial liberty.
His death has occasioned a void in society which time
Will fail to supply;
And the reason and fitness of which,
As to time, and manner, and attending circumstances,
Eternity alone can fully unfold.

COL. WILLIAM A. KENT.

Col. Kent came to this place in 1789, and established himself as one of the two or three traders, doing business here in a small way, and, connecting with his store of West India goods the business to which he had been regularly apprenticed and brought up—that of a tin-plate worker. Col. Kent was born in Charlestown, Mass., on the 27th of April, 1765, and was the youngest child of Ebenezer and Mary Kent—the father being the son also of Ebenezer, and the mother being Mary Austin, daughter of Ebenezer Austin, all of Charlestown. Both his father and paternal grandfather were sea-captains, and both died abroad—the father, when the subject of this notice was but an infant, about fifteen months old. Left at this early age to the care of a sister in moderate circumstances, with a family of four children dependent upon her, the struggle with adversity would seem to have been sufficiently arduous, without the calamity which befel the family, in common with other residents of Charlestown, by the burning of that place by the British, in 1775. By this fire the dwelling-house and small store of the mother were consumed, and the family driven, as homeless wanderers, for months back into one of the interior towns. On the return of the family to Charlestown, a situation as apprentice was secured for William, when fourteen years of age, in the shop and store of Deacon Newell, of Boston. It was then the custom to allow few or no perquisites to the apprentice, and so close had the subject of this notice been kept in the matter of money, that he has been heard to remark that, glad as he, in common with most apprentices, might be to terminate his seven years' service, the day he became one and twenty was to him, perhaps, the gloomiest day of his life,—as, on returning to his poor and widowed mother, he had barely money enough to carry him over the bridge to Charlestown. Having no capital with which to commence business for himself, and remaining unemployed for a few weeks, he gladly embraced an early offer to go back as a journeyman to his old master. Here he continued long enough to earn sufficient money, and establish sufficient credit, to purchase for himself a set of tools, and a few boxes of tin, together with a barrel of sugar, a barrel of molasses, a keg of tobacco, a bag of coffee and a chest of tea, and took passage, with his goods, on board one of the slow farmer teams of that day, bound to this, the place of his after residence for more than fifty years. His attention was directed to this place by the fact of his only sister having previously mar-rried the Rev. Israel Evans, who settled in this town.

In 1792 Col. Kent formed a happy marriage connection with Miss Charlotte Mellen, a daughter of the Rev. John Mellen, of Sterling, Mass., and younger sister of the Hon. Prentiss Mellen, some years since a Senator in Congress, and Chief Justice of the State of Maine.
Cemented by this happy union, their united home was, for nearly thirty years, the abode of refined and generous hospitality. With reference to this, it may not be inappropriate to quote the following tribute, from no less an authority than the Hon. Daniel Webster, in a letter written by him, six months previous to his decease, to George Kent, Esq., one of the sons:

"I avail myself of this opportunity, my dear sir, to renew the expression of that regard which I have entertained for yourself and your family for so many years. Your excellent father was one of the first to bring me into notice before the people of New-Hampshire, and a kind and attached friend to the hour of his death. His house was one of the first in all the neighborhood in which I met intelligent and cultivated society, and that house was always adorned, enlivened, and made most agreeable to all its guests, by your admirable mother. I assure you, my dear sir, that these recollections give me great pleasure.”

In 1796 Col. Kent was commissioned as a justice of the peace, which office he continued to hold, through various reappointments, and in its different grades, of justice of the quorum, and justice throughout the State, until his temporary removal from New-Hampshire, in 1821. He was elected the representative of the town in 1797, and re-elected to the same office four or five times during the succeeding twenty years—his last service in this capacity being in 1817. In the mean time he was three times elected to the Senate of New-Hampshire—first, in 1809, and again in 1813 and 1814—in which latter year he was chosen by the Legislature as treasurer of the State, the duties of which office he discharged for the succeeding two years. In early life he was commissioned and served several years as aid to the governor, (Gov. Gilman,) with the rank of colonel, and in this capacity accompanied His Excellency on several excursions and reviews throughout the State. Having retired from mercantile business, he was, in 1806, appointed cashier of the Concord Bank, and continued in that office until his resignation, in 1821.

Col. Kent will be long and favorably remembered as an energetic and public-spirited citizen; ready to aid in all works of public improvement, and to bear his share in all public enterprises. He was a friend of good order, of the cause of education, and of religious worship and ordinances. Although not himself greatly indebted, in early life, to public school instruction, nor at all to any of the higher seminaries of learning, he was a just appreciator of their value, and by his native force of mind and quickness of apprehension, well supplied, to an extent quite uncommon, any defect in his early training, so that he became a ready and correct writer, a clear and comprehensive speaker, and an accurate and sound judge in all matters where he was called upon to act. In affairs of the town his opinion was looked up to with much confidence, was readily given, and generally appreciated. He was repeatedly called upon to preside as moderator of the annual town meetings, and evinced, in this often difficult office, great readiness in the discharge of duty, united with dignity and self-possession, and great firmness and decision of character, blended with courtesy and respect to the feelings and rights of others. His courage, moral and physical, was put severely to the test in the March election of 1813, when, as moderator, he felt bound to deny to certain United States soldiers, stationed at Concord, the right of voting, which they claimed on that occasion.*

But it was in the more private relations of life that the subject of this imperfect notice was the best appreciated. Of gentlemanly manners and pleasing address, he had a quickness of perception and readiness of reply, which could not fail to distinguish him in the extensive circle of private friendship. Naturally rather taciturn, and only speaking when he had something to say, his peculiar qualities were less known to the world at large. In the family and social circle he was often the "observed of all observers," by the point and terseness of his ready replies. He seemed to know the exact place, in colloquial discourse, when quietly to let fly the arrows of his wit, and, keen as they might often be—being aimed not at particular persons, but at men and things in general—there was seldom or never any festering wound left behind.

Col. Kent, though slender in form, and always after a severe fever which he had in early life, considerable of an invalid, was remarkably quick and active in his motions, retaining his erect attitude and the suppleness and elasticity of his limbs, to the time of his last sickness and death. He was accustomed to take frequent walks, to work a good deal in his garden, (of which he was very fond,) to take occasional exercise in early life in the way of gunning and fishing; and in later years in journeying, especially in visiting, at least once a year, and staying for days, and sometimes weeks, at Hampton Beach, or some other of our various New-England watering-places, where he was often the life of the social circle. He retained his usual health to within less than a week of his decease, and his mental powers apparently unimpaired to the very last; and died of an inflammatory disease of the bowels, on the 7th of April, 1840, at the age of seventy-five years. For several of the last years of his life he was a member of the Unitarian church in this town, and always a diligent reader of the Holy Scriptures; constant in his attendance upon public worship, and exemplary in his daily habits and manner of life, from his youth up. Old as he was, he had not outlived, and had, indeed, hardly impaired his usefulness, up to the time of his decease. His funeral was numerous attended, and his departure mourned, both as a private and public loss, by his townsmen generally, and by a large circle of relatives and friends.*

The admirable lithograph likeness accompanying this notice was taken from a painting by a Mr. Edwards.

PHILIP CARRIGAIN, ESQ.

Philip Carrigain, son of Dr. Philip Carrigain, was born in Concord, February 20, 1777,† and graduated at Dartmouth College in 1794; studied law with Arthur Livermore, Esq., and settled in practice in his native town. He was chosen Secretary of State by the New-Hampshire Legislature in June, 1805, and sustained that office four years. He was employed by the State government to prepare a Map of New-Hampshire, which he published in 1816—a work which reflects great credit on the author, and is highly honorable to the State under whose patronage it was executed. Mr. Carrigain was several years clerk of the Senate, and was often employed in public business. He was for some years in the practice of law at Epsom and Chichester: but subsequently came to Concord, where he died,

† The original record appears to have been altered. He was probably born in 1772.
in very reduced circumstances, March 15, 1842, aged 70 years. A writer in one of the public journals thus speaks of him. "The late Philip Carrigain, Esq., of Concord—a quick witted, genial personage—when he held the office of Secretary of State was frequently beset for his name, to be placed upon petitions for office. Carrigain, it is said, signed all the papers offered. He wrote a beautiful hand, and wielded a pen with the skill and dexterity of a writing-master.
The flourish beneath his name is well remembered by multitudes of people in all parts of New-Hampshire—flourishes representing a plain oblong circle, with accompanying scrolls; or the head, beak, and neck of an eagle; or the head of a lion, or the figure of the quill with which he wrote. He signed, as remarked above, all the papers presented; but had this understanding with Heads of Departments, that unless there was the head of an eagle beneath his name, no attention was to be paid to the signature."

A friend who knew him well says: "Philip Carrigain, Esq., will be remembered for his social and convivial habits, the general kind-liness of his disposition, the versatility of his talents, his appreciation of wit and humor, and his readiness at repartee. He was a gentleman in his manners—and although he suffered himself to become and to remain a bachelor, even to three score years and ten, was always a great admirer and flatterer of the fair sex. His compliments were often rather fulsome—but sometimes blended, whether intentionally or not, with a spice of raillery. He paid this rather ambiguous compliment to a bevy of young ladies, coming out one summer evening from a convivial entertainment, and manifesting in their homeward walk a good deal of sportive glee, as well as great "confusion of tongues:"

"The dog-star rages — and, 'tis past a doubt,
"All Bedlam — or Parnassus — is let out."

When Secretary of State under Gov. Langdon, whose Council as well as himself, (Hon. Elijah Hall, Col. Quarles, Gen. Pierce, &c.) were all ignorant, to say the least, of any tongue but our own, a letter came to the Executive from the celebrated John Randolph, sealed with his armorial seal, and bearing the Latin motto, "Fari quæ sentiat"—three words from Horace, signifying "to speak one's mind," or what one may think. The Secretary, being a college-learnt man, was appealed to, to translate the motto. It would not do to seem to be at fault, or at any loss about it—although, from the ob-soleteness of the word "fari," a better scholar than Col. Carrigain might have been pardoned some little hesitation. The Secretary took the letter, wholly at a loss about the true rendering of the motto
—but, in his rapid way, at once replied, "Fari quæ sentiat—Fari quæ sentiat—yes, your Excellency, a fine motto—a very fine motto—very characteristic of Mr. Randolph." "Well, what is the English of it, Mr. Secretary?" says Gov. Langdon. "O, yes, your Excellency—Fari quæ sentiat—yes, the English—yes, very fine motto, very patriotic, very characteristic of Mr. Randolph. It is, your Excellency, 'My God and my Country!' The sentiment was thereupon passed round the Council Board as a very fine one—and "the Secretary stood alone," as he will always stand, in his translation of it.

Mr. Carrigain, about 1799, built the large house at the North end, now owned by Robert E. Pecker and Jonathan E. Lang. Tradition says that about that time he was disposed to pay his addresses to the daughter of Pres. John Wheelock, of Dartmouth College, and that his large anticipations had some influence in determining the size of the house. He was never able to finish it, and for many years elderly people spoke of it as "Carrigain's Folly." His remains were interred in the old burying-ground, and remained several years without a monument; when, by means of a subscription by friends, a handsome white marble one was erected, bearing the simple inscription:

Hon. Philip Carrigain,
Formerly Secretary of State,

Author of the Map of New-Hampshire, Died March 15, 1842,
Æt. 70.

GOV. DAVID LAWRENCE MORRIL.

Gov. Morril came to this town from Goffstown, in 1831, and remained a highly respected and useful citizen until his death, January 27, 1849, aged 76 years. He was born in Epping, N. H., June 10, 1772—son of Samuel Morril, a native of Wilmington, Mass., and son of Rev. Isaac Morril, of that place. Gov. Morril's father married Anna Lawrence, only daughter of David Lawrence, Esq., of Epping, who had two children, David L. and Samuel.

Few men in the State ever sustained more numerous, various and important offices than Gov. Morril. Having pursued preparatory studies with his grandfather, in Wilmington, and at Exeter Academy, he commenced the study of medicine, and entered into practice at Epsom, in 1793. In 1799 he experienced a great change in his religious feelings, and in 1800 studied divinity with Rev. Jesse Remington, of Candia. In 1802 he was ordained pastor of the church in Goffstown, but resigned his charge in 1811, and resumed the practice of medicine. In 1808 he was elected representative for Goffstown to the General Court, and re-elected each year till 1817. In June, 1816, he was speaker of the House; and the same session was chosen to the Senate of the United States for six years, and was a member during the excitement attending what is called the Missouri Compromise. In 1823 he was elected a member of the New-Hampshire Senate, and was president of that body. He was elected governor of New-Hampshire in 1824, by the Legislature, and the three following years chosen governor by the people. In 1825 he had 50,167 votes, out of 30,770 which were cast. Gov. Morril received the honorary degree of M. D. and A. M. from Dartmouth College, and of LL. D. from the University of Vermont. He was September 25, 1794, Gov. Morrill married for his first wife Jane Wallace, of Epsom, who died December 14, 1823, aged 53 years, leaving no child. August 3, 1824, he married for his second wife Lydia Poor, of Goffstown, by whom he had four sons, viz., David L., who died in infancy; David L., a graduate of Dartmouth College in 1847, now in the practice of law in West Brookfield, Mass.; Samuel, a physician, and William H.

During his residence in Concord, after 1831, Gov. Morrill did not engage in public life, but retained his active and industrious habits to the last. At one time he was connected with a company in publishing the Scriptures, and was two years editor of the New-Hampshire Observer. He carefully superintended the education of his sons; was strongly attached to the Calvinistic doctrines of religion, and at the time of his death was a member of the South Congregational Church in Concord. He died of paralysis, after a sickness of about eight days, expressing hope in the mercy of God, through Jesus Christ, of a blessed immortality.

Abiel Chandler is known as the distinguished benefactor of Dartmouth College, by a legacy of fifty thousand dollars, "for the establishment and support of a permanent department, or school of instruction in said College, in the practical and useful arts of life." He was also, the patron of the New-Hampshire Asylum for the Insane, in his lifetime, by the gift of a convenient carriage for the benefit of the inmates; and in his will, by a legacy amounting to about twenty-five thousand dollars.

Mr. Chandler was a son of Daniel, and grandson of Capt. John Chandler, one of the original proprietors. His mother was Sarah Merrill, daughter of Dea. John Merrill. His parents were poor. Abiel was born February 26, 1777, in a house which stood just west of Richard Bradley's, on or near the spot where Hamilton Perkins, Esq., has recently built a beautiful residence. An apple tree, within a rod of the new house—which may justly be called the "Chandler tree"—grew up in the cellar of the old house, after it was removed. Robert Bradley, Esq., of Fryeburg, says "he was well acquainted with Abiel Chandler when a boy; that Abiel was remarkable in childhood for a steady, persevering purpose; that his father, John Bradley, used to say that Abiel was the best Chandler boy he ever knew; he would hoe in a field all day, without stopping, or looking up; when a boy he acted like a man." Having observed these traits in young Chandler, John Bradley, Esq., who, with Jonathan Eastman, owned extensive tracts of land in Maine, offered to give Abiel forty acres, in the township of Stowe, near to Chatham, provided he would go there and settle. This he accepted, at about the age of twenty-one. Working on his farm in summer, Abiel went in the fall and winter to the academy in Fryeburg, then under the instruction of Paul Langdon, of Portsmouth. Here he became acquainted with two gentlemen, graduates of Dartmouth College; and hearing them converse and discuss subjects in a style superior to what he was capable of, the thought occurred, "Why may not I obtain an education and be able to converse as well as they?" Advising with his teacher, he sold his farm and commenced preparation for college, which he completed, partly at Fryeburg and partly at Exeter. On entering Harvard College John Bradley, Esq., became bondsman for the payment of his bills. Graduating in 1806, he taught the grammar school in Salem, Mass., about eleven years; spent a year afterwards in Baltimore, then became a commission merchant in Boston, in the firm of Chandler & Howard, and afterwards of Chandler, Howard & Co., where, by his industry, integrity and perseverance, he acquired wealth and distinction.

In May, 1827, he married Dorcas Sargent, a daughter of Eppes Sargent, Esq., of Boston, who died, without issue, in 1837. Retiring from active business in 1845, he located himself in Walpole, N. H., where he died, March 21, 1851, aged 74 years.

Having in his last will given numerous legacies to nephews and nieces, residing mostly in Concord and in Fryeburg, Me., and vicinity, many of whom were poor or in moderate circumstances; and making, also, generous legacies to the relations of his wife, and to particular friends, he left the residue of his estate to Dartmouth College and to the Asylum for the Insane in New-Hampshire,—amounting, as stated above, in all, to seventy-five thousand dollars.

The Scientific School which he established at Dartmouth College is now in successful operation. The gentlemen who were appointed by Mr. Chandler executors of his will, and "visitors" of the school, are John James Maxwell and Francis Brown Hayes, Esqs., of Boston, who were also Mr. Chandler's personal friends.

GOV. ISAAC HILL.

Among the men who were not natives, but for a long time citizens of Concord, few have rendered their names more conspicuous in the affairs of the town and of the State, than Isaac Hill. The following tribute to his memory appeared in the New-Hampshire Patriot the week following his death; which occurred at Washington, on the 22d of March, 1851,* of catarrhal consumption, at the age of 63 years.

Isaac Hill was born in a part of Cambridge, Mass., which is now included in the town of Somerville, on the 6th of April, 1788. His parents were poor, and his advantages for obtaining an education were exceedingly limited. In 1798, when he was ten years of age, his parents removed to Ashburnham, where they had purchased a small farm. And here he had little schooling and much hard work for four years, when, at the age of fourteen, in 1802, he was apprenticed to Joseph Cushing, Esq., now of Baltimore, who had just commenced the publication of the Amherst Cabinet. At that office he laid the foundation of his future fortune; for there he acquired those habits of industry, frugality and perseverance, to which all his success in life is attributable. He there, also, while working at the case and in the evenings after hard days' labor, acquired what little knowledge of books he possessed when he commenced business for himself. He served a seven years' apprenticeship in that office, and left it at 21 years of age, in April, 1809, with a reputation for honesty, sobriety, industry and fidelity which is better than gold to a young man. He came immediately to Concord. Six months before this, in October, 1808, Mr. William Hoit had established here a newspaper called the "American Patriot."† Prominent members of the Republican party here advised Mr. Hill to purchase that establishment and become the editor and publisher of the paper. This he did immediately, and two weeks after the expiration of his apprenticeship at Amherst, on the 18th of April, 1809, he issued the first number of the New-Hampshire Patriot.

This paper was the acknowledged organ of the Republican party, and the ablest men of that party aided and encouraged its young editor, and constantly contributed to its columns. Its circulation increased, its influence grew, and in a few short years its circulation and patronage exceeded those of any paper in the State, and the influence of the paper and its editor became immense.

Mr. Hill edited the Patriot twenty years, and during that time he was twice chosen clerk of the State Senate; was once elected a Representative from the town of Concord, and was elected to the State Senate in 1820, 1821, 1822, and 1827. In 1828 Mr. Hill was the Democratic Republican candidate for U. S. Senator, and received the votes of the members of his party; but the opposition had a majority in the Legislature, and Gov. Samuel Bell was elected. In 1829, soon after Gen. Jackson entered upon the duties of the Presidency, he appointed Mr. Hill to the office of Second Comptroller of the Treasury Department, and he entered upon the duties of that office on the 21st of March, in that year. The Patriot soon after passed into the hands of Horatio Hill & Co., Gov. Hill still retaining an interest in it, until July, of that year, when Col. Barton took the editorial charge of it.

* The article I have somewhat abridged, but retained all the facts.
† Mr. Hoit, called "Veteran Hoit," died December 28, 1854. The printers of Concord have erected a monument to his memory.
Mr. Hill held the office of Comptroller until April, 1830, and discharged its duties faithfully, ably, and to the entire satisfaction of the eminent patriot and statesman then at the head of the Government, whose confidence and friendship he enjoyed until the day of his death. His nomination was rejected by the Senate, and he then of course retired from the office. This act, though humiliating to the pride of Mr. Hill, was in fact a fortunate circumstance to him. He returned to New-Hampshire, where his popularity was unbounded; and at the next session of the Legislature was triumphantly elected to the U. S. Senate for six years; and on the 4th of March, 1831, he took his seat in that body among the men who had just sought to disgrace him by rejecting his nomination to the office of Comptroller.

Mr. Hill was an able and devoted supporter there of the administration of Gen. Jackson, and a faithful representative of his State. He remained in that body about five years; when, in 1836, having been elected to the office of Governor of New-Hampshire by the unprecedented majority of nearly 9000 votes, he resigned the post of Senator to enter upon the office of Chief Magistrate of his State. He was re-elected Governor in 1837, and again in 1838; and in June, 1839, he retired to private life, having discharged the duties of the office of Governor, as he had those of the other offices which he had held, to the eminent satisfaction of his constituents.

In 1840, upon the passage of the Independent Treasury law, Mr. Hill was appointed by President Van Buren to the office of Sub-Treasurer at Boston, which he held until March, 1841, when he was removed by the administration of Harrison and Tyler.

From that time Mr. Hill has been in private life. In 1840, in connection with his two eldest sons, he established "Hill's N. H. Patriot," which they published and edited until 1847, when that paper was united with the Patriot. He also published and edited the Farmer's Monthly Visiter, an agricultural paper, for some ten years, which was esteemed a very useful and interesting journal by those to whose interests it was devoted. During the last fifteen years he had devoted much attention to agriculture, and had been engaged in that business on a very extensive scale.

We have thus hastily and imperfectly noticed the prominent events of Gov. Hill's life. Few men in this country have exerted so great an influence over the people of their State as he has over those of New-Hampshire. He possessed great native talent, indomitable energy, industry and perseverance. As a political editor he had few equals, and his reputation in that field extended throughout the country. "In all the private and social relations of life," it is truly said by the Boston Traveller, "he was kind and amiable. As a friend and neighbor, he was highly esteemed and always ready to do a favor." As a son, a husband, a brother and a father, he has left a reputation honorable to himself, and which will cause his memory to be cherished in the grateful recollections of the numerous relatives to whom he has ever been the best of friends and protectors. Although afflicted for many years with a painful disease, exerting at times an unfa-vor able influence upon his equanimity, yet we believe "the sober second thought" of those who reflect upon his past history and services and trials, will accord with what we have said of his estimable private character and his naturally kind and amiable disposition. And now that his spirit has gone to another, and, we trust, a better world, the unkindness engendered by political and personal differences will be forgotten, the faults and errors of the dead will be forgiven, and our thoughts will rest only upon his many private virtues and eminent public services.

The last sickness of Mr. Hill was of about five weeks' duration. During the last two weeks his eldest son was with him. His remains were brought to Concord, and his funeral took place on the 27th of March, at the residence of his family.

Mr. Hill has left a wife and three sons, all of age, besides numerous collateral relatives.

MR. ABEL HUTCHINS.

Mr. Abel Hutchins, whose likeness adorns the preceding page, was extensively and favorably known as the proprietor, for many years, of the Phenix hotel. Mr. Hutchins was a son of Col. Gordon Hutchins,* born in Harvard, Mass., March 16, 1763; served an apprenticeship with Mr. Willard, brass-founder and clock-maker, in Roxbury, Mass., and married Miss Elizabeth Partridge, of that town, January 22, 1786. He then removed to Concord, where he remained till his decease, April 4, 1853. In connection with his elder brother, Levi, he carried on the business of his trade till about 1819 — furnishing the public with large clocks, of the best manufacture, and noted as good time-keepers, — of which specimens are still seen in some of the ancient families. On the 25th of November, 1818, his dwelling-house was burnt down.† On the 1st of January, 1819, he opened the Phenix hotel, which establishment he ever conducted to the entire satisfaction of its guests, scattered all along the line from Boston to Canada. In the year 1832, by reason of increasing years, he surrendered his tavern to his son, Ephraim, and retired to a private dwelling on State street, where he spent the remainder of his life in tranquility; cultivating his garden, and taking a walk, with staff in hand, and spectacles on, to the old tavern stand, for the purpose of meeting old friends and obtaining the news of the day. On the 29th of March, 1853, his wife, who had long been an invalid, died, aged 85. This bereavement had a perceptible effect on Mr. Hutchins. He attended the funeral of his wife, but on the following Monday, awaking from his usual sleep after dinner, complained of a difficulty in his throat. Temporary relief was obtained, but in the evening he became worse, and, between nine and ten, almost before any alarm was created in the minds of his children, who were at his bedside, he expired without a struggle. The burial services took place on Thursday afternoon, the day of the annual fast, and were attended in the Unitarian church by a numerous assembly. The Rev. Augustus

Woodbury, pastor of the society of which Mr. Hutchins was a member, preached an appropriate discourse from Job 5: 26: "Thou shalt come to thy grave in full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in his season."

The masonic fraternity, of which Mr. Hutchins was a member, were also in attendance, dressed in their regalia, and the front of the Phenix Hotel was draped in mourning. Mr. Hutchins was a large, portly man, about six feet in height, of fair complexion—a little florid—blue eyes, and, on account of being near sighted, always wore spectacles. Attached himself to the Whig party, his hotel became the common boarding place of the Whig members of the Legislature; but in it all men, of all parties and sects, received impartial attention and good entertainment.*

ECCLESIASTICAL.

A SUCCINCT ACCOUNT, IN THE ORDER OF THEIR RISE, OF THE SEVERAL CHURCHES AND RELIGIOUS DENOMINATIONS IN CONCORD, WITH BRIEF SKETCHES OF MINISTERS.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

This church was formed November 18, 1730, of eight members, including Rev. Timothy Walker, who was the same day ordained pastor. The history of this church, until 1825, is incorporated with that of the town, and has been given already at sufficient length in preceding pages. From its first organization till the present time it has been distinguished for harmony and steadfastness.

During the ministry of Rev. Dr. Bouton, up to the present time, there have been added to the church 662 members, of whom 197 were received on recommendation, and 465 on profession.†

In April, 1833, at the request of members residing in the West Parish, twenty-seven males and sixty-one females were dismissed and recommended, to be organized into a new Congregational church, there located. In November, 1836, sixty-seven members, viz., twenty-two males and forty-five females, were, at their request, dismissed and recommended, for the purpose of constituting a new Congregational church at the south part of Concord main village; and in March, 1842, forty-four members, living on the east side of the river—fourteen males and thirty females—requested to be dismissed and recommended, to be organized into a new Congregational church in that section, which request was also granted. These successive changes—all which took place harmoniously, and with the hearty consent of the First church—reduced its members from about 540 to 252. In 1842 a new meeting-house was built for the use of the First Congregational church and society, which was dedicated November 23, 1842, and public worship on the Sabbath commenced November 27. The house has since been enlarged. Previous to which time—October 27 and 28—a farewell service was held by the four Congregational churches in the old North meeting-house, at which the pastors of the several churches were present and took a part. About 550 communicants of the four sister churches then partook together of the Lord's Supper. It is believed that public worship on the Sabbath has never failed to be observed by this church since its first organization in 1730. No difficulty has ever existed in it which required the advice and action of an ecclesiastical council. Its pastors who have deceased are all interred in the old burying-ground, and the average ministry of the pastors, till the present time, is about twenty-nine years.*

In the First Church the following persons have officiated as deacons, viz.:

FRIENDS’ MEETING.*

“A few individuals in Concord, having become convinced of the truth as professed by Friends, a meeting for religious worship was set up by Weare Monthly Meeting the 24th of 10th month, 1805, which was to be under the care of, and subordinate to that meeting. The meeting was held for a time in the dwelling-house of Ruth Turner and Sarah Sweatt. In 1814 a lot of land was purchased where the State House now stands, and Friends at Concord, with the assistance of Weare Monthly Meeting, and a donation from William Rotch, of New-Bedford, erected a meeting-house on the same. This lot, being considered a desirable location for the State House, it was sold, and their house removed to a lot given to the Friends for that purpose by Benjamin Hannaford, at the North end. In 1840 the members of that meeting, having many of them removed to other parts, and several of them deceased, it was concluded to discontinue the meeting, and the house was sold to the inhabitants of the school district in which it stood, for a school-house.†

“Following are the names of persons who composed the meeting at different times: Ruth Turner and her daughter Lucy; Sarah Sweatt and her children, Mary E. and Benjamin; Lydia Dunlap, Sarah Arlin; Levi Hutchins, and Phebe, his wife, and children, Ruth, Anna, Harriet, Mary, Lucy, William, Ednah and Samuel; Elizabeth Yates, one of the family; Bethiah Ladd and her son, William M.; Abel Houghton and wife, Sarah, and children, Seba, Abel, Nestor, Mary, Sarah, Lydia and George; Daniel Cooleidge and wife, Ruth, and children, Phebe, George F. and William P.; James Sanborn and wife, Mary, and children, Nestor H., Sarah E. H., Marianna M., Caroline A. and Charles H.; Josiah Rogers and wife, Sarah, and children, Sarah and Dana; Israel Hoag and wife, Abigail, and children, Martha and Mary; Ruth Hazeltine and her children, William, Lucy F., John C. and Timothy; Thomas W. Thorndike and wife, Ruth G., and children, Henry, John, Wilson, Mary, Charles H., Lucy P. and Anna D.

“Several others have attended the meeting at different times who had not a permanent settlement here.”

EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

Worship according to the Liturgy of the Episcopal church was commenced in this town in 1817, at which time a few individuals “agreed, and did associate and form themselves into an Episcopal church and congregation, under the name and style of St. Thomas’ chapel.” The agreement was signed by eighteen individuals, of whom eleven were heads of families. In 1818 the Rev. Charles Burroughs was appointed rector, and occasionally officiated; occasional services were also conducted by Rev. Messrs. Andrews and Scarle, 1817, '18, '19; and in 1819 to 1823 by Rev. John L. Blake, who was appointed rector. During a part of the first year of the formation of the society, public worship was attended in the hall over the Concord Bank; subsequently, about two years in the town hall, and afterwards a chapel was fitted up over a store, called the "Green store," standing where the American House now stands.

Rev. Mr. Blake leaving here in 1823 the meetings of the society were discontinued, except occasionally, until July, 1835, when a new organization was formed and subscribed by twelve individuals, under the name and style of the "Wardens and Vestry of St. Paul's church," and the Rev. Moses B. Chase, of Hopkinton, chosen rector, who officiated here a part of the time for one year.

In 1836 the committee for Domestic Missions constituted this place a missionary station, and the Rev. P. S. Ten Broeck was invited to accept the appointment of missionary, (which he did for two years,) and to become the rector. Mr. Ten Broeck officiated here until October, 1844. In 1836 a subscription was started, to procure funds for building a church edifice, in which the late John West, Esq., took an active part. He suddenly deceased, on the 17th of October of that year, aged 48. In 1838 the effort was successfully renewed by a committee, consisting of Albe Cady, Leavitt C. Virgin and Isaac Hill, and on the 1st of January, 1840, the present church edifice was dedicated by the venerable Bishop Griswold, who, on the following day, instituted the Rev. Mr. Ten Broeck the rector of the parish. On the 6th of July, 1843, Albe Cady, Esq., for many years senior warden of the church, deceased, aged 73. Mr. Cady was one of the first movers (1817) in the effort to establish the services of the Protestant Episcopal Church in this town. In the absence of a rector he usually read the service on the Sabbath. He was highly esteemed for his integrity as a man and his usefulness as a citizen. His death was deeply deplored by the church, to which he was ardently attached.

Mr. Ten Broeck having resigned his charge in October, 1844, the Rev. Darius R. Brown succeeded him the 24th of November, of the same year. The number of communicants in the church in June, 1845, was forty-five; the number of the families in the parish, thirty, and the number of persons attending public worship, from one hundred to one hundred and fifty. Mr. Brown resigned in 1846, having accepted an invitation to Newport, R. I. He was succeeded immediately by the Rev. Thomas Leaver, who deceased, after a short illness, on the 23d of December, 1847, aged 33 years. Mr. Leaver was born in Slough, in the county of Buckingham, Eng., January 23, 1815. His parents were members of the Church of England. In early youth he became connected with the Baptist denomination, and at the age of about 20 he entered Stepney College with the view of preparing himself to labor in the missionary field. In 1837 he went to the Bahamas, to join the Baptist mission in those islands.
After laboring there about two years he came to this country, and was settled over a Baptist church in Newport, R. I., where, enjoying the confidence and affection of the people, he remained till 1846, when he felt constrained by convictions of duty to resign his charge, and, after a suitable time of study, to offer himself as a candidate for the ministry of the Episcopal church. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Henshaw, in Zion church, Newport, in August, 1846, and about three months afterward came to Concord, where he preached just one year. During the brief period of Mr. Leaver's ministry he proved himself a faithful shepherd, and his death was a deep affliction to the parish. His funeral sermon was preached by the bishop of the diocese, Rev. Carlton Chase, D. D. The ministers of the town attended as bearers. His remains were interred in the old burying-ground in Concord, and a suitable monument has been erected over them by the Baptist church in Newport, of which he was formerly pastor, and who claimed this privilege as an opportunity of testifying their unabated love of his memory. Mr. Leaver left a wife and five children, who, having the sympathies of the entire community, still continue their residence in the place.

On the 27th of February, 1848, the present rector, Rev. Newton E. Marble, D. D.,* was elected; at which time the number of communicants was forty-four, and the number of families thirty-three.

"At this present time the condition of the parish is very encouraging—free from debt, with a church edifice in excellent repair, and an increasing congregation. It may be regarded as permanently established."

Relative to Rev. Mr. Ten Broeck, whose services in the ministry of the church here closed in 1844, it will be interesting to his numerous friends to add, that Mr. Ten Broeck was born in Albany, N. Y., January 26, 1792, and was baptized in the old Dutch Reformed church by the Rev. Mr. Westilow. He was a lineal descendant, on his mother's side, of the last Dutch governor of New-York, Peter Stuyvesant, 1647. His parents removing to New-York city, he there pursued preparatory studies. He graduated at Columbia College; studied theology with the Rev. Nathaniel Bowen, D. D., and was admitted to deacon's orders June 30, 1816, in St. Anne's church, Brooklyn, N. Y. In 1817 he was rector of Trinity church, in Fishkill, and had charge also of St. Philip's church, at Philipstown, and of St. Peter's church, in Peekskill, N. Y. In 1818 he was chosen to the rectorship of St. Paul's church, in Portland, Me., in which place he married Miss Lucretia M., daughter of the Hon. Levi Cutter, of that city. Resigning his charge in 1831 he subsequently officiated at Cape Elizabeth, in Falmouth, and at Sacarappa, in the town of Westbrook, Me. His next field of ministerial labor was Concord, where he continued from 1836 to 1844. Resigning his charge on account of impaired health, he purchased a beautiful residence in Danvers, Mass., whither he removed with his family, and remained without parochial charge, but preaching occasionally, as he was able, until his death, which occurred January 21, 1849. In the funeral discourse preached by the Bishop of Massachusetts, the character of Mr. Ten Broeck was set forth in the following words: "He failed not, in dispensing the Gospel, to declare to his hearers those cardinal doctrines, of man’s fallen condition by nature; his need of the new birth by the Spirit, and the great doctrine of justification by faith in Christ. By his life, moreover, he commended what he taught."

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

There had been occasional preaching by the Methodist preachers appointed in the Pembroke circuit, from 1816 to 1822. Mr. Phil-brick Bradley, on the Mountain, was the first man who opened his door for these meetings. In 1822 a class was formed in the vicinity Meetings were mostly held in school-houses and private dwellings.
For quarterly meetings the town hall was occupied.

The first legal society was organized in 1825, and Rev. John Brodhead, a member of the Legislature from Newmarket, frequently preached here. In July, 1830, Concord became a station, and Rev.
Samuel Kelley was the first stationed preacher; at which time there were two small classes — one at Stickney Hill, and the other on the cast side of the river — both numbering less than twenty-five memers, scattered ten miles apart. Mr. Kelley also officiated as chaplain at the State Prison, and was allowed one dollar a Sabbath for his services there, — his whole compensation in town for the year being about one hundred and sixty dollars. During the year 1830 the present Methodist church, or chapel, was built. At the close of the year there were thirty-four members in church. Mr. Kelley was reappointed in 1831, but his health failing, his place was supplied by Rev. D. J. Robinson and others.

The other preachers stationed in Concord since 1831, are Rev.
John G. Dow, 1832; George Storrs, 1833—4; Samuel Hoyt, 1835;
James W. Mowry, 1836; James M. Fuller, 1837—8; William H.

Elezzer Smith,† 1844; C. C. Burr, 1845; Ebenezer Penslee, 1846—7; Charles Adams, 1848. Mr. Adams was a Professor in the Biblical Institute. Frederic A. Hewes, 1850—1; Warren F. Evans, 1852—3; Samuel Kelley, 1854—5. Stationed here again, after an Natural Philosophy in the Classical Institute at Peterborough, Va., and subsequently Principal of the same; studied Theology in the Protestant Episcopal Seminary in New-York, and

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

On the 20th of May, 1818, a number of persons residing in Concord, and belonging to different Baptist churches, met at the house of Mr. Richard Swain, in said town, for the purpose of ascertaining what degree of fellowship existed among them in the faith and order of the gospel; and also to consider what were the prospects of forming a church agreeable to the principles and practice of the apostles of our Lord. After a free and full consideration of the first object before them, the following persons gave to each other an expression of their christian fellowship, viz., James Willey, John Hoit, Sarah Bradley, Deborah Elliot, Sally Swain and Nancy Whitney.

On the 28th of the same month, the record says, "an adjourned session of the same meeting was held at the house of Mr. Nathaniel Parker, at which meeting three sisters related their Christian experience, and made a brief statement of their views of Christian doctrine, after which those present expressed to them their Christian fellowship."

The next act of that meeting was "to listen to the Christian experience of Mr. Oliver Hoit, and to agree to receive him to the fellowship of the church, when he shall have been baptized." At this meeting brethren from the church in Bow were present by invitation, to advise in reference to the constitution of a church. The brethren, having examined the subject, unanimously advised this small band of disciples to embody and organize. On the 23d of September, 1818, a council of neighboring churches was held at the house of Rev. William Taylor, and a church was constituted, of fourteen members. The public services on the occasion were attended at the "Green house." Elder Gibson preached; Elder Robinson gave the hand of fellowship, and Elder Vasey offered prayer.

The church edifice was erected in 1825, and was opened for religious worship January, 1826.† The house stands on land given by the late Col. William A. Kent, on State street, and was originally seventy feet long and fifty wide, containing seventy-two pews on the floor, and thirty in the galleries. In 1835 it was remodeled, and eight more pews added. In 1845 the house was enlarged by the addition of twenty feet to the north end; the galleries removed; modern windows inserted, and the whole inside newly finished. The house is furnished with an excellent organ, a clock, and a chandelier lighted with gas.

* Mr. Kelley was a native of Salem, N. H., born February 1, 1809. His father, Richard Kelley, was out one campaign in the Revolutionary war; his mother was a daughter of Rev Samuel Fletcher, of the Baptist denomination. Samuel was the youngest of ten children. At the age of eighteen he professed religion. After studying a while at Atkinson and Newmarket academies, in 1822, he entered the travelling ministry, and has since spent the most of his time in New-Hampshire and Vermont; having been stationed in Landaff, Sutton, Deering, Sandwich, Gilman, Newmarket, Concord, Nashua, Portsmouth, Great Falls, Dover, Manchester and Bristol, in this State, and at Athens, Newbury, Montpelier and Danville, Vt.

Rev. William Taylor was settled as pastor of the church at its constitution, and continued in that relation until January, 1820, when he was succeeded by Rev. Nathaniel W. Williams. In April, 1831, Mr. Williams requested a dismissal; and, after being destitute of a settled minister for six months, the church invited Rev. Ebenezer E. Cummings, then of Salisbury, to become their pastor, and he was settled March, 1832.

During the ministry of Rev. Mr. Taylor, a period of seven years, the church admitted to its fellowship thirty members. During the ministry of Rev. Mr. Williams, a period of five years and a half, fifty-four were added. On the settlement of Rev. Mr. Cummings the church numbered one hundred. During his ministry, a period of nearly eighteen years, the number of members added was about six hundred. The whole number of members, December 1, 1849, was two hundred and eighty-four. Rev. Mr. Cummings having received a call to enter another field of labor, resigned his charge in May, 1850, and was succeeded by Rev. Charles W. Flanders, from Beverly, Mass., who was installed January 13, 1851.

In the year 1853 a beautiful and commodious chapel was built, and dedicated with appropriate services on the evening of December 1. In 1854 the meeting-house, for the third time, was improved more extensively and at a greater expense than at any former time. A new bell has since been added, and the house, which is well represented by the accompanying cut, may be regarded as one of the best in the State. Under the ministry of the present pastor the church is in a flourishing condition, and numbers two hundred and eighty-eight.*

The first pastor, Rev. William Taylor, to whose labors and wise counsels the church must ever be greatly indebted, died in Schoolcraft, Mich., June 7, 1852, aged 68. Rev. Nathaniel West Williams was a man of singular prudence and knowledge of human nature. In younger life he had followed the sea, and was captain of a vessel. He was sound in doctrine; an instructive and impressive preacher; a faithful pastor, and an exemplary Christian. He died in Boston May 27, 1853, aged 69.

The following persons have served as deacons in this church, viz.: James Willey,† William Gault,† Charles P. Crockett,† Benjamin Damon, John A. Gault,† and Abraham Prescott.

John Wayland, then pastor of the First Baptist church in Salem, Mass. His first settlement was over the First Baptist church in Beverly, Mass., where he was pastor ten years. His second settlement was over the First Baptist church in this city.

the court room of the town hall until the completion of their meeting-house, which was dedicated on the 13th of November, 1829. Rev. Moses G. Thomas, who had for a few Sabbaths preached as a candidate, was invited to settle with the Society as their pastor. He accepted the invitation, and was ordained on the 25th of February, 1829. The services of ordination took place in the North meeting-house, which was kindly offered to the Society. A church was gathered the same day, consisting of 8 members, since which time to the present there have been added 169.

Rev. Mr. Thomas continued as pastor until the first of April, 1844, a period of fifteen years, when he was dismissed at his own request.

Rev. Mr. Tilden, now of Walpole, was engaged to supply the pulpit as pastor, whose labors extended to July, 1847—a period of three years. The Society were without a stated pastor until the 1st of August, 1849, when Rev. Augustus Woodbury was ordained, who continued as pastor for a period of three years, and was dismissed at his own request.

Rev. Artemas B. Muzzey, of Cambridge, Mass., was installed as pastor on the 29th of March, 1854, and is the present pastor of the Society.* The church edifice of the Society was destroyed by fire on the 2d of November, 1854, caused by a defect in the gas pipes which had been previously introduced. The loss to the Society by the destruction of their church and organ was not less than $10,000. Notwithstanding this severe loss, the Society, with a commendable spirit, have subscribed the sum of $11,000, and a contract has been made for the erection of a new church on the same site, the land being a gift to the Society from the late Hon. William A. Kent.

WEST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Previous to 1832 all the people in the West Parish, of the Congregational order, attended public worship at the old North meeting-house. In November, 1831, it was decided to form a new religious society, and build a meeting-house in that section of the town. The house was completed and dedicated "to Almighty God—Father, Son and Holy Ghost"—January 15, 1833. Sermon by Rev. Mr. Bouton, from Gen. 13:8. On the first Sabbath in March, the same year, the Rev. Asa P. Tenney began his labors there as a candidate. While he was preaching in that capacity a request was presented to the First church, signed by twenty-seven males and sixty-one females residing in the west part of the town, for letters of dismissal and recommendation, for the purpose of being organized into a new church, which request was granted unanimously. On the 23d of

* Rev. Mr. Muzzey was born at Lexington, Mass., Sept. 21, 1802; son of Amos Muzzey and Lydia, formerly Bontelle, of Leominster, Mass.; graduated at Harvard College, 1824, and studied at the Cambridge Theological School. Was licensed to preach July, 1828. He was ordained at Framingham, Mass., June 10, 1830; resigned in May, 1833. Was installed at Cambridgeport, Jan. 1, 1834, and resigned in May, 1846. Entered on pastoral office of "Lee Street Church," Cambridge, in July, 1846; resigned in March, 1854, and installed at Concord, March 27, 1854.
April, in the forenoon, the church was organized, composed of the aforesaid members. Rev. John M. Putnam preached, from Isaiah 40: 31. In the afternoon Rev. Mr. Tenney was installed pastor. Rev. George Punchard, of Plymouth, preached from 1 Thes. 5: 12, 13. Rev. Mr. Tenney still remains pastor of the church. His labors have been highly acceptable and useful. The church has steadily increased; but in some years there have been seasons of revival, in which large accessions have been made. From June to December, in 1833, the additions were twenty-nine; in 1834, twenty-nine; in 1835, thirty-six; in 1842, fifty-three were added. The whole number added after the organization of the church to the close of 1853, was two hundred and thirty-two — making in all, including eighty-nine at its organization, three hundred and twenty-one members.*

SOUTH CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

In 1836, the First Congregational church and society having become too numerous to be well accommodated in their house of worship, a number of individuals, residing in the southerly part of the village, procured a lot of land and erected a new house of worship at the corner of Main and Pleasant streets, about one mile south of the old house.

At the dedication of the house, which was noticed in due order, (p. 437,*) the exercises were: Invocation, by Rev. M. Kimball, Hopkinton; the Reading of Scripture, by Rev. O. G. Thatcher, Bradford; Prayer, by Rev. J. Scales; Sermon, by Rev. N. Bouton; Dedicatory Prayer, by Rev. A. Burnham; Concluding Prayer, by Rev. A. P. Tenney; Benediction, by Rev. N. Bouton.

The following original hymn, written by N. G. Upham, was sung on the occasion, to the tune of Old Hundred:

DEDICATION HYMN.

I.
To thee, O God, with joy we raise,
In these thy courts, our songs of praise,
And dedicate this shrine to thee,
Sacred, incarnate Mystery.

II.
So when thy chosen temple rose
O'er Judaea's land of fearful woes,
Thy children met in gladness there,
To consecrate thine house with prayer.

III.
And now, in Western lands afar,
Led hither by thy Bethlehem star,
God of our fathers! while we here
Erect thine altars, be thou near!

*Rev. Mr. Tenney was born in Cornish, Vt., February 4, 1801 — a son of Jonathan Tenney and Anna Bailey; studied at Haverhill Academy, and read divinity with Rev. Grant Powers, in Haverhill; was settled in Hebron and Groton, April, 1828, where he remained five years.
Here be thy power and glory known
By clouds of incense from thy throne:
And here, the broken-hearted soul,
At touch of thine, be rendered whole.

These sacred symbols often prove
To grateful hearts thy dying love;
And life’s young hours with joy begin
With sprinklings from thy crystal spring.

Here may thy banner wave abroad,
Inscribed with “Holiness to the Lord;”
And peace and love long years to come,
Make this our favored Gospel Home.

In the autumn of that year sixty-seven members of the First church—twenty-two males and forty-five females—a council of neighboring churches was convened, by their pastors and delegates, February 1, 1837, and in the evening the church was organized in due form. Rev. Rufus A. Putnam read the Scriptures and invoked the divine blessing; Rev. Abraham Burnham prayed before sermon; Rev. John M. Putnam preached; Rev. N. Bouton propounded the Articles of Faith and Covenant; Rev. Jacob Scales offered consecrating prayer; Rev. Asa P. Tenney gave the right-hand of fellowship, and Rev. Moses Kimball offered the concluding prayer.

On the 20th of February, 1837, the church gave a call to Rev. Daniel J. Noyes, then tutor in Dartmouth College, to settle with them in the ministry. The call was accepted and Rev. Mr. Noyes ordained May 3, 1837. On this occasion Rev. Mr. Bouton preached the sermon; Rev. William Patrick offered the ordaining prayer; Rev. A. Burnham gave the charge; Rev. Asa P. Tenney gave the right-hand of fellowship, and Rev. Mr. Clement, of Chester, addressed the people.

Rev. Mr. Noyes, having received the appointment of Philips Professor of Divinity in Dartmouth College, resigned his charge, and his pastoral relation was dissolved October 10, 1849.* Under his ministry the church was highly prosperous—the number of members having increased to about two hundred and twenty.

As successor to Mr. Noyes, Rev. Henry E. Parker, a native of Keene—a graduate of Dartmouth College in 1841, and of the Theological Seminary in New-York—received and accepted a call to settle.

* Rev. Daniel J. Noyes was a native of Springfield, N. H.; was born September 17, 1812; fitted for college at Pembroke Academy, and graduated at Dartmouth in 1832; taught a part of the next year in the preparatory school of Caledonia College, Washington, D. C.; commenced the study of theology at Andover in 1833; was appointed tutor in Dartmouth College in 1835. After resigning his charge at Concord he entered on the duties of professor in college November 1, 1849.
He was installed May 14, 1851, and remains still in office. The church now numbers two hundred and sixty-seven members; sustains a highly flourishing Sabbath school, and abounds in works of benevolence to spread the Gospel.*

EAST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

In the year 1841 a new house for public worship was erected on the east side of the Merrimack river, principally by members of the First Congregational church and society there residing. In March, 1842, a request was presented to the First church, signed by forty-four members residing in that part of the town, viz., fourteen males and thirty females — requesting letters of dismissal and recommendation, for the purpose of being organized into a new church, which request was granted. The East Congregational church was organized by a council of neighboring churches, on the 30th of March, 1842, and Rev. Timothy Morgan, from the Theological Seminary at Gilmanton, was engaged to supply the pulpit. Mr. Morgan continued his labors more than a year, and the church was considerably enlarged. After closing his labors, Rev. Hiram Freeman was invited to settle, and he was ordained September 27, 1843. Rev. Mr. Freeman was highly acceptable and useful, but being deeply impressed with the wants of our Western country, and of the importance of spreading the influences of the Gospel there, tendered his resignation, and was dismissed from his charge in June, 1845. On the 24th of March, 1847, Rev. Winthrop Fifield, former pastor of the Congregational church in Epsom, having accepted a call from the church and society, was installed as pastor. Mr. Fifield continued his services with good success, but under embarrassing circumstances, about three years, when the pastoral relation was dissolved, agreeably to the advice of an ecclesiastical council. In 1850 the church consisted of one hundred and six members — thirty-four males and seventy-two females. June 25, 1851, the Rev. Henry A. Kendall, who had been pastor of the church in Dublin, N. H., was installed pastor of the East church, and has continued his labors with encouraging success till the present time.†

THE UNIVERSALIST SOCIETY.‡

The Universalist society in this city was organized January 5, 1842. Its church edifice, on the corner of State and School streets, was erected the same year, at a cost of about $4000. The ministers of the society have been Rev. Ezekiel Dow, J. F. Witherell, W. H. Ryder, Thompson Barron and John Moore.

* For further particulars see Records of the First and South churches, and Rev. Mr. Bouton's twenty-fifth Anniversary Discourse.
† The Rev. Henry A. Kendall was born Aug. 6, 1810, at Leominster, Mass.; studied theology at Gilmanton Theological Seminary; ordained over the Congregational Church in Dublin in 1840.
‡ Furnished by Rev. John Moore.
A church was organized in connection with said society, December 28, 1843, numbering now about thirty members. The society and congregation now number about one hundred paying male members, which would be much increased if the house of worship was larger. Measures are about being taken by the friends of this Society to furnish themselves with the much needed room in their place of worship, and to place in it a suitable organ.*

FREE-WILL BAPTIST CHURCH.†

The Free-will Baptist church of Concord was gathered under the labors of Rev. John Kimball, in 1844. Some time in 1845 or 1846 the society built their present house of worship, on the corner of Centre and Green streets. In 1847 Rev. S. T. Catlin became pastor of this church. He was succeeded, in 1849, by Rev. E. J. Helme, who soon was suddenly removed by death. Soon after his death Rev. A. D. Smith became the pastor of this church. He resigned in 1852, and was immediately succeeded by Rev. A. CaveruO. In 1853 Rev. Hiram Whitcher, its present pastor, took the charge of this church. Since that it has been remodelled;‡ and now it numbers eighty members, with a congregation of between two and three hundred, and a Sabbath school of one hundred scholars.

The distinctive doctrines of this church are as follows:

1. Baptists—Holding that true faith in Jesus Christ, and its profession before the world, are pre-requisites to baptism, and that plunging is the Apostolic action of baptism.

2. Arminians—Believing in a general atonement; in a full and free salvation, and in man's power of volition and choice.

3. Open communion—Permitting all true Christians—and no others—to come to the Lord's table with us.

4. Trinitarians—Believing Christ to be both human and divine—the God-man; one with the Father; of the same nature, and worthy of the same honor.

5. Congregational—In government.

* Previous to the annual election in March, 1855, Rev. Mr. Moore was nominated by the Know-Nothing party as candidate for Governor of the State; but it was ascertained that he had not resided in the State long enough to be eligible to that office. On the 5th of March, about eleven o'clock in the forenoon, while walking in School street, from the railroad depot to his house on Green street, he suddenly fell, of disease of the heart, and immediately expired. He was 58 years of age on the day of his death. A new house is now being erected by the society. [Furnished by Rev. Hiram Whitcher.

Y., he there, at the age of sixteen, united with a Christian Baptist Church, and at the age of twenty commenced holding meetings, and exhorting the people to repent. Subsequently he attended Academies, but at the age of twenty-two was ordained to the work of the ministry. Previous to coming to Concord, in 1853, he spent eight years as a preacher in Rochester, N. Y.

PLEASANT STREET BAPTIST CHURCH.*

The Pleasant street Baptist church edifice was erected in 1853 by a few enterprising gentlemen of the First Baptist society of this city. It occupies a very commanding position on Pleasant street, at its junction with Green and South streets, on the west, and Elm street, on the east. The edifice is built of brick—seventy-five by fifty-one feet, with a spire one hundred and forty-seven feet in height—and cost ten thousand dollars. The interior is finished in a neat, plain manner, with nothing to dazzle the eye or draw the attention from the message of heaven. The pews are built on a circular line, so that the whole congregation face the speaker. The house was dedicated Jan. 11, 1854. On the same day the Pleasant street Baptist church was constituted, and Rev. E. E. Cummings, who, for eighteen years, had been pastor of the First Baptist church, was publicly recognized as its pastor. The church was originally formed with thirty members. It has since received to its fellowship thirty-four, and two having died, leaves its present number sixty-two. There has been gathered during the brief year of its existence a good congregation, and a flourishing Sab-

CHRISTIAN BAPTISTS.

Besides the foregoing churches there was, in 1833, and perhaps earlier, a Christian Baptist church and society, the members of which resided principally at the Borough and Horse hill.

SECOND ADVENT SOCIETY.

Since 1843 a meeting has been held in town by those who are called "Adventists," or believers in the personal and visible reign of Christ upon earth, within a definite time. This meeting originated in the excitement about that time, created by what is called "the Miller doctrine."

GENEALOGICAL.

HISTORY OF FAMILIES THAT SETTLED IN CONCORD PREVIOUS TO 1800.

In the execution of this most difficult part of his work, the author has sought, and in some measure, obtained assistance from individual members, or relatives of several of the ancient families of Concord—particularly the Abbots, Ayers, Bradleys, Carters, Chandlers, Eastmans, Elliots, Farnums, Herber.ts, Kimballs, Merrills, Potters and Walkers. Of these the genealogies may be regarded as complete for the period which they embrace. Facts concerning other families have been arranged in proper order, and a large number of the lists are copied from the town records. The latter are authentic and reliable, as far as they go; but the reader should understand that in many cases only part of a family has been put upon record, and it was not possible for the author to supply the deficiency. Should any members or connections of such families be disposed to complain they will please bear in mind that they have been urgently requested, by public notices, to furnish the author with complete lists; but he has obtained nothing from them. In short, I give them all I possess, freely and impartially.

* Ebenezer Edson Cummings, son of Dea. Joseph and Hannah Cummings, a native of Claremont, was born November 9, 1800; graduated at Waterville College, 1829, and ordained over the First Baptist church in Salisbury, September 17, 1831. In 1832 he was settled over the First Baptist church in Concord. Moved to Newark, N. J., June, 1850; moved to Springfield, Mass., November, 1850; moved to Pittsfield in April, 1852; installed as pastor of the Pleasant street Baptist church, Concord, January 11, 1854. Was married to Chloe Brown Humphrey, of Orwell, Vt., in 1831.
It has been expedient to adopt abbreviations, such as the following: b. for born, d. for died, m. for married, dau. for daughter, y. for young, ch. for children, wid. for widow, &c.
It will be seen that the more extended genealogies are prepared by their respective compilers on a different plan, each following his own taste and judgment; but the plan pursued by each can easily be understood.
In the register of the Abbot Family, which stands first in order, the several generations are numbered from George Abbot, of Andover, the common ancestor. When the seventh generation is reached the names only are given, without date of birth. The figures denote the generation as reckoned from 1—George, thus: 3—Edward, 4—Daniel, 5—Reuben, &c., means third, fourth and fifth generation from George.

The caves projected over the sides, that, if attacked by the Indians, he might fire down upon them, or pour water, if they attempted to burn it. CARTER FAMILY.

The first settler of the Carter family in Concord, was 1-EPHRAM, about 1740, the father of Dr. Ezra, Daniel, Ezekiel, Joseph, who never married, and Abigail, who married John Hoyt, p. 157. The tradition is, that Abigail Carter came from South-Hampton, with her father, when she was about eleven years old—she being the youngest of the family. She rode on horseback on a pillion, and forded all the streams. When the family left South-Hampton the neighbors expressed great sympathy for them; gathered around and wept, when they bid them farewell, to go so far into the wilderness! Reaching Sugar Ball hill, they chained the wheels of the cart containing their goods, to get them down the hill safely; transported their goods over the Merrimac in a canoe—swimming the oxen; then fastening bed-cords to the tongue of the cart, dragged that across the river. Re-loading their goods, they carted them all up to a house which stood where Dr. Samuel Morrill now lives.

Tradition further says, that on one occasion Mr. Carter went to Newbury with a load of produce, and on his way losing his goad-stick, he cut a small limb from an apple tree, which he brought home with him, and stuck it in the ground near the brook which runs along where the steam-mill now stands. There it took root, and grew to a large tree, which was standing when Dr. Morrill sold the lot.* Ephraim Carter and Ezra Carter were in the garrison round the house of Lt. Jeremiah Stickney, in 1740. [See page 155.]

CHANDLER FAMILY.

CAPT. JOHN CHANDLER AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

Capt. John Chandler, one of the original proprietors of Concord, was a son of Capt. John, of Andover, who was a man of great muscular power, and famous as a wrestler. It is related, "that being informed that Rev. Mr. Wise, of Ipswich, excelled in the art of wrestling, and had not been thrown, he made a journey on purpose to try his strength and skill. Mr. Wise, on being requested to wrestle, declined — having relinquished the practice, as unsuitable to his profession. But being earnestly solicited by Mr. Chandler, they went into a door-yard, which was fenced by a wall set in the bank, took hold, and began to play; when Mr. Wise, suddenly, with a trip and twitch, threw him over the wall upon his back. Chandler rose and requested another trial, but Mr. Wise refused. So the Captain returned home sadly disappointed." [Note. On p. 134, in notice of Capt. Chandler, it is said his father "died in 1721," and that he was grandson of Capt. Thomas Chandler. It should read 1740, and that he was great-grandson, &c.

Capt. John Chandler, who settled in Concord, is reckoned in the Chandler genealogy the fourth in descent from Capt. Thos. THE DIMOND FAMILY.

[Extracts furnished by Mrs. Sarah, wife of Capt. Samuel Knowlton.]

Ezekiel Dimond, the common ancestor of the families of that name now resident in Concord, came hither with his wife about 1750. Both were natives of South Hampton, in this State. They had ten children—seven sons and three daughters; two of whom died in infancy. All the sons except one lived to be over 70 years of age, and two were between 80 and 90.
Their second child, a daughter, lived to be 75. During the period of Indian troubles they lived in the garrison around the house of Rev. Mr. Walker. When their first daughter was eighteen months old the garrison gate fell on her, and hurt her head so badly that life was despaired of for some time; but she providentially recovered, with no other injury that the loss of the sight of her left eye. Mr. Dimond's ancestors emigrated from Devonshire, England, to this country.* He was the first settler on the farm now owned by Mr. Joseph S. Abbot, on what is called Dimond's Hill, and lived in a log house on the brow of the hill. He became an extensive land-owner, and had a proprietor's right. In their log-house the family was often alarmed by the Indians, and moved back and forth from their farm to the Fort. Once, when alarmed by the Indians, Mrs. Dimond had a web in her loom, and she took out the yarn beam and wound the reed and harness about it, carried it to the Fort and wove it out there.

Schools then were very uncommon. Their sons had a taste for learning; the parents were very good readers for the times; Mr. Dimond himself a good writer, and they taught their children so much that they were all good readers, and could write and cipher. Some of the oldest children never went to school over six weeks. Their manner of learning to write was a novel one. Winter evenings, supplying themselves with pitch-pine knots instead of lamps and candles, and with birch-bark instead of paper, they would lie down before the fire and write!

Jacob Dimond, the third son, was a self taught man. He kept school for many years. It is probable he kept the first school ever taught in what is now Dist. No. 7, in an old, uninhabited house, before a school house was built there. About the year 1792 or 1793 he went to Kennebec, in Maine; there kept school, and wrote for business men. He had something of a poetic gift, and the last time he visited his friends in Concord he composed and left an Acrostic for his mother's consolation.† She was a pious woman, but he was not a professor of religion, and their parting was always a sorrowful one.

THE ACROSTIC.

Jesus, thou mighty King on high,
And sovereign Lord of all below,
Command thy great salvation nigh;
O Lord, to me thy mercy show:
Behold, I stand in need!

Deal gently with thy servant, Lord;
In mercy, Lord, incline;
May I receive the Gospel sound—
Obey its precepts, and be found
Near to thy throne of grace.

DOW FAMILY.

1—Ebenezer Dow, the ancestor of the Dow family in Concord, was born about 1737, supposed at Newbury, Mass. According to family tradition he was a ranger in the time of the French and Indian wars, from 1757 to about 1762; was in the fight at Ticonderoga, Crown Point and Fort William Henry, and at the capture of Louisburg, in 1758. He was also at the capture of Quebec, in 1759. In his old age he used to relate the incidents of his life, to the great entertainment of his children and grand-children. He said that at the massacre at Fort William Henry he "heard the groans of the dying—praying and cursing—and the yells of savages, all mixed together." While a ranger, he was once sent with a company, in the winter, to surprise an encampment of Indians. Being short of provisions, they supposed they should find a supply when they arrived at the camp; but the Indians had fled, and left nothing but a hide, which was hanging up. This the company divided into equal parts. Dow and three others had for their share a piece as big as two hands, of which they made a soup, drank the broth, and then started to return. They were three days on the way. Attempting to cross a lake on the ice, Dow took off his snowshoes; in doing which, a gust of wind blew away his mittens, and then his hands were badly frozen. Almost starved, he reached a log house, where they were making bean-porridge, and, in his haste to satiate his hunger, he thrust his frozen hands into the pot, and they were injured and disfigured for life. Of the party, only four lived to return.

The Revolutionary war, Mr. Dow was in constant service. He stood as a minute-man at Concord, Mass., when the "red coats" came to destroy the stores there. He saw the bodies of those who were killed at Lexington, April 19, when they were laid out. He was also in the battle of Bunker Hill, and joined the expedition under Col. Arnold, when he attempted to reach Canada by what is called the Kennebec route—in which he endured almost incredible sufferings from fatigue, cold and hunger. At Quebec he was taken prisoner; but, on being exchanged, he again entered the army, and was in the battles of Bennington and Stillwater.

Mr. Dow lived in the West Parish of Concord, with his son, Moody Dow, and died November, 1817, aged 80 years.

The descendants of Ebenezer Dow, as entered on the town records, are:

good sense and sound judgment; often employed in town affairs; selectman in 1822 and 1823, and was on the committee to purchase the town farm, in 1827. Esq. Dow was a man of integrity and firm purpose; strong in his political preferences, and attached to the democratic party. His influence was always on the side of morals, good order, education and religion.
At the age of about fifty he made a public profession of religion in the First Congregational Church, but subsequently became a member of the West Congregational Church. He was greatly afflicted by the death of many of his children; but, resigned to the will of God, he cheerfully bore the trials of life and infirmities of age, and died, much respected, in the faith and hope of the gospel, Feb. 17, 1851, aged 77. His widow d. Feb.

HISTORY OF CONCORD.

EDMUND EASTMAN, a graduate, 1793, was son of Benjamin, who came to Concord, 1749, son of Joseph, who m. Tamasin Woodwell.

The descendants of ROGER EASTMAN, who came to this country from Wales, and settled in Salisbury, Mass., 1640, are widely scattered over the country.

THE ELLIOT FAMILY.

The history of this family involves the history of the settlement of the “Borough,” so called, in the north-western part of the town.

Mr. Joseph Walker, brother of James Walker, the tailor, was the first person who lived at the Borough, on what was called the “Snow Farm,” because laid out to Mr. Zerubbabel Snow. Mr. Walker lived in a log hut, within a few feet of the house where now reside Aaron and Eli Elliot. He remained there but a short time, and, for fear of the Indians, moved away. This was a few years after the massacre.

Mr. Richard Elliot went to the Borough immediately after the French and Indian wars; built the first saw-mill, on what is called the “out-let,” and boarded, while building the mill, with Mr. James Abbot, at Rattlesnake Plain, a distance of about four miles. Mr. Elliot was one of Maj. Rogers' rangers, and while upon one of his scouting expeditions in the vicinity of Penacook, accidentally discovered the out-let, a small stream branching off from the Contoocook river at the head of the falls, and uniting again about a mile below, which attracted his notice as affording valuable mill privileges. Two or three years afterwards he sold out to his brothers, Jonathan and Benjamin. This was about 1770. Mr. Jonathan Elliot lived in the mill-yard, near where now resides Jeremiah Fowler, Esq.; and Benjamin, where now lives Lieut. M. Baker. Richard Elliot was never married. He was here as early as 1760.

On the 19th of February, 1778, Mr. Joseph Elliot, husband of old Mrs. Lydia Elliot, now living, at the great age of 102 years, moved with his family into a log house, opposite to where Mr. David Elliot now lives.
MRS. ELLIOT.
Aged, 102 Yrs.
Mr. John Elliot moved the same year into a log house above Mr. Baker's. He was not related to those before mentioned, but they all came from Newtown. Here they lived, in badly constructed houses, without chimneys and without windows, enduring all the hardships, toils and poverty incident to new settlements—often eating the last morsel of bread, and not knowing where to procure the next.

Three of old Mrs. Lydia Elliot's children were born in this log house.

In several respects Mrs. Lydia Elliot, or, as now commonly called, "Aunt Lydia," whose life-like likeness is here exhibited, is the most remarkable person that ever lived in Concord. She entered on her 103d year in January, 1855. She is at this time in good health, in the enjoyment of her mental faculties and bodily senses in a remarkable degree,—her hearing only being somewhat impaired. She relates of herself, "that she never had a physician in her life, except at times of confinement with her children; never took physic, or an emetic, or had a tooth drawn, or was bled." She has always been industrious, and even laborious; spinning and weaving at home, or in families where she was wanted. In her younger life she used to go to Mr. Nathaniel Rolfe's, about a mile and a half from her home, to assist in pulling flax. Sometimes she carried an infant, and then she would lay the babe, wrapped in a blanket, under the shade of a tree, and work all day—nursing her child as it needed. Many a time has she walked from the Brough to the old North Meeting-house, on the Sabbath, to worship, carrying a babe in her arms. In the last fifty years of her life she has dressed herself every day. During the last seven or ten years she has spent a considerable portion of her time in knitting, at which she is very expert. She has a good appetite, is most of the time cheerful and uncomplaining; walks erect, and converses with ease and good sense. On the hundredth anniversary of her birth, January 30, 1858, a religious service was held at the house of her son, Mr. David Elliot, with whom the old lady resides, of which the following account subsequently appeared in the New-Hampshire Statesman.

"INTERESTING OCCURRENCE.

We gladly availed ourselves of the opportunity to be present, on Monday last, at religious services held in the dwelling of Mr. David Elliot, in the north-west part of Concord. The circumstance which suggested them was, that on the preceding day his mother, Mrs. LYDIA ELLIOT, attained the age of one hundred years. The occasion attracted to the dwelling a number of people so large as nearly to fill the lower rooms; and, as may easily be imagined, it was one of very deep interest, not only to the descendants of Mrs. Elliot, but all others who had the privilege of being present. People of all ages were there—quite a number of whom had reached the allotted period of human life, and several who numbered more than eighty years.

Prior to the commencement of religious services, several people who went up from this part of the town, were introduced to Mrs. Elliot by her grandson, with each of whom she held brief conversation. These were Mr. Richard Herbert, Mr. Abiel Walker, Francis N. Fisk, Esq., Mr. James C. Dame, (the venerable father of Mr. George Dame, of the Pavilion,) Mr. and Mrs. Bouton, Mrs. Dr. Carter, and the editor of this paper. Others, also, before and at the close of the exercises, availed themselves of the opportunity to say a few words to the venerable lady, upon whom all eyes were turned. On the morning of that day she rose in season to breakfast with the family, dressed herself without assistance, and made the bed in which she slept. She is a person of medium female height; her eye yet gives evidence that in youth she was one whose countenance was lighted by the vivacity of that organ; and, although quite deaf, she yet possesses her bodily and mental faculties in a remarkable degree. She was dressed in a very neat and becoming manner, and during the religious exercises sat immediately near the table by which stood her pastor, Rev. Mr. Tenney. She was seated in a rocking-chair, which she kept in constant motion, and intently eyed the clergymen during the exercises. Immediately back of her chair were several aged people, and in tiers in the rear of them, those of various ages down to children and youth. From this room, the doors opened into other apartments, so that all might hear.

Rev. Mr. Tenney commenced by reading the first four verses of the 71st Psalm, by Watts, 3d Part, as follows:

God of my childhood and my youth,
The guide of all my days,
I have declared thy heavenly truth,
And told thy wondrous ways.

Wilt thou forsake my hoary hairs,
And leave my fainting heart?
Who shall sustain my sinking years,
If God, my strength, depart?

Let me thy power and truth proclaim
To the surviving age,
And leave the savor of thy name
When I shall quit the stage.

The land of silence and of death
Attend my next remove;
O, may these poor remains of breath
Teach the wide world thy love!

Succeeding the reading of the above stanzas was a discourse by Rev. Mr. Tenney, founded on the 71st Psalm, 18th verse: "Now also, when I am old and grey-headed, O God, forsake me not; until I have shewed thy strength unto this generation, and thy power to every one that is to come." From this appropriate discourse, the train of remark in which may be readily conjectured, and which was listened to with the utmost attention by all, and by none more than the venerable person for whom it was particularly written, we gather the following facts:

Lydia Goodwin (now Mrs. Joseph Elliot) was born in territory once called Salisbury Newton, (now Newton, in this State,) January 30, 1753. She married Mr. Elliot in 1773, and they removed to Concord in February, 1778. She was of a family of nine children; two sons and seven daughters. One of her brothers was a soldier in the French War, and died at twenty-two years of age, and a sister died when only four years old. Of the others, Samuel died in Northfield, when more than 97 years of age; Molly died in Concord, aged 97; Sally in Candia, aged 99 years and eight months; Elizabeth lived to be 77; Hannah died at 50, and Judith is now living in Loudon, aged 96. Of the six daughters who were married, all survived their husbands, and no one married a second time. The husband of Mrs. Lydia Elliot, the subject of this notice, died about forty years ago.

She had eleven children, all of whom reached mature years, and ten were married. Four only are now living. Her grand-children number seventy; her great-grand-children one hundred, and of the fifth generation there are known to be at least eight. Her son, Mr. David Elliot, at whose dwelling these services took place, is seventy-five years of age, although his appearance indicates a person of but little over sixty. It is a long-lived family, as preceding facts make very certain.

Rev. Mr. Tenney, at the conclusion of his discourse, invited Rev. Dr. Bouton to make such remarks as would be suggested by the occasion; who proceeded accordingly to address the congregation for a few minutes, in the course of which he stated, that of the aged people who died in Concord since his settlement, it was usually the case that such as lived longest possessed to the last their mental, and usually their bodily faculties, in remarkable perfection. Of such, he named Capt. Joseph Farnum, aged 97; Mrs. Hazeltine, aged 100 years and six months; Mr. John Shute, aged 98; Mrs. Robert Ambrose, aged 98; Mr. Jeremiah Bridge, aged 93; and Polly Odlin, aged 95.

The services occupied about one hour and a quarter, at the close of which many took leave of Mrs. Elliot by a formal farewell, and the company soon dispersed, highly gratified with the opportunity of being present and looking upon the second person in Concord who reached one hundred years of age."

To the above notice it may be added, that after the meeting a pair of neatly wrought stockings were shown to the company, which were knit by Mrs. Elliot the past summer, and which were ornamented with figures called clocks. When she was ninety-one years of age she knit a pigeon net of fifty-two yards, and "lashed" the net—completing the whole in seven days.

In the following genealogy the generations are reckoned from the early settlers, as numbered:

1-Richard, never married. 1-Jonathan Elliot and his brother, 1-Benjamin, came in 1768. 2-Joseph Elliot, came in 1778. 2-John Elliot, came, probably, the same year. 2-Jonathan Elliot, Jr., or 2d, soon after.

1-JONATHAN ELLIOT, m. Naomi Swett, 1762; settled at the Borough. Their children, probably the first three born in Newtown, were:

2-JOSEPH ELLIOT, m. Lydia Goodwin; came from Newtown to the Borough, in Concord, Feb. 19, 1778; went into a log house opposite where Mr. David Elliot now lives. Their children were—

2-JOHN ELLIOT, (father of "soldier John") m. Hannah Jones; moved from Newtown to the Borough, in Concord, about 1778; lived in a log house just above where Lieut. Marshall Baker now resides. Their children were—

3–Barnard Elliot, son of 2–John, m. Elizabeth Carter, and d. Jan. 15, 1828, aged 76. Their children were—
1. Abigail, b. Sept. 5, 1778; m. 2. Ezra, b. May 20, 1781; m. Grata Welch. 3. Barnard C., b. April 1, 1784; m. Deborah Welch. 4. James, m. Eleanor Colby. 5. Betsey, m. Jonathan Sleeper.

2–Jonathan Elliot, Jr.,* m. Molly Collins. Their children were—

3–John Elliot, Jr., m. Mary Huntoon. He served several years in the Revolutionary army; was in the battle of Bunker Hill, Trenton, Princeton, and also served in the war of 1812. He lived and died Dec. 2, 1842, in a small house near Mr. Joseph Eastman's, in the West village. Their children were—

3–Moses Elliot, Jr., a Congregational preacher, son of Moses, (?) m. Judith Carter. Their children were—

3–Joseph Elliot, Jr., son of Joseph Elliot and Lydia Goodwin, m. Dorcas Farnum, dau. of Josiah. Their children were—

4–James Elliot, son of Barnard Elliot and Elizabeth Carter, m. Eleanor Colby. Their children were—

3–David Elliot, son of 2–Joseph Elliot and Lydia Goodwin, m. Mehitable Farnum, dau. of Josiah Farnum. Their children were—

*This Jonathan, Jr., could not have been the son of 1–Jonathan: because, as stated above, Jonathan, son of 1–Jonathan, was born 1773, and was not of age to marry at this time.
THE FARNUM FAMILY.

DESCENDANTS OF EPHRAIM, JOSEPH, ZEBEDIAH AND JOSIAH, WHO WERE ORIGINAL SETTLERS.

BY MR. SIMEON ABBOT.

EXPLANATION OF THE PLAN OF GENEALOGY.

The first column of figures on the left in parentheses, refers to notices of particular heads of families, and also like figures on the right of names on the right hand, refer to the same. The next column, connected by a hyphen, shows the number from the head descendant, and also the number of children in a family. The next, in Roman, shows the number of the generation from RALPH, the common ancestor. Thus: (3) 8—1. III. Ephraim Farnum, (3,) means that Ephraim Farnum of the III. generation from Ralph, is the 8th descendant from Ralph; the 1st child of II. Ephraim, and the (3d) head of a family in order; the (3) on the right hand refers to the (3) where Ephraim as a head of a family is found, and in III. Josiah, (51,) the latter figures show where in the genealogy the family of Josiah is noticed.

Ephraim Fisk.

Ephraim Fisk came from Tewksbury, Mass., A. D. 1772 or 1773, and settled in the northwesterly part of Concord, near the Hopkinton line. He married Mehitable Frost. When her son Ephraim was born she was thirteen and a half years old. She used to ask her mother to tend her baby while she went out with the children to play. A person asked her how old she was when her first child was born? She replied: "Thirteen and a half years, and what is that to you?" They had twelve children:

Mr. Fisk and his son Ephraim were soldiers in the Revolutionary war. Both were in the battle of Bennington. Ephraim, the son, when he enlisted was only sixteen years old, and rather small of his age; but he succeeded in passing muster by tying his hat-band tight around his hat, and putting his hat as high on his head as he could without having it fall off, and standing as erect as he could. When he came to the inspector, the latter said, "march on," while some of the others were rejected. In the battle of Bennington, he, with three others, were ordered by a lieutenant to carry Capt. Taylor from the field, who was wounded, (his thigh being broken.) This was a very dangerous and critical position. It was rising ground, and Capt. T. fainting every few minutes. The cannon-balls would plow furrows as large as those made by a breaking-up plow, yet a kind Providence protected them.

Ebenezer Fisk, son of Ephraim, born at Tewksbury, Mass., Jan. 26, 1766, and still living at the advanced age of 89, was one of the first settlers at Little Pond, about 1787. He purchased one of the eighty-acre lots, that belonged to the Rolfe estate, and commenced at the west end of the lot; made an opening near the road, and put up a shanty, in which he lived about three years. He then built a house; married Sarah Blanchard, b. Sept. 28, 1769; d. Nov. 11, 1848, aged 79. Their children:

1. Betsey, b. Aug. 3, 1798; m. Andrew Seavey. 2. Abria, b. March 9, 1800; m. Eunice B. Abbot, and settled on a part of the old homestead. 3. Eleanor S., b. July 12, 1801; unmarried. 4. Henry, b. Oct. 30, 1803; d. May 26, 1831; a school teacher; member of the First Congregational
Mr. Fisk possesses a large, muscular frame, which during his long life has been subjected to severe labors, toils and hardships. When a young man, about twenty-one, he worked a while for Joseph Colby, of New-London—father of Ex-Gov. Anthony Colby. Going out together in a boat on a pond, they were upset, and Fisk saved Colby's life by catching him by the hair of his head when sinking. Soon after this, in raising the New-London meeting-house, both Colby and Fisk were on the frame, when—a board being suddenly moved—Fisk fell, and Colby caught him by the hair of his head, and saved his life! At another time young Fisk was threshing grain with Thomas Morse, of Hopkinton, when Morse in sport struck the end or swingel of Mr. Fisk's flail, and drove it into his left eye. He fell, and was thought to be dead; but recovering, Dr. Philip Carrigain was sent for, who told him "that his eye was spoiled;" "and," said he, "if the eye should run out, you would give all Hopkinton to get rid of the pain." Happily the eye did not run out, but the sight of it was completely destroyed for life. Dr. Carrigain charged but two shillings for his services.

At the raising of a barn, at what is now Millville, about twenty-eight years of age, Mr. Fisk says, "I fell from the top or plate to the bottom of the cellar; and a stick of timber I was lifting, fell across my breast. My shoulder was broken, and breast so much bruised that it was thought I could not recover; but by skilful means of the doctor, and a good constitution, I recovered— but felt the effects for three or four years after." About three years since Mr. Fisk was upset in a wagon, on the road, at the top of the hill west of Richard Bradley's, and received a severe cut in the head, which for a considerable time benumbed his faculties. With no education in early life, he has ever been a good calculator and manager of his affairs, and a reliable, substantial citizen.

THE GALE FAMILY.

Daniel Gale came to Concord from Haverhill, Mass., about 1760. He married Ruth Carter, daughter of Dr. Ezra Carter. Their children were:

Daniel Gale died Aug. 16, 1800, aged 60 years. Ruth, his wife, d. April 1, 1833, aged 89 years.

Benjamin Gale.

Through the solicitations of personal friends, Mr. Gale, who is still living, at the advanced age of 86 years, has consented that his portrait should have a place in our History. With the exception of the venerable Timothy Walker, son of the late Judge, he is understood to be the oldest native born man in town. Living in retirement, in the family of his son Benjamin F., he enjoys a healthful, happy and respected old age; his eye bright; his step quick, firm and elastic; his form erect; his countenance cheerful and benignant, and his laugh as hearty as ever. He retains the manners and habits of a former generation—his bald head, his snowy locks, with a cue, neatly braided and tied with a ribbon; his staff and snuff-box, render his presence venerable and agreeable. Mr. Gale learned the trade of a blacksmith, and worked with his father in a shop that formerly stood near where the "lower Bank" building is, till he was about 26 years of age. He then opened a public house, which stood opposite the new Phenix block, on Main street, and which he kept about forty successive years. Thus Mr. Gale, like his neighbor and friend, the late Abel Hutchins, became widely known, and universally respected as a good landlord. As related on pages 322 and 323, Mr. Gale was Commissary in the "Oxford war," and several times went to Oxford, Mass., with companies of soldiers. Always fulfilling the duties of a good citizen, sustaining schools and the institutions of religion, and sharing in every effort to advance the growth of the town; he has been distinguished for good temper, and for promptness and perseverance in accomplishing what he undertook. In the fatal sickness of Dr. McFarland's second wife, in 1801, while the Doctor was absent on a mission, in the Piquckett country, Mr. Gale volunteered to go, express, to inform him. Starting at daylight, on horse-back, in the month of August, he rode to Meredith Bridge, and breakfasted; thence, having exchanged his horse, he rode to Fryeburg —eighty miles from Concord—which he reached at nine o'clock in the evening. There he found Dr. McFarland. Starting at early dawn next morning, they returned the same day as far as Sanbornton, and reached Concord the following morning at ten o'clock. Mr. Gale had a principal agency in the laying out of a new road from Horse-hill to Warner; and to his liberal exertions the people of the village, and the members of the Baptist society in particular, are indebted for the first bell, and the clock on the brick church. To purchase these Mr. Gale raised a subscription of about nine hundred dollars.

Mr. Gale relates that at the time of his marriage the parish clergyman was absent, and the marriage service was performed by Parker Varnum, Esq., uncle of his wife—a prayer being offered by Rev. Humphrey Moore, then a licentiate, who was an invited guest. His wife, who was a pattern of neatness, industry and good manners, and a true "help-meet" in the cares and labors of a public house, died April 3d, 1850, aged 74.
On occasion of the funeral discourse, preached by Rev. Dr. Bouton, April 8, 1855, on the death of Richard Herbert and Abiel Walker, Mr. Gale and the late Levi Hutchins were present, as representatives of the most aged people of the town.

DR. PETER GREEN.

Dr. Peter Green, son of Peter Green, Esq., of Lancaster, Mass., was born Oct. 1, 1745, graduated at Harvard College in 1766, commenced practice in Lancaster, where he buried his first wife, Martha Clark, who died June 8, 1770, one year after their marriage, of puerperal fever, both mother and child being buried in the same grave. He removed to Concord in 1772, where he was in extensive and successful practice more than half a century. After settling in Concord he married Ruth Ayer, of Haverhill, Mass., by whom he had thirteen children, five sons and eight daughters. Although on the stage of life when the habitual use of ardent spirit was the besetting sin, not only of the profession but of all classes of persons, he was strictly temperate. He exhibited through a long life a consistent Christian profession. He was indefatigable in his attention to his patients, the poor as well as the rich; always preferring, when possible, to administer with his own hand, his medicines, although it might cost him nights of wakefulness and toil; never declining the most menial offices for the sick, when necessary. His practice was distinguished for the great simplicity of his medicines. To this may attributed in part his great reputation as "a good doctor for children." He was always kind to the poor in regard to his charges, never exacting a fee when he had reason to think its payment would occasion the least embarrassment. He was one of the original members, if not one of the founders of the New-Hampshire Medical Society, and was elected an honorary member of the Massachusetts Medical Society. At the commencement of the Revolutionary war he was appointed surgeon of one of the regiments raised by the government of this State; but we do not learn how long he continued in service.

Dr. Green lived and died in a house, since burnt down, which stood directly opposite the new City Hall. He retained his active habits in old age. Like most physicians of his period, he rode on horse-back; and, when eighty years of age, would place one foot in the stirrup and mount from the ground into the saddle with the agility of a young man. The evening of his life was serene and peaceful. He spent much time in reading the Scriptures, with Scott's Commentary. He died March 31, 1828, in the 83d year of his age. The children of Dr. Green and Ruth Ayer were:

In 1849 he closed his business there and moved to Concord. In his last sickness, at his own residence, March 9, 1851, he professed his faith in Christ, received baptism, and was admitted a member of the First Congregational church. He died April 12, 1851, aged 75. In his last will he made a legacy of $1500 to the Congregational Church and Society in Salem, N. H., his native town; $1000 to the "Free Church" in Manchester; $1000 to the First Congregational Society in Concord; $1000 to the South Congregational Society in Concord; $1000 to the American Colonization Society, and $1000 to the Academy in Pittsfield, N. THE HERBERT FAMILY.

THE HERBERT HOUSE.*

Lieut. Richard Herbert.

Lieut. Richard Herbert came to Concord about 1752, and at first worked at his trade of shoe making. Tradition says he bought the first lot of

* This cut and that of the new North Church were engraved by Mr. B. F. Allen, of Boston, son of Mr. Ezra Allen, formerly of this town, and both were gratuitously furnished, as his contribution to this History.
land sold by the proprietors on Main street, situated where the new City Hall is located. For this land, which was apparently a sand heap, he paid ten dollars, and in 1766 built the two-story house, called the "Dearborn house," which was recently removed to what is called Fosterville—see page 514–515.

He was frequently rallied by his neighbor land-holders for his singular purchase, at such a price; but in 1854 the city paid six thousand dollars for the same land; and, as Gov. Baker remarked at the laying of the corner stone of the new City Hall, this latter price was about equal to the compound interest of ten dollars, at six per cent., for one hundred years. About 1765 Lieut. Herbert sold his house to Dea. David Hall, and built the house where his son, Capt. Samuel Herbert, now lives, and which is well represented by the annexed cut; and for a number of years carried on the manufacture of malt—page 521. In the Revolutionary war he was a Lieutenant in Capt. Ebenezer Webster's company, and was in the battle of Bennington, in Col. Stickney's regiment. After the battle he was one of a court-martial, held September 2, 1777, for the trial of two soldiers, on a charge of stealing "two horses and a quantity of other plunder." He was one of the town "Committee of Safety," in 1776 and 1777, and sustained other important offices of trust and responsibility. See List of Officers. Lieut. Herbert is remembered for his original and pithy sayings,—exhibiting shrewdness and a knowledge of human nature. One of his neighbors, owing him a sum of money, which he found it difficult to collect or to get a note for it renewed, Mr. Herbert had an interview with him before the late Charles Walker, Esq., and after urging a variety of motives in vain to induce his neighbor to pay or renew the note, suddenly taking him by the arm, he said—"Come, go with me down to the bank, and let Esq. Sparhawk weigh you in his money scales, to see if you are an honest man!" This appeal decided the matter, and the note was renewed. After the passage of a new law by Congress, 1817, making provision for poor Revolutionary soldiers, Lieut. Herbert, then about ninety years of age, and in comfortable circumstances, having been introduced to President Monroe, on his visit to Concord, the same year, wrote and published in the N. H. Patriot the following communication:

"Concord, May, 1818.

"Lieut. Herbert gives his humble and hearty thanks to the President of the United States, that in his wisdom he recommended, and with the approbation of Congress, has made ample provision for the poor who jeopardized their lives in the high places of the field in defence of the sacred rights of America. Thanks be to God that their labors were blessed, and that we were not carried into captivity before our enemies. Now to the President: Give him long life and prosperity; give him the wisdom of Solomon and the patience of Job; make him victorious, happy and glorious, long to rule over us. Save the President! Let his enemies bow and 'tremble' before him. May his name be written in a bound book, and be read by twenty generations. God save the President!"

DESCENDANTS OF RICHARD AND HANNAH HALL HERBERT.

[For the names and dates of this genealogy, I am indebted to Miss Alma J. Herbert.]

Richard Herbert, born Dec. 31, 1729; died July 17, 1823. He was the first of the name in Concord, and the youngest child of James Herbert, who came to America from London, Eng., and settled in Salisbury, Mass. He married Susanna Woodbury, of Rowley, Mass.

Richard Herbert m., Jan. 27, 1757, Hannah Hall; b. Nov. 31, 1735; d. Aug. 11, 1823, daughter of Joseph and Sarah Hall, of Bradford, Mass. Their children were—

2-JONATHAN, never married, but remained in Concord through life, and for many years kept a store in the building on Main street, next north to that now occupied by Mr. J. D. A. West. When Jonathan was five years old he received a present of a little manuscript book from his cousin John, of Newbury, Mass., written in a neat and ornamental hand, with the alphabet, and drawings of various kinds of birds and quadrupeds, a ship, meeting-house, mariner’s compass, all which seemed to be original. On the first leaf was written:

Jonathan Harbut, of Pencook, his Book, Anno Domini 1762.

On the second leaf:

John Harbut is my name,
And English is my nation;
Newbury my dwelling-place,
And Christ is my salvation.

When I am dead, and in my grave,
And all my bones are rotten,
You see, remember me—
I may not be forgotten.

January 10, 1762.

Jonathan kept this little gift till his death, Feb. 26, 1836, aged 79; then it was preserved as a sacred relic by his brother Richard, and is now carefully treasured by the daughters of the family.

2-JAMES HERBERT, settled in Rumney, N. H.; m. Nov. 12, 1784, Olyve Gage, of Merrimack, his cousin. She was born July 14, 1767; d. Oct. 26, 1835; he d. Jan. 1, 1843. Their children were—

2. Charles, M. D., b. May 15, 1789; d. at Concord, Oct. 28, 1816.

3. Hannah, d. at the age of two years.

5. Mary, b. Nov. 10, 1796; d. at Rumney, Jan. 11, 1834, unmarried.

2-RICHARD HERBERT, whose perfect likeness is here presented, was born in the first house built by his father, and attained to within one month of the same age. He died March 31, 1855, aged 93 years, 5 months and 17 days, being at the time the oldest native born person in town. Mr. Herbert is well remembered by a large portion of the inhabitants of the town. He always lived in the neighborhood where he was born; industrious, temperate, and regular in his habits; an obliging and kind neighbor; of a retentive memory, and shrewd, and often witty in his observations. For several years, from about 1808 to 1818, carried on the butchering business, and hence was commonly called "butcher Herbert." He built the Merrimack house, and kept tavern in it at different times, about fourteen years. In 1842, at the age of eighty, Mr. Herbert, who had always been a supporter of public worship and religious institutions, made a public profession of religion in the First church, and his subsequent years were spent in comparative ease and retirement. He generally rose at an early hour, in the summer and winter; overlooked his affairs, and devoted a portion of each day to reading the scriptures. His health was uniformly good. In the last two or three years of his life he was in the habit of walking once a week from his house, about half a mile, to a barber's to be shaved. In winter he used a staff, which was a present to him, about five feet long, pointed at the end, and which he held in both hands; placing it on the left side of him, it served the double purpose of holding him up and of shoving him along. His step was slow, measured and long. His venerable and singular appearance when walking in the street with his staff, always attracted attention. His last sickness was short, seeming at first to be a slight influenza; which, however, as it increased, alarmed his children, all of whom, living near, gathered around him. When he expired he lay on his bed, gently elevated by pillows, with both hands extended, like an old patriarch pronouncing a benediction. He retained his faculties to the last, and expired so easily that the moment of the change was hardly perceptible.

2-SARAH, m. John Odlin, Nov. 20, 1791—one child, Charlotte, d. Feb. 10, 1793; she d. April 9, 1794.

2-CHARLES, twin brother of Samuel, learned the trade of a hatter, and carried on the business in Concord for many years. In 1811 he made a public profession of religion in the First church, and was distinguished in subsequent life for devotion and zeal in his Master's service. With Joshua T. Russell, Joshua Abbot, William Clark, Henry Wood, and two or three others, about 1816, he commenced, in his father's house, the first prayer meeting ever held in Concord by male members of the church. The meeting has been continued, on Saturday evenings, till the present time, and has proved to be a rich means of spiritual blessings to those who have attended. Mr. Herbert was able and fervent in prayer; a diligent reader of the scriptures; very exemplary in life; free to converse on religious subjects, to distribute tracts, and to contribute for missionary and benevolent objects. He never married, but lived with his brother Samuel, esteemed and loved by all who knew him. He died of dyspepsia, Aug. 25, 1829, aged 50.

THE HUTCHINS FAMILY.

The ancestor of the Hutchins family in Concord was Col. Gordon Hutchins, son of Ephraim Hutchins, born in Exeter, this State, in 1733. At about the age of 13, Gordon accompanied his father, who commanded a company in the expedition against Louisburg, in the capacity of a waiter, but subsequently held a lieutenancy in the army. Returning from the war, he married and settled at Harvard, Mass., from which place he removed to Concord, about 1773. The part he took in the war of the Revolution, and in the affairs of the town, is recorded in the preceding history, (pp. 265—274. See Officers.) He rose to the office of Colonel. After the war Col. Hutchins returned to domestic life, and died in Concord, highly respected, Dec. 8, 1815, aged 82. Col. Hutchins married twice, and had a family of twenty children, of whom Levi and Abel settled in Concord. Ezra Hutchins lived in Concord some years, but then moved to Exeter; returned to Concord; moved to Andover, N. H., and thence to Bangor, Me.

Levi Hutchins, son of Col. Gordon, married Phebe Hannaford. Their children were:

Levi Hutchins, d. June 13, 1855, aged 93 years and 10 months. Phebe, wife of Levi Hutchins, died April 2, 1829, aged 68.

Abel Hutchins, son of Col. Gordon, married Betsey Partridge. Their children were:

Ezra Hutchins married widow Sally Currier, whose maiden name was Lamson, who had one daughter that married Nathan Stickney—first wife—the mother of Martha Stickney, wife of Mr. Edward Pendexter, of Madison, N. H. The children of Ezra Hutchins and Sally C. were: Clarissa Lamson, b. Dec. 10, 1797, in Concord; Mary Parker, b. July 10, 1799, in Exeter; Dolly, b. June 10, 1802, in Exeter; m. He was a member of the Old South church, Boston. His funeral was attended in Concord by a large concourse of people. On the ensuing Sabbath evening the Rev. Mr. Bouton preached a discourse, commemorative of his character, addressed to young people, from the words, Josh. 24: 15: "Choose you this day whom ye will serve." After the death of Mr. Kent a paper was found in his hand writing, with his signature to it, as follows:

"Convinced that God has a claim upon me, as my Creator, Preserver and Benefactor;—that my happiness in time and eternity depends on him;—that his requirements are just and reasonable, and that the present is an accepted time to secure my salvation; I do now, humbly relying on his grace to assist me, and pleading the merits of Jesus Christ the Saviour,

Resolve to devote myself to the service of God. I choose him for my portion; I choose the Lord Jesus as my Saviour; I choose the Holy Spirit as my Sanctifier and Comforter.

I resolve to break off my sins by righteousness; to renounce every pursuit and interest that is inconsistent with supreme love to God;—to make it my chief object, as long as I live, to honor my Maker, by devoting to his service my time, talents, property and influence; and by endeavoring to do all the good in my power to my fellow men.

Philip Kimball, probably a relative of David, came to this town from Bradford, Mass. His wife's name was Dorcas. The names of their children on record are—

Philip Kimball lived on the "Stevens place," where Mr. Samuel Curtis now lives. He was a famous hunter, well acquainted with the manners and habits of Indians. In the time of Indian hostilities, men appointed to bring cows from the field went armed, but sometimes were not sufficiently cautious in other respects. At one time, observing a man following the cows, with his gun supported in his arms, Kimball hid himself behind a large pine tree near the path, and as soon as the man had passed, suddenly stepped out and clasped him round the waist. Supposing it to be an Indian, the man struggled and screamed. At length Kimball let him go, saying, "When you go after the cows, start them on the way, but never follow; take a circuit, and thus you'll avoid the Indians, who are on the look out when the cows come from pasture."

Kimball was famous as a marksman, at shooting-matches. He would

On the hill westerly of Thomas D. Potter’s is a rock called the “deer rock,” on which Kimball shot a noble buck. Mr. Kimball died early in 1800, aged 88 years.

LIEUT. PHINEAS KIMBALL.

Lieut. Phineas Kimball was a cousin of Philip; came to Concord from Bradford, Mass., and settled at Appletown, east end of Turtle pond. He m. Lucy Pearl, of Boxford, Mass. He died Nov. 6, 1826, aged 80 years. Their children were:

DEA. JOHN KIMBALL.

Dea. John Kimball, son of Benjamin and Priscilla Hazen, was born at Bradford, Mass., Feb. 16, 1739. Anna Ayer, his wife, was daughter of Samuel Ayer and Ann Hazen, and was born at Haverhill, Mass., Oct. 3, 1740. They were married at Haverhill, Nov. 23, 1765. He died Dec. 31, 1817, aged 78. His wife survived him until March, 1819, when she died, aged 78. Their children, all born at Concord, were eight in number:

BENJAMIN KIMBALL.

through a long life honored that profession. The Sabbath was his delight. During thirty years of his early life he was absent but once from public worship, and that caused by a death. "Given to hospitality," preachers of the gospel were his frequent guests. He highly valued their society, and among them were his most beloved and intimate friends. Long an officer in the church, its welfare, the welfare of souls, lay near his heart.

A few months before his death he attended a meeting of the General Association, at Exeter, and while enjoying the religious services, and the delightful intercourse of Christian friends, his youth seemed "renewed like the eagle's life," but in a few days after his return, sudden illness seized him, and although partially recovering from the first attack, he walked thoughtfully as one treading the shores of eternity. Precious and full of instruction were those last days to the favored few who shared them. He departed in peace, with full trust in his Saviour, on the evening of December 31, 1817: the first death in the family, after keeping house fifty-two years.

Dr. McFarland, on the next Sabbath, preached from Revelations, 14:13:

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." In the conclusion of his discourse, Dr. McFarland said, in reference to Dea. Kimball:

"A few hours before the year closed, the elder deacon in this church finished his labors and sufferings here below. He was a member of the visible church of Christ nearly sixty years, and for almost thirty had sustained an office in this particular church. He discharged every official duty with promptness and conscientious fidelity. The Sabbath was a day of sacred rest to him, and he was careful to have it sanctified in his house. In the various relations of life he was distinguished by an uniform tenor of kindness, hospitality and piety. In society he was a peace-maker, and in all his transactions he aimed to keep a conscience void of offence both towards God and man."

Mrs. Kimball was a true help-meet to him during the fifty years of their married life. To her mother she was indebted for all her education, excepting five weeks at school to learn the art of writing. In that school she won the distinction of being one of the two best spellers. In her youth she taught school in "Haverhill town," and through life was very fond of reading. In 1769 she united with the church in Concord, under Rev. Mr. Walker, for whom she ever entertained great affection. After her husband's death her health declined, but her mind retained its strength, and seemed fast ripening for Heaven. Her last words, addressed to her minister the evening before, were: "Pray for the spread of the gospel." To that object she gave her last dollar.

The Rev. Sylvester Dana was born at Ashford, Conn., July 4, 1769, son of Anderson Dana, and a descendant of the fifth generation from Richard Dana, a French Protestant, who came to this country about 1640, and settled in Cambridge, now Brighton, Mass. In 1772 he removed with his parents to the Wyoming Valley, in Pennsylvania, where his father, in 1778, was massacred by the Indians. Returning with his mother to Connecticut, he worked at farming until sixteen years of age. In 1793 he entered Yale College, and united with the college church in his Sophomore year. After graduating, 1797, he studied divinity with Dr. Backus, of Somers, Ct. In 1799 was employed as a missionary by the Connecticut Missionary Society, in Western New-York. In May, 1801, was ordained pastor of the Congregational church in Orford, this State, where he remained twenty-one years. Preached four years in Thornton, and with his family moved to Concord in 1837. While resident in Concord he preached, as he had opportunity, in various places. Mr. Dana was an able and faithful minister, a devoted Christian, and exemplary in life. After the death of his wife he lived in more retirement, occupying a part of the house owned by Mr. Shadrach Seavey, near the new North meeting-house, where, assiduously attended by his daughter Hannah, he died in the faith and hope of the gospel, June 9, 1849, aged 80. The ministers of the town attended his funeral as bearers. The Rev. Dr. Bouton preached a discourse from the words, "The hoary head is a crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness." The children left by Rev. Sylvester and Hannah Dana were, Rev. Charles B., rector of an Episcopal Church, Alexandria, Va.; Sylvester, attorney at law, Concord; Anne K., who m. Dr. Reuel Barrows, of Fryeburg; and Hannah, who m. Rev. S. S. Tappan, and d. April 19, 1855, at Providence, R. I., but was buried in Concord, by the side of her parents. A neat monument is erected to the memory of the venerable father, in the old burying-ground in Concord.

STEPHEN KIMBALL.

Stephen Kimball, a cousin of Dea. John Kimball, came from Bradford, Mass., to Concord, about 1780. He was a shoe-maker. His shop stood near where Mr. Charles Moody now lives, at the north end of Main street. At first Mr. K. lived in a one-story house on the south side of West's brook, where Mr. John Titcomb's wheelwright shop now is. Afterwards, about 1786 or 1787, he built and lived in the house where Hon. Samuel Morrill now lives — the old one-story house being used for a school-house, subsequent to the conflagration of the school-house by the burying-ground at the North end. Soon after this, Mr. Kimball moved with his family to East-Hanover, where he bought and carried on a large farm. His house in Concord was sold to Rev. Israel Evans.

STEPHEN KIMBALL, m. Betty Wilson, of Exeter. Their children were:

WILLIAM LOW AND THE "AMHERST COLONY."

About fifty years ago, and within a short period of each other, several active and enterprising young men came from Amherst to this town. They were William Fisk, Peter Robertson, William Low, (whose portrait is here presented,) Benjamin Damon, Francis N. Fisk, Isaac Hill, and a few years later, Joseph Low. These gentlemen, associating together as they often did, were called the “Amherst Colony;” and, with a single exception, they have proved to be a permanent and valuable acquisition to the town. William Fisk, who married Margaret Dodge, settled in the West Parish village, in the house, then one story, where the Rev. Asa P. Tenney now lives, and there had a family of five children: Mary C., William P., David D., Sarah and Clarissa. He worked at his trade of shoe-making about twenty-five years, when he moved to Main street. His son, David D. Fisk, is at this time (1855,) mayor of the city of Portsmouth, Va. Mr. Fisk died October 9, 1824, aged 76.

Mr. William Low and Benjamin Damon came to Concord together, in January, 1806, and went into partnership in the chair-making and painting business. They commenced in the “Wilkins house,” which stood where the “Merchants’ Exchange” now is, where they remained one year and nine months, paying a rent of about thirty-five dollars. Next they moved to the house built by Mr. Low, on the corner of Main and School streets, and which was afterwards the residence of Mr. Low’s family. Soon after commencing business they bought a load of unpainted chairs, (about one hundred,) from Peterborough, at which the neighbors expressed great surprise, saying, “You’ll never sell so many chairs in your lifetime!” Next, they bought a building which had been occupied for a cabinet-shop by Levi Bartlett, now of Boston, and moved it from the “Fessenden place” to the rear of Mr. Low’s house, where, with some additions, it now constitutes the post-office for the city. In this building Messrs. Low and Damon carried on their business eighteen years, when they dissolved partnership.

Before he came to Concord Mr. Low married Grace G. Nichols, of Amherst, June 9, 1803, who survives him, having no children. In January, 1811, Mr. Damon married Sophia X., a sister of Mrs. Low, and built him a house on the corner opposite Mr. Low’s house. For his house-lot, containing one hundred square rods of land, he paid four hundred dollars. Mr. Damon relates, that when Mr. Low moved his goods from Amherst to Concord he had a team of three horses, on the forward one of which Joseph Low rode postillion, for which service he received twenty cents, one third of which, I have the best authority for saying, was spent the same day for candy. Thus, in his boyhood, the future mayor made his first triumphal entrance into the city!

Entrusting business affairs chiefly to the untiring industry and honesty of his partner, Mr. Low in a few years became deeply interested in national and State politics, warmly espousing the Democratic cause, in conjunction with his neighbor and friend, Isaac Hill, whom he had pursued to come to Concord as a printer and editor. Under Gen. Jackson’s administration, (1829,) Mr. Low was appointed postmaster in place of his brother, Gen. Joseph Low, which office he held about ten years. In town meetings he was a ready, pithy and smart debater — always brief and to the point — sometimes with a spice of wit, and sometimes of “grit.” In his latter years he was afflicted with nervous complaints that impaired his health and happiness; but he never lost his interest either in the prosperity of the town or in political affairs. A friend remarked of him—"He was always an ardent man, but never was there a more honest man in the cause of his country."

Mr. Low died on Sabbath evening, May 9, 1847. On the same day the particulars of the victory of Gen. Scott at Cerro Gordo, April 17, reached town, and Mr. Low was rejoicing in the success and glory of the American arms. Hon. Isaac Hill, who visited him in the afternoon of that day, said, "The countenance of joy lightened up the last day of the patriot. We left him almost in a hallucination on this theme." Retiring to his room after nine o'clock, he complained that he could not rest, and returned to his chair, in which, in less than one hour, he breathed his last. A numerous attendance at his funeral evinced the high respect in which he was generally held by his fellow citizens.

Respecting the other "Amherst" gentlemen whose names stand in this connection, it may be proper to add that Mr. Damon still lives on the spot where he first built—an efficient member of the First Bap. church and society—has had three children, viz.: 1. Mary Ann, who married William W. Estabrook, and lives in San Francisco, Cal.; 2. George N., who m. Caroline Nichols, and died Nov. 8, 1849; 3. Charles B., m. Harriet W. Jennison, of Worcester, Ms., and lives in Boston. Hon. Francis N. Fisk, for many years a successful trader at the North end, married into the "Walker family," which see. Gen. Joseph Low married into the "Abbot family," which see. Isaac Hill's biography is written. Capt. Peter Robertson and his wife, Sally Hazeltine, when first married were accounted "the handsomest couple in Concord." Capt. Robertson is a failure.

THE POTTER FAMILY.
[Chiefsy by Hon. C. E. Potter.]

Ephraim and Richard, brothers, with their sister Elizabeth, came to Concord from Ipswich about 1771. Ephraim and Richard bought land together on the northerly side of Turtle pond, and afterwards divided it "equally, as to quality and quantity." The ancestors of Ephraim and Richard were among the early settlers of New England. Their father, Daniel, born January, 1698, married Elizabeth Kimball, of Wenham, Mass., November 29, 1728. He was son of Anthony, who was son of Anthony, who settled in Ipswich, 1648; son of Robert, of Lynn, 1630, who came to this country from the city of Coventry, in England. Ephraim and Richard had brothers Daniel and Anthony, and sisters Martha and Elizabeth, and others who died young.

When he took possession of his farm, in 1771, it had upon it a log house and a hovel, "which had been built by Mr. John Hoyt, who first pitched upon the lot," but afterwards moved to the north side of Oak Hill. Mr. Potter moved his family the ensuing spring. "His property at this time consisted of one hundred and thirty dollars in cash, which he paid towards his farm; a horse, a three years old heifer, a bed, and some few cooking utensils. With these, his wife and child upon horse-back, his goods upon a barrow, attached to the horse; himself driving the heifer, he started for Concord—then the land of promise. They performed the journey in two days, stopping over night in 'Chester Woods,' near Massabesic pond, at 'old Mother Underhill's,' who kept a well-known tavern upon the 'Penacook path.' Arrived upon their farm, they went to work with a will. Of robust make, strong constitution, and industrious habits, their new home soon exhibited evidences of thrift." In the Revolution, Mr. P. served six weeks on Winter hill, under Gen. Sullivan. His name and his brother Ephraim's are on the Association Test, 1776. In the winter of 1782 his leg was "smashed," as related pp. 283-4, recovering from which he enjoyed uninterrupted health through a period of about fifty years. He died July 5, 1828, aged 84 years. EPHRAIM POTTER AND DESCENDANTS.

Ephraim Potter, an elder brother of Richard, was a sailor, but when not at sea worked at various kinds of mechanical business. He made excellent wooden clocks, and some of the first clocks used in Concord were of his make. He built and raised the four square steeple and the spire of the old North Meeting-house, and the cupola and vane of the old Town House, (see pp. 286 and 306.) Ephraim was a man of good property for that day, but he brought into the country that besetting sin of the sailor—love of strong drink; and, although a man of superior intelligence, yet in a few years he became involved, and at his death left his family in indigent circumstances. His farm, which adjoined his brother Richard's on the north, was bought by the latter at public auction. Ephraim m. Sarah Cory, in 1777. Their children—

3—NATHANIEL ROLFE, d. Nov. 15, 1829, aged 86.

Benjamin Sweat, the father of Mrs. Molly Rolfe, came to this town from Kingston—a weaver by trade—and settled in the Borough, about 1780. When he was a boy the method of cooking potatoes was to set them before the fire, as we sometimes do apples, to roast.

Many anecdotes are told of 3—Benjamin Rolfe, some of which have already been related, pp. 236, 306. He owned land in common with his brother Nathaniel, and they lived together as bachelors for a number of years. Occasionally, when Benjamin came to Main street, he would be rallied by his friends about his bachelor state, and asked "how he and his brother got along?" "Very well," he replied; "only we have but one pair of trowsers between us." "Well, how do you manage with one pair?" "Why, we agree that the one who gets up first shall wear them through the day." Mr. Rolfe was one of the early settlers of Rumford, in Maine, where, in common with others, he endured great privations and hardships. Attempting to cross the Androscoggin river one night with his horse in a ferry-boat—his head being somewhat flighty—he was carried down stream about a mile, where were rapids, and a first fall of fifteen feet, and a second fall of ninety-four feet. Just at the head of the first fall was a large rock, standing out of the water, against which the boat struck, and he stepped out on the rock. The horse was thrown out, and went over the first falls. Early next morning Rolfe was discovered in his perilous position by Jacob Abbot. The neighbors were rallied, and came to his rescue. Fastening two ropes to a small skiff, they set it out into the middle of the river, and let it go over the rapids so as to strike the rock where Rolfe was—designing then to draw him ashore in the boat; but as the boat struck the rock it rebounded, so that Rolfe had barely time to seize one of the ropes and cut it off with his knife, while the boat was whirled along and dashed into pieces. But the rope which he had in his hand, being held at the other end by his neighbors, he fastened tight round his body, and by this means they drew him over the foaming rapids up the stream, about five rods, and he landed in safety! The horse was soon after discovered standing in the water near a ledgy bank, too steep to ascend. A single bruise only was found on him. He was safely rescued.

John Shute.

Anna, wife of John Shute, d. June 12, 1812, aged 70. Mr. Shute, whose early adventures and perils were mentioned pp. 196—199, settled on the homestead of his father, and became a steady, industrious and useful citizen. At the age of about seventy he united with the church under Dr. McFarland, and maintained a consistent Christian life. Constant at meeting on the Sabbath, he usually sat in the “old men’s seat;” and when upwards of ninety years of age he would be seen tripping along, with the agility of a young man—commonly passing others on foot, on their return from meeting. He spent the last years of his life in the family of his son Isaac, at the lower end of Main street. He retained his faculties and physical powers till the close of life, and died in February, 1829, at the age of 96, or perhaps, as stated on his grave-stone, at 98.

THE STICKNEY FAMILY.

We regret that no one has furnished a complete genealogy of the Stickney Family in Concord. What follows has been collected from the town records and other sources, as the author has had opportunity.

Lieut. Jeremiah Stickney, who was the first of the family name in Concord, came from Bradford, Ms., a young man, about 1731. See pp. 140, 549.
Col. Thomas Stickney, his son, who succeeded in the family mansion, was a useful and distinguished citizen—a patriot of the Revolution, and was with Gen. Stark in the battle of Bennington, see pp. 274—276, and through life sustained many important offices in town. See List of Officers.

Thomas Stickney, jr., succeeded Col. Thomas on the old homestead, and his widow, Mrs. Mary Ann, now in her eighty-fourth year, still survives—occupying the house with her son, Joseph P. Stickney. The land on which the range of stores stands, on Main street, south of the family mansion, as far as the Eagle Hotel, and back to the river, formerly belonged to the Stickney farm. The interval land, easterly of the house and north of the Free Bridge road, still belong to it.

Descendants of Rev. Timothy Walker.

by joseph B. Walker, esq.

[Note. The following genealogy, divided into generations, commences with that of Deacon Samuel Walker. The Roman numbers mark the generations, and the Arabic, in parentheses, attached to the Roman, the paragraphs devoted to different families. The figures in the first left hand column of Arabic numbers mark the number of descendants, including Dea. S. W., and those of the second column, separated from the first by a hyphen, the number of the children of the family, in the order of the ages, to which they are attached.]

The first Anglo-American ancestor of the family has not and perhaps cannot be determined with certainty, but from a note addressed by Dr. Farmer to Charles Walker, Esq., it would seem that he was either John Walker, the first of the name among the freemen of Massachusetts, who was admitted a freeman April 4, 1634; or Augustine Walker, who was admitted in 1641, both of whom settled in Charlestown, Mass. Between these and Deacon Samuel Walker, the father of Rev. Timothy Walker, a chasm of several generations intervenes, which cannot be supplied with much assurance of accuracy. In conflict with this supposition, however, a manuscript record of the family, in the hand writing of Charles Walker, now in the possession of the compiler of this genealogy, states that Deacon Samuel Walker was himself the first Anglo-American ancestor, and that he, with a brother, came to this country from the west of England, and settled in Woburn, Mass. With his name the following record commences.

PROFESSIONAL HISTORY.

LAWYERS.

Names of Lawyers who have practised in Concord, arranged in the order of their graduation or of entering the profession, with brief notices, more particularly of those who have deceased.

Note.—The author regrets that the limits of this History do not admit of his giving—as he has the means of doing—more full notices of professional men; but the names of most of those who have been any considerable time residents in Concord are found already in the body of this work. Their actual connection with the history of Concord may be seen by reference to their names in the Index, in the List of Officers, and in many cases in the record of families.

I. Peter Green, son of Nathaniel Green, born in Worcester, Mass., 1746; opened an office in Concord, 1767. He was chosen State Councillor in 1788 and 1789. See pp. 272-3, and "Officers." He died March 27, 1798, aged 52.

II. Edward St. Loé Livermore, son of Hon. Samuel Livermore, born in Londonderry, 1761, entered upon his profession in Concord, 1783; Solicitor for Rockingham County, 1791-3; Judge in the Superior Court of Judicature, 1797-1799; then resided at Portsmouth. He was also Member of Congress from Massachusetts. His first wife was Mehetabel, daughter of Robert Harris, of Concord; his second wife a Miss Stackpole, of Boston, by whom he had children. He was the father of the celebrated Harriet Livermore, born in Concord, April 14, 1788. He died at Tewksbury, Mass., Sept. 15, 1832, aged 71.

III. Thomas W. Thompson, son of Dea. Thomas Thompson, of Boston, born March 10, 1766; graduated at H. U. 1786; was tutor in College, 1789; Aid to Gen. Lincoln at the time of "Shays' Rebellion;" commenced the practice of law at Salisbury, 1791; Representative from that town in the State Legislature; chosen Representative to Congress 1805-1807. In 1810, Treasurer of the State, when he moved to Concord. Speaker of the House in the State Legislature, 1813 and 1814; Senator in Congress, 1814-1817; elected Trustee of Dartmouth College in 1801, which office he held till his death. Mr. Thompson was an accomplished gentleman, distinguished for the dignity and urbanity of his manners, for integrity and piety. See pp. 283, 306. He lived in the house now owned by Mr. Charles H. Stearns, and kept an apothecary store, with other things. Being suspicious that his sons who tended the store did not always make a full return of money received, but without sufficient proof to charge either of them with dishonesty, he called them before him one morning and said, "Boys, in passing Horse-shoe pond last night, I heard voices! saying, "Who is the rogue? who is the rogue?" One said, "Philip! Philip!" Another said, "O-ba-di-ah! O-ba-di-ah!" In his practice Dr. Carrigain rode horseback. He was very polite, and when he met any one, even a child, would pull off his hat, and waving it in his hand, make a low bow.

MISCELLANEOUS MATTERS:

SOME OF WHICH ARE REFERRED TO IN NOTES IN THE PRECEDING HISTORY.

PRINTING. (See p. 310.)

In 1835 the late Jonathan Farmer, Esq., wrote an article, giving the history of printing in this town,—particularly of newspapers,—which was read at a Printers' Festival in commemoration of Franklin's birth-day, Jan. 17, 1835, and afterwards published in the N. H. Patriot, Jan. 26, 1835: to which those who wish to investigate the subject are referred. In continuation of that history, the following statements are here added.

New-Hampshire Statesman and State Journal. George W. Ela, editor and publisher, disposed of his interest in this paper to Jacob H. Ela and A. C. Blodgett, in 1842; in July, 1844, it went into possession of George O. Odlin, John C. Wilson and John P. Osgood, in whose hands it continued with some changes of an unimportant nature, up to July, 1851, when the establishment was purchased by Asa McFarland and Geo. E. Jenks, who are now the proprietors.

New-Hampshire Observer. Since 1835 this paper has passed through many changes; as to editors and owners. Rev. David Kimball was a while connected with Edmund S. Chadwick, in publishing it, under the title of "Christian Panophy;" Mr. Kimball next became sole proprietor, and a connection was formed in 1840, with the Rev. Henry Wood as editor, and the name was changed to "Congregational Journal." The connection between Mr. Kimball and Mr.
Wood closed in 1842, and the paper was wholly conducted by Rev. Henry Wood. In 1846 Mr. Wood's interest in the paper was transferred to B. W.
Sanborn, as publisher; the former retaining a connection as editor, and continued thus till Jan. 1, 1854, when the Rev. Benjamin P. Stone* became editor.

A paper advocating the principles of temperance has been published for a considerable time, but under so many names and so many editors that to trace its history is impracticable. Other papers have had "their day," and passed away.

The "Balm of Gilead and Practical Universalist" was published at Concord, Nashua and Manchester, in 1842, and continued a few years.

In April, 1842, Messrs. Tracy and Colby, of Concord, commenced the publication of the "Iris and Literary Repository," a monthly periodical; discontinued.

A semi-weekly paper, edited by George Kent, Esq., was started in Concord, in May, 1842.

The "Baptist Register" was published in Concord for several years, commencing about 1833.

The Independent Democrat was first published at Manchester, May 1, 1845, by Robert C. Wetmore; moved to Concord in about nine weeks, and shortly after, G. G. Fogg, Esq., then of Gilmanton, commenced contributing to its editorial columns, and soon became sole editor. In July, 1847, the proprietorship of the Democrat was disposed of by Mr. Wetmore to J. E. Hood and G. G. Fogg, and united with the "Granite Freeman," a liberty party paper, previously published by Mr. Hood, and under the title of "Independent Democrat and Freeman," published by them until Feb. 1, 1849; then Mr. Hood disposed of his interest in it to G. G. Fogg and A. H. Wiggin. In 1854 the former became sole proprietor.

The Semi-weekly State Capital Reporter was commenced by Col. Cyrus Barton, Jan. 1, 1852. In May, 1853, Amos Hadley, Esq., was associated with him under the firm of "Barton & Hadley." They commenced the weekly State Capital Reporter, July 1, 1853. In August, the same year, the Reporter became united with the "Old Guard," a journal commenced by Hon. Edmund Burke.
In Nov., 1853, the name of the Reporter was changed to the "Reporter and Old Guard," conducted by the same editors, with Mr. Burke a contributor, and so conducted until Feb. 17, 1855; when, Col. Barton having died, his interest was vested in his widow, and the name of the firm was changed to "Hadley & Barton." The semi-weekly Reporter was discontinued in August, 1854.

At the present time, printing, not only of newspapers, but books of every description, is one of the most extensive branches of mechanical business in Concord.

"ELECTION DAY."

The great day in Concord, of all the year, was Election day. This occurred on Thursday, of the first week in June, when the new Governor was usually inducted into office. Preparations for the occasion commenced in May, when they were swept, white-washed and garnished; wood piled, and chips raked up; door-yards cleaned; fences repaired; barns put in order; provisions laid in, and

*Rev. Benjamin P. Stone, D. D., has resided in Concord since 1837. He was born in Reading, VI, Feb. 11, 1801, son of David Stone, a native of Groton, Mass., whose mother was Martha Lawrence, a descendant of John Lawrence, of Watertown, Mass., 1635. Mr.
S. graduated at Middlebury College, 1839; studied theology at Andover; ordained the first pastor of the church in Franklin, N. H., May, 1831, where he remained one year; installed pastor at Campton, 1832; appointed Secretary of the N. H. Missionary Society, 1837, and moved to Concord.
all things else put in readiness for "lection." From Monday to Wednesday, members of the Legislature, ministers of the gospel—all sorts of public men—would be seen "coming into town," some on horseback, some in wagons and carriages; some in stages—but all would be on hand by Wednesday. Almost every family on Main street in old times took boarders. The ministers of the "standing order," as they were then called, who were always provided for, met in Convention on that day, and had a sermon preached at the Old North Meeting-house in the afternoon or evening. On Thursday, the "people" came from all adjacent and remote sections of the State—men, boys and negroes—equally eager to participate in the festivities of the occasion. Booths, tents, or stands well furnished with all kinds of eatables, and especially drinkables, were erected along on both sides of Main street, from the vicinity of the meeting-house to the middle of Main street. On the forenoon of Thursday was the great procession, composed of a cavalcade and of military companies, by which the Governor was escorted into town, amid a cloud of dust and the thunder of a six-pounder! Next followed in procession all the honorable State authorities, ministers of the gospel, public men of all ranks, titles and pretensions, with a large numerous side procession of the "people," including women and boys. Previous to 1819 this procession marched with martial music from the old town hall, and afterwards from the State House to the old meeting-house to hear the Election Sermon. The sermon was preached by a person previously appointed either by the Governor and Council or by the Legislature. On this August occasion the old meeting-house was crowded to its utmost capacity—the honorables having seats in the pews below, and the people in the gallery. To prevent any accident from over-crowding the old oak edifice, the galleries were shored up with substantial timbers! The appointment to preach the Election Sermon was considered complimentary to the talents and standing or to the politics of the minister, and of course it was not uncommon for him on such occasions to do his best—speaking "to the times"—and often echoing the voice of the people, as well as the voice of God! Some of the election sermons were fine specimens of pulpit oratory, and are remembered by aged people to this day.

At the earliest period the sermon was followed by a public dinner, which, however, was discontinued in later times. Gov. John Langdon, John T. Gilman and Samuel Bell, are remembered as among the most dignified Governors of former years. Gov. Gilman is remembered by many as wearing a cocked up hat, with a large cockade. For his body guard he had a negro servant by the name of "London." This London, having been a soldier in the Revolution, always appeared on election days, dressed in his regimentals, with a cocked hat, and bore the name of "Gineral." All the negroes in the vicinity, especially such as had served in the war, would rally, and march under command of "Gineral London," to pay their salutes to the Governor; and, what was better, to receive from him a treat!

Previous to 1816, and even later, the head or center of the great gatherings on election day was at the north end. There was the meeting-house, and the post-office, and the great Washington tavern! But after the State House was built, the attraction was stronger that way; so that, gradually, as the people drew down into that vicinity, the distance to the old meeting-house seemed much longer; and finally the old customs of processions, sermons, booths and exhibitions on election day ceased. Though the name is kept up, the thing itself has passed away. "Sic transit gloria mundi!"*

*An amusing reminiscence of "Electation Day" was published in 1842, in a paper called the "Locomotive," edited by Geo. Kent, Esq. It was attributed to Hon. Edward Kent, of Maine. The article was reprinted in Hill's N. H. Patriot, June 9, 1842.
CONCORD LITERARY INSTITUTION AND TEACHERS' SEMINARY.

THE FIRST, AND THUS FAR THE LAST OF THE KIND EVER BUILT IN CONCORD.

In 1835 a building was erected on the hill directly west of Union street, on land given by Samuel A. Kimball, Esq., for the purpose of a High School or Academy. The building was 58 feet long, 54 wide, two stories in height, with a cupola; entrance, two doors in front, one for males and the other for females. The apartments were separated on the lower floor by a partition with sliding doors. In the upper story were rooms for a library, apparatus and recitations, with a spacious hall for exhibitions. The cost of the building, which was paid for by subscriptions, was about $3500, exclusive of apparatus and library, which were estimated at $200. A Board of Trustees was chosen, of which Rev. N. Boulton was President, Rev. E. E. Cummings, Secretary, and Dea. William Gault, Treasurer. An act of incorporation was obtained, and a public school opened in the building in the fall of 1835, under the instruction of Mr. T. D. P. Stone, as principal; Miss Elizabeth Fuller, preceptress, and Miss Rowena Coffin and Miss Mary K. Coffin, assistants. Mr. Stone resigned in August, 1837, but the school was continued under successive teachers until 1844, when, on account of pecuniary embarrassments, the building was sold at public auction for $540. It was afterwards bought by Hon. Isaac Hill, moved away, and constructed into three dwelling-houses, at the lower end of Main street. [For further particulars, see Records of the Institution, in N. H. Historical Society's Library, and document on file, marked "Concord Literary Institution," &c.]

BOATING COMPANY. (See p. 371.)

The navigation of the Merrimack by boats to this place was consummated mainly by the enterprise and energy of John L. Sullivan, Esq., a gentleman highly esteemed in this section, who was many years superintendent of the Middlesex Canal, in Massachusetts, and also of the locks and canals on the Merrimack. Most of them were built under his supervision. He early conceived the idea of navigating the Merrimack by steamboats, and with this view, having obtained a charter from the Legislature giving him the exclusive right, he commenced about 1814, building boats at Charlestown, Mass., and, after trying various models and numerous experiments on machinery, he so far succeeded as to get a boat propelled by steam to reach here in 1819. It was his purpose to tow the loaded boats by this steamboat, but it was found on trial that she had barely sufficient power to pass herself up the rapids, without any incumbrance, and the project was finally abandoned.

A charter was granted by the Legislature of New-Hampshire in 1812, incorporating John L. Sullivan and his associates, by the name and style of the "Merrimack Boating Company."

The first boat up the river arrived at Concord in the autumn of 1814. The locks on the river not being completed, she brought but a small cargo, consisting of general merchandise.
MISCELLANEOUS MATTERS.

In June, 1815, the locks on the river, and the warehouse near Concord bridge being in order, the boats commenced running regularly.

The rates of freight between Boston and Concord were as follows: viz.,

1815 to 1819. Upward, $12; downward, $8 per ton of 2240 pounds.
1819 to 1822. " 10 " 7 " " "
1822 to 1824. " 8 " 6 " " "
1824 to 1830. " 7 " 5 " " "
1830 to 1836. " 5 " 4 " " 2000 "
1836 to 1837. " 6 " 4 " " "
1837 to 1841. " 5 " 4 " " "
1841 to 1842 — 1st class. " 5 " 4 " " "
1841 to 1842 — 2d class. " 4 " 4 " " "

The mode of propelling the boats up the river was by means of setting-poles.

In going downward they used oars, but when the wind was fair, sails were used, both in ascending and descending.

The company suffered severe losses occasionally by the upsetting or swamping of boats. In one instance a boat, by imprudently attempting to run over Goffe’s falls, was capsized, and one of the men drowned. This was the only instance of any one being drowned from the boats. It was customary in high water to use oxen to tow the boats over some of the rapids. At the head of Amoskeag falls was one of these rapids. A boat, with a full cargo of miscellaneous goods, having ascended the locks, the team was made fast to her to tow her over the rapid; by some misunderstanding the team was started before the men on board had got the boat in the proper position. This gave her such a “shear” out into the current that the whole force of it came against her broadside, and it was impossible for the men to “round her to” in season to save her, and it was found that she must go over the falls “in spite of fate,” and for a time it seemed that the men and team must all go with her, but fortunately the men, by leaping overboard, made shift to reach the shore in safety, and by dexterously cutting the rope just as they were being drawn into the river, the oxen were saved. The boat went over the falls, and was, of course, dashed in many pieces. A portion of the cargo was picked up below, very much damaged. This happened in 1840, and caused a loss to the company of about $2500.

The company was under the general management and control of John L. Sullivan, Esq., from its commencement up to 1822, when his interest in it ceased.

The business of the Boston Landing was under the care of the late David Dodge, Esq., from its commencement to 1823; from that time to its close Mr. Reuben B. Sherburnes had charge of it; at Concord, the late Samuel Butters had charge up to 1819; from then to its close Theodore French was in charge.

The number of boats employed during spring and autumn was about twenty; in summer, a less number; capacity of boats, twenty tons — manned by three men. The greatest amount of freight charged in any one season was in 1839 — $38,169. The average from the commencement to the close of the business was about $25,000 per season.

In addition to their freighting for others, the company brought up and sold large quantities of salt, lime and plaster on their own account.

In 1823 the corporate name of the company was, by act of the Legislature, changed to the “Boston and Concord Boating Company.” They continued to do a prosperous business until superseded by the Concord Railroad, in the fall of 1842.

FREE BRIDGES. (See p. 469.)

The first free bridge ever built over any part of Merrimack river, it is believed was built in Concord, in 1839. In this undertaking persons residing in the Main village, and near the center of Main street, took an especial interest. The first meeting for consultation on the subject was called by Mr. John Gass, and was held at the American house, in the fall of 1838; Hon. Isaac Hill was chairman; a committee was then appointed to obtain subscriptions for the purpose, in Concord, and in towns eastward, and $4380 were subscribed. At a subsequent meeting, Nathan Call and John Gass, of Concord; Bailey Parker, of Pembroke, and Cyrus Tucker, of London, were appointed a building committee. It was built of wooden piers, where the free bridge now stands; a road opened across the interval on both sides of the river, and through the gulley, eastward; and road commissioners then laid out the road, assessing one half the cost upon the town. In January, 1841, the bridge was carried off by a great freshet, but rebuilt as soon as practicable, at a cost of about $3000. Still, it was materially injured again and again by freshets; when, in 1842, a powerful opposition was raised against it by inhabitants in other sections of the town. At a meeting, April 11, 1842, it was voted, "that, in the opinion of the legal voters of the town of Concord, the free bridge over Merrimack river is, in its conception, location and construction, impolitic, unequal and oppressive, and ought not to be continued at the expense of the town." The question of sustaining it was also carried into court, at a considerable cost to the parties.* In 1850 a board of selectmen was chosen, who were in favor of a free bridge, and who were instructed to proceed to rebuild it in a substantial manner. This was accordingly done in the course of the year.

At the present time, 1855, the "Concord Bridge," which was built in 1793, is the only toll bridge in the bounds of the city.

COL. BENJAMIN GROVER'S HOUSE.†

Col. Grover's house, an elegant view of which he has furnished, by particular request, for this History, is the latest and best specimen of architecture to be seen in the city. It stands on Pleasant street, near the new Baptist church, on a lot 80 by 175 feet, which cost, in 1850, $900. The house was built in 1854—G. M. Harding, then of Concord, architect; Colby and Dow, of Concord, builders. The sketch was drawn by Mr. Nathan Brown, of this city, and engraved by Kilburn & Mallory, of Boston. The cost of the house without the land was about $7,500. A view of this elegant structure, with other beautiful houses in its vicinity; also, others on "Kent's," or "Holt's Hill," some towards the south end of Main street, and the northerly part of State street, together with the substantial dwelling of Hon. Francis N. Fisk, at the "north end," may give us a just idea of the progress made since the log-house period, not only in architecture, but in the comforts of domestic and social life.‡

CARRIAGE MANUFACTURE.

Mr. Lewis Downing, in answer to a request from the author, says: "I commenced business in Concord, May, 1813, nearly opposite the Merrimack County Bank. When I began, my whole capital consisted of my tools and about $60 in cash, in all, $150. The first year I worked entirely alone. At that time every part of the work was done by hand labor; no power machinery. In the fall of 1816 I moved my shop to the south end of the street. After the first year I employed from three to six hands, for ten or twelve years; after that, I enlarged my shop, and started all the different branches connected with carriage business, such as blacksmith, painting and trimming, &c., and commenced building chaise and coaches, &c., and employed from thirty to forty hands up to 1847. At that time I built new shops in the center of the street, and took my two sons into the business with me. Since 1847 have employed from forty to seventy hands; now seventy hands, and could sell the work of twice that number, but my practice has ever been to do no more business than I could see to, personally."

HISTORY OF CONCORD.

In reply to inquiries of Messrs. J. S. & E. A. Abbot, who are also engaged in the manufacture of carriages of various kinds, they say: "In 1854 we sent carriages into every State, Territory and Province in North America, (except Delaware;) also, Mexico and South America. We employed averaging one hundred and ninety men; delivered six hundred and twenty-five carriages, and used three hundred thousand feet of lumber, two hundred and fifty tons Cumberland coal, six thousand five hundred bushels charcoal. We cannot now name the exact amount of iron, but about two hundred and fifty tons."

CONTEST BETWEEN THE "NORTH" AND THE "SOUTH-ENDERS" ABOUT AN OLD GUN!

[COMMUNICATED BY MR. CHARLES K. WEST, OF CONCORD.]

At the close of the war of 1812-15 there were two small cannon in Concord—one belonging to the south and the other to the north end—and to manage them, two companies were formed: that at the north end commanded by a son of Mr. Bradley's, and that at the south by Col. William Kent. About 1817 a sham fight occurred between them, on the Court House hill, in which both companies became greatly excited, and began to load with gravel, when the town authorities interfered. From that time an enmity continued between the boys of the north and south ends, until both guns were out of the way. "The fate of the south gun," says Mr. West, "I never knew." "About the year 1818, on the 4th of July, the south-enders took the north-enders' gun from them, after a hard conflict. Before winter the gun was recaptured, dismounted and kept till the spring of 1819, when the south-enders again took the gun, while it was firing one evening on the hill back of the Court House, and hid it in Major Chandler's jewelry shop. The north-enders keeping themselves well drilled and armed with suitable cudgels, with spikes in the end, appointed a committee to prepare tools and break into Major Chandler's shop in the night and get the gun, while a sufficient number should stand by to carry off the prize. After commencing operations, however, they desisted through fear that they might be taken up for stealing; but the Major soon after ejected the gun from his shop. It was then placed by the south-enders in the loft of the Phenix stable, chained to a beam, fastened with a padlock, and guarded by a faithful dog. Before a month passed away the dog was bribed, the gun taken, and let down through the attic window on to the dung heap, where it struck hard, but noiseless; thence it was triumphantly borne off upon a wheel-barrow, and fired once that night at the north end! It was never fired but a few times after that, and but once at a time. I kept the gun in my possession till 1826, occasionally changing its hiding-place. When at home to leave town, as I could get no one to take charge of it, and the excitement was still kept up, finally, rather than the gun should go into the hands of the south-enders, (with the help of only one of the faithful to assist me,) I took the gun to Horse Shoe pond and sunk it, where I have every reason to believe it still remains—a north ender!"

INDIAN REMAINS—REMARKABLE DISCOVERY.

Just as this chapter of our History was going to press, an interesting discovery was made of Indian remains. The third week in November inst., (1855,) Mr. Cyrus W. Paige, in digging a cellar for a new dwelling-house west of Richard Bradley's, and on land recently sold by him, came to human bones, which, from their position and quantity, greatly excited his attention. Before removing them he called on Dr. William Prescott, who, after carefully examining them, expresses the opinion that without doubt they are the remains of Indians long since interred there. Dr. Prescott says, in a communication which I have the honor to acknowledge: "The whole number found thus far is nine, and all were comprised within a space of about ten by fifteen feet. Three of them were adults — one male, of a very large size, and two females; the others were children and youth. Considering the time that must have elapsed since they were interred, the bones were in a tolerable state of preservation. Two of the craniae were nearly perfect — that of the adult male and one of the adult females. They were each enshrouded in a thick envelope, consisting of several thicknesses of pitch pine bark — the only exception being what appeared to be a female between two infants, all being enclosed in one general envelope. The skeletons all lay upon the right side, in a direction north and south, the face looking east; the lower limbs somewhat flexed upon the trunk, the knees flexed at about right angles, and the elbows completely flexed, the head resting upon the right hand.

I have the honor to be,

Very respectfully,

Your friend,

Wm. Prescott."

No. 1, pp. 150, 191. From this document, which is placed on file at length, it appears that Capt. Eastman's company marched from "Stephenstown," which was also called "Bakerstown"—now called Franklin—about the last of July, 1755. On the 16th of August they were at Deerfield, Mass. "Then our company took allowance of bread, meat and rum; part of our bread we took at Northfield, 2 days before, but we took no pease." On the 24th of August they were at Albany. "This day we took allowance of bread, meat, and Aug. 25th we took allowance of pease; all which allowance we took for 8 days, and our rum we took every day." On the 6th of Sept. they were at Fort Lyman; and on the 8th of Sept. at Lake Sacrament. "We fought with the enemy, and Timothy Eastman was wounded." Sept. 13, "we took 1/2 pint of molasses each." Sept. 19. "From the 30th of Aug. until now, we took no rum, except \frac{1}{2} a gill each at a time, when 16 of us came from 'ye Lake, from fighting, to Fort Lyman, and \frac{1}{2} a gill each at 'ye Lake, twice; and a gill each, since; and 18 of us received a pint each, in order to go to scouting; and Sept. 18, ten of our men went to scouting, and received a pint each and 20 ounces of ginger at once; and no flour since Sept. 6, nor molasses, nor no sugar since we came from Albany. Sept. 18 and 19, we rec'd a gill and a half of rum, in all, each, and a quart of molasses for 'ye sick in our company."  Ae. Regni Regis Georgii Magnae Britanniae, Franciae, Hiberniae, Quinto.*

An Act setting off a part of the town of Bow, together with some lands adjoining thereto, with the inhabitants thereon, and making them a Parish; investing them with such privileges and immunities as towns in this Province have and do enjoy.

Whereas, there are sundry arrearages of taxes now due, which the inhabitants aforesaid apprehend they cannot levy for want of sufficient authority, and several of them praying they might be erected into a town or parish, and enjoy the common privileges of other towns in this Province:

Be it enacted, Therefore, by the Governor, Council and Assembly, that the inhabitants who are settled on the lands hereafter described, viz.: Beginning at the mouth of Contoocook river, (so called,) which is the southeast corner of Boscawen, from thence running south, seventy-three degrees west, by said Boscawen, four miles; from thence running south, seventeen degrees east, seven miles and one hundred rods; from thence running north, seventy-three degrees east, about four miles, to Merrimack river; then crossing the said river, and still continuing the same course to Soucook river; then beginning again at the mouth of Contoocook river aforesaid; from thence running north, seventy-three degrees east, six hundred and six rods from the easterly bank of Merrimack river, or till it shall come to the south-east line of Canterbury; from thence south-east, on said line, two miles and eighty rods; from thence down the said river, till it comes to where the line from Merrimack river strikes Sou-cook river.

And that the polls and estates within the aforesaid boundary be, and hereby are, set off and made a parish by the name of Concord, and invested and enfranchised with all the powers, privileges and authorities which any town in this Province doth by law enjoy, excepting that when any of the inhabitants of the aforesaid parish shall have occasion to lay out any road through any of the lands that are already laid out and divided by the said town of Bow, that applica-cation shall be for the same to Court of General Quarter Sessions of the Peace for the said Province, as in other cases.

And that the said inhabitants of said parish are hereby subjected to the same duties, pains and penalties the law subjects the inhabitants of other towns in this Province.

And that their first meeting for the choice of town officers be held on the third Tuesday of August next, which officers shall stand and continue till the next March following; which meeting shall be notified by Samuel Emerson, Esq., who is hereby directed to post the same, together with the time, place and occasion thereof, in some public place in said parish, fifteen days beforehand, who shall also govern said meeting until a moderator shall be chosen by the major part of such inhabitants as the law directs in such cases; and that their annual meeting for the future for the choice of town officers be held on the first Tuesdays [of March] annually.

And that the officers that shall be chosen in virtue of this act are hereby invested with the same powers which other like officers have in other towns in this Province, and under the same duties and penalties of other like officers.

And whereas the Province tax for the year 1763, which arose and should have been paid by the said town of Bow, as their proportion thereof, amounting to eighty pounds ten shillings sterling, and ninety-six pounds twelve shillings new tenor; and for the year 1764, the sum of ninety-six pounds two shillings new tenor:

Be it therefore enacted, That the selectmen that shall be chosen in consequence of this act the day the first meeting shall be held for the choice of town officers, as aforesaid, together with John Noyes and Edward Russell, Esqrs., or the major part of them, shall assess the polls and estates of the inhabitants living within the aforesaid limits, as also the other inhabitants within the remaining part of Bow, (exclusive of such as are already set off to Pembroke and New-Hopkinton,) with the said tax that arose and became due in said year 1763, together with the current charges that shall arise on said Bow for the year 1765, and order the same to be paid into the treasury of said Province by the 25th day of December, 1765; and the selectmen that shall be chosen in said parish for the year 1766, together with the said John Noyes and Edward Russell, or the major part of them, as aforesaid, shall assess all the inhabitants that shall be within the said boundaries and the aforesaid town of Bow, excepting as aforesaid, with the sum of ninety pounds twelve shillings, new tenor, together with the current charges of the year 1766, and order the same to be paid by the 25th day of December, 1766; and that the selectmen that shall be chosen annually for this parish, together with the aforesaid John Noyes and Edward Russell, as aforessaid, shall annually assess the inhabitants aforesaid with the current charges of the government that shall be due from the said town of Bow, as their part of the Province tax, until a new proportion of the same shall be made.

And be it further enacted, that the constable or collectors who shall have any of the said taxes to collect, shall have full power and authority to levy and collect the same, as though all the persons mentioned in the respective lists were within the aforesaid parish.

And be it further enacted, that no person or persons who shall move into the said town of Bow, on any new lands that are not improved, nor the polls that shall come into said Bow after the date of this act, shall be liable to pay any part of the arrearages that arose in the year 1763 and 1764, but are hereby declared to be exempt therefrom.

And be it further enacted, that in case of death or removal of either of the foresaid John Noyes or the said Edward Russell, that their place shall be supplied by the proprietors of the town of Bow, upon having notice thereof; but if in case the proprietors of said Bow shall not supply such vacancy within one month after notice is given to one of the agents of the proprietors of said Bow, that then the selectmen of said parish shall make the necessary taxes for the Province themselves: Provided, that private property be no ways affected by this act.

No. 4, p. 241. "It was said by some at the time, that one object the selectmen of Concord had in view in consenting to this change, was, to get rid of supporting a certain bridge, that crossed the Merrimack considerably below where the present bridge is. But some few years after, the Court, on petition for that purpose, straightened the road, and located the bridge further up the river, in Concord, on condition that each of the two towns should build and forever support one half of it. Boscawen consented to the condition, and called a special town meeting, at which they chose an agent, and authorized him to bind the town to build and support one half of the bridge. This they did for several years, but finding that they could not be legally compelled to support a bridge out of town, refused to do it. Concord prosecuted Boscawen, but failed of their object, and now the support of the whole bridge devolves on Concord."

The documents referred to, page 547, containing a catalogue of quadrupeds, birds, reptiles and fishes, scientifically arranged by Dr. William Prescott, of Concord; and page 550, a catalogue of forest trees and shrubs, by the same gentleman, I am compelled to place on file, except that containing a catalogue of fishes. They are a valuable contribution to the department of Natural History, and with regret they are omitted.

* In June, 1819, Nath'l Parker sailed from Salem, in the privateer sloop Polly, and was taken prisoner and carried into Halifax. He was released by exchange.
The following is Dr. Prescott's catalogue and statement respecting fishes:

Rev. N. BOUTON, — DEAR SIR:

The following catalogue comprises all the fishes that inhabit the waters in this vicinity, so far as they have come to my knowledge. Two of these, the Lake, or Winnipissaukee Trout, and the White Fish, are confined to the Winnipissaukee; all the others traverse our streams and smaller ponds.

There exist in these waters four new species of fishes, which I described and read before the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and which was published in Silliman's Journal for May, 1851.

These new species I described under the names of Salmo Symmetrics, the Winnipissaukee Trout, the Coregonus Non-Audite, the Shad Waiter, the Coregonus Neo-Hantoniensis, the White Fish, and the Lota Brosiiant, a fish that has been generally, but erroneously, called the Cusk. The Cusk is a marine fish; is much shorter in proportion to the weight, and has but one fin on its back, while the Lota has two dorsal fins.

The foregoing is interesting as showing the amount of rates assessed on the property of individuals named, for the salary of Rev. Mr. Walker, in the year ending May, 1756. It is also important as exhibiting the value of the "old tenor" currency compared with the "new tenor" or lawful money. The rate is made in the "old tenor" currency. The "old tenor" was the currency which consisted in "bills of credit" issued by the Legislature of the Provinces, having the nominal value of silver money at a given rate per ounce. These "bills of credit" were liable to depreciation; but Mr. Walker's salary was "to be paid in the medium of trade for the time being in the Province, at silver, 17s. per ounce." The real value, however, of an ounce of silver was one English crown, or 6s. and 8d. The late John Farmer, Esq., therefore, reckoned £100 as equivalent in 1730 to $130.37. The "old tenor" currency had been in use for many years; but the "bills of credit" had so depreciated that it became important to establish a new currency, or to reckon silver at a different rate per ounce. This change was made in Connecticut, in 1740, and about the same time in Massachusetts and New-Hampshire. The new tenor was called "lawful money," because it was by law made a "lawful" tender for paying debts. In 1750 "a correct table" was published in Boston, "to bring old tenor into lawful money at the rate of dollars, at six shillings per piece, from one penny to twenty shillings, old tenor."† According to this table, Whoever, then, is curious to make the east, will find that the rate for Rev. Mr. Walker's salary reckoned as it was in "oll tenor," which was long kept up, even after the currency was changed, was not very heavy on the inhabitants of Rumford. For example, James and Amos Abbot's rate was £13 10s. "old tenor," which, reduced to "new tenor," was 36s., or $6.00. Lieut. Nathaniel Abbot's rate was £6 old tenor, equal to 16s., or $2.67. Dea. Ephraim Farnum's rate was £15 10s., equal to £2 1s. 4d. new tenor, or $6.87 1/2, which was the highest rate on the list.

HISTORY OF CONCORD.

SCHOOLS AND SCHOOL-MASTERS
IN DISTRICTS Nos. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 18.

[REMINISCENCES OF NATHAN K. AND GEORGE ABBOT, ESQ.]

Previous to 1800, and before the town was divided into School Districts, there was only one school-house in the West Parish, which stood near the house of Dea. Ira Rowell. Another school-house was built about 1802, near "Dam brook," between Mr. Jerry and Reuben Abbot's.

NAMES OF SCHOOL-MASTERS, NATIVES OF CONCORD, EMPLOYED IN WHAT IS NOW CALLED DISTRICT NO. 3, SINCE 1785.

In District No. 18: Joseph Haseltine, Nathan K. Abbot, Henry E. Rogers, Israel E. Carter.

The following, not natives, but residents of Concord, have taught in the aforementioned Districts, viz.: John Jarvis, Nos. 3, 4, 5, 6; Joseph C. West, Nos. 7 and 8; John C. Brown, No. 7; Josiah Stevens, jun., Nos. 8 and 18; Arthur Fletcher, Nos. 3, 7 and 8; William H. Smart, No. 3.

The following are entitled to the honorable distinction of "veteran schoolmasters" in Concord:

Dea. Ira Rowell commenced teaching in the winter of 1816, and continued to teach every year, with one exception, till 1832—keeping, in that time, twenty-one schools.

Mr. John Jarvis commenced teaching in the winter of 1819, and taught every winter, except two, up to 1854—keeping, during that time, forty schools. Mr. Jarvis excelled in penmanship, in which his pupils made good proficiency.

Dea. James Moulton commenced in December, 1820, and with the exception of three years, continued until 1846—keeping, in that time, twenty-five years.

Mr. Nathan K. Abbot commenced teaching in the fall of 1823, and closed his last school in February, 1846—a period of twenty-five years.

Until about 1814 there is no record of military appointments in the office of the adjutant general of any reliance. It appears Pearl Kimball was appointed a captain of cavalry in 1804, and Joseph Walker in 1809, but the regular record commences and ends as follows:

ADJUTANTS, WITH THE RANK OF CAPTAIN—ELEVENTH REGIMENT.

Rufus Wilkins, July 4, 1831. | Seth E. Brown, Sept. 12, 1845.

When Canterbury and London constituted a part of the eleventh regiment, there were ten or twelve companies of infantry, but after the division of the regiment there were but eight companies. Before the division the following were among the captains, but whether Lovejoy and Rowell were of Concord, I know not.

Of those who thus died in ten years of consumption, there were in the month of January, 8, viz.: 4 males, 4 females.

February, 11, " 5 " 6 "
March, 11, " 3 " 8 "
April, 6, " 4 " 2 "
May, 7, " 4 " 3 "
June, 11, " 8 " 3 "

NOTE. From the above tables it appears that about one sixth of the whole who died in ten years in Concord, died of consumption; the greatest number between the ages of twenty and thirty. The greatest number in any month is in August; and a less number in the fall than in the spring and summer months.

These tables and estimates are results of the author's personal observation and inquiry, not made with medical knowledge or skill.

THE "DARK DAY," FRIDAY, MAY 19, 1780.

BY GEORGE ABBOT, ESQ.

The circumstances and appearances which marked this memorable day, as near as can be recollected by using the language of the old people who witnessed them, were as follows:

The morning exhibited nothing remarkable, except a thick, smoky atmosphere, and a pale glimmering of the eastern sky. About eight or nine o'clock smoke and clouds obscured the sun. The heavens assumed a brassy appearance, something like that of the moon when she is totally eclipsed. About ten or eleven o'clock a gloomy and melancholy darkness involved all terrestrial objects. The domestic fowls and the birds and beasts repaired to the retreats of night; consternation and horror seized the minds of mortals—they expecting that the final dissolution of all things was near. About noon the darkness was so great that it was necessary to light candles in the houses. The darkness and brassy color of the sky continued with little alteration during the remainder of the day, and the night was as remarkably dark as the day.

1794, May 18. Great Frost. In some places the rye and flax were killed. The apples were as large as ounce balls, and were all killed in the West Parish, except two apples which Mr. Joseph Hoyt raised on his farm on Horse-hill!

1806, June 16. Solar Eclipse of the Sun. The shadow of the leaves resembled the moon in the first and last quarters. The domestic fowls went to their retreats of night.

1815, Sept. 23. A Remarkable High Wind in the New-England States. The wind was south-east, and was attended with rain. Buildings were unroofed and blown down, and also trees, and in some places acres of trees in the woods were blown down. Vessels were driven upon the coast, and much damage done thereby.
